An American lieutenant witnessed one of these vengeances upon Judas this year and now he is sorry he did. He is stationed down in the eastern end of the island in command of a post pocket garrison. One day he was sitting in his quarters when he heard a distant roar like the voice of a great multitude in anger. It came closer and closer and soon he could distinguish fearful and angry oaths, though as yet words were fearfully enraged. Rushing to a window he looked out and saw a great crowd of men and women swirling through the plaza. They were dragging an unfortunate creature by a rope, which was tied around his neck. As they neared the barracks the object of their wrath along members of the mob jumped upon the prostrate figure with hideous screams of rage, waving their arms with all the fury of madness.

The lieutenant was in a second what was happening. The Cubans had found some unfortunate Spanish exguerrilla and they were lynching him. Not an instant was to be lost. The lieutenant seized his pistol and rushed down the stairs, yelling, yelling in his most terrific tones for the crowd to stand back. All the while he was discharging his revolver to give weight to his commands. With great precipitancy the men stood apart to permit the lieutenant to pass. What he was to do he wondered, as he dashed down upon his knees beside the bedraggled figure, his fingers clutching at the rope about the choking neck. With an oath the lieutenant stood up. The victim was poor old Judas Iscariot, dead more than 1,800 years.

"The d—d fools!" was his one exclamation of disgust as he turned back to his quarters with a very red face, while the guffaws of the Cubans followed. It required the best part of the rest of that day and the good old haters of the world's archtraitor wound up their day by burning the effigy in the most approved manner.—N. Y. Sun.

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPHY.

It Has Been a Great Success in Great Britain During the Past Thirty Years.

Since the British government, in the year 1870, assumed control of all telegraphic business, the telegraph department of the general post office has grown to enormous proportions. The object of assuming this control was twofold: First, to reduce the exorbitant telegraph tolls of private companies, which were so high as virtually to be prohibitive for many kinds of business; and, secondly, to safeguard the public against any return to former charges. It matters not what the may think as to the desirability of the introduction of such a system into the United States, the fact is patent that in Great Britain it has proved a signal success. The twofold object was long since attained, and there is no likelihood that the system will be abandoned.

The report of the post office department for 1899 gives the latest available figures. This report shows that the people so far appreciate and value the system as to have used in 1899, up to the date of the closing of the report, in ordinary telegrams, cable messages, government, franked, and reduced-rate dispatches, over 3,000,000 messages more than during 1898. In the year before the government assumption, 7,000,000 messages were sent; in 1899, nearly 90,000,000 messages. In 1869 the average charge for telegrams was a little over 50 cents, while the charge for the same message to-day, inclusive of address, is about 15 cents. In 1869 there were under 300 employes, while there are at present over 2,500 in the London office alone. Last year, after allowing for a deficit of at least a million pounds in the telegraph service, voted to the daily newspapers, the system cleared above all cost of maintenance over £165,000; in round numbers, $850,000.—W. S. Harwood, in Century.

He Was Investigating.

The ancient lady clerk, whose term of departmental service dates back with the era of the Hyksos kings of Egypt, but with the beginning of the regime of the lamented Gen. Spinner, had just stooped behind her desk several times one afternoon to whet her nose with a chamois skin powder-rag in preparatory to a one-minute-to-four department — when the new male stenographer who was audibly checking off an account for one of the auditors sang out:

"Flour—two hundred-weight."

"Insulting creature," muttered the ancient lady clerk, hastily restoring the powder rag to its receptacle, and then all of the subdued ancient male clerks in the room enjoyed in a way that was real rude, to say the least.—Washington Post.

BRIDE PAID PARSON, NOW SUED FOR DIVORCE

Henry Cook of Scotch Plains, Tells a Queer Tale of Woe About His Marital Life.

WIFE WON'T LIVE WITH HIM.

HIS WIFE PARTED FROM HIM IMMEDIATELY AFTER CEREMONY.

They Were Ten Years Ago, and Now the Pastors Husband Wants to be Relieved of the Nuptial Pledges That He Has Taken.

To win a wager ten years ago, Miss Lizzie Englehart, of Brooklyn, proposed to Henry Cook, of Scotch Plains, took him to the preacher's, married him, and paid the dominie for the job. Now she is being sued for divorce. Cook is fifty-five years old, and a wealthy quarryman.

Ten years ago, according to his declaration, Miss Englehart, with whom he was acquainted, invited him on New Year's Day to see her. He went to her home, and, alleges, she made him drink. When he had done so, she invited him to go shopping with her. They went out, and, finally, stopping in front of the residence of Rev. Mr. Loch, she said: "Now, Henry, let's be a preacher's house, and we are going in to get married."

Henry protested, but he was so full of joy—and New Year's wine—that he could not resist. So he went in, was married, Lizzie paid the preacher, and they departed.

"We walked back to her home," he says, "and when we got to the gate she said: 'Now, Henry, we are married, you go back home and attend to your business as usual, and I'll attend to mine. Good-bye,' and she shut the gate between us and went in the house." No amount of pleading, entreaties or threats could induce her to allow him to accompany her, so he went home with a heavy heart.

From time to time he called to see her, but she would not be seen. Then he would write and beg her to come and live with him, but she treated him with contumely, contempt and other inexpensive things, and replied in a crushing manner.

It was more than two years after the fatal wedding that Cook saw his wife again, by chance. She ventured no explanation. Her parents teased her, saying Cook will never marry her. They taunted her so, she said, that she finally made a bet with her parents that they would be married.

After this brief colloquy eight years more rolled by, and Mrs. Cook still refused to have anything to do with her self-sought husband, so he sued for divorce on the grounds of desertion.

The case was referred to Senator Joseph Cross, of Elizabeth, as special master in chancery, to take testimony. He has dragged along all winter until now, and Mr. Cross has filed his report, recommending that Mr. Cook be granted a decree of absolute divorce. Mrs. Cook put in no defense.

Mr. Cook was 45 years old and his wife was 20 years his junior when they were married. Cook lives on a farm at the corner of Westfield and Coles avenues.

DANCED COTILLION.

Members of Cotillion Club Entertained Last Friday at Home of J. B. Dumont.

The last important social event of Easter week was the gathering of the Cotillion Club at the residence of Councilman J. B. Dumont, of East Seventh street, last Friday. Like the other meetings of that club the affair was a decided success. There were twenty-five couples who participated in the cotillion led by Thomas VanBoskerck. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion.

Arrived After His Business.

A party of Plainfielders journeyed a surprise party Wednesday to John Wright, of Westfield, in honor of the celebration of the anniversary of his nineteenth birthday. When the party reached the home of Mr. Wright they learned he had retired for the night. It was only a matter of a short time when they aroused him and he willingly presented himself. The evening was passed in dancing and supper was served at a late hour.

Granted a Non-Suit.

The suit of the Richmond Stove Company against J. C. McCarthy and R. D. Barrett for a promissory note for $130.64 came up Saturday morning before Justice Moffett. Through the inability of the plaintiff, through their counsel, Codington & Bergenheimer, to prove a case, Justice Moffett grant ed a non-suit for the defendants who were represented by W. K. May Ask for License Money Back.

It is now understood that Farmer Simonson will apply to the courts to have the money he handed which he paid for the license to open a saloon on the Somerset street bridge. No doubt the courts would be pleased to refund the money, and if this is done, it is assumed fact that no saloon will be opened on the bridge under the present Judge. This would settle the trouble for some time to come.

SERIOUS SPLIT WAS AVERTED BY KEAN.

So the Republican State Convention Finally Had a Harmonious Ending.

AT TRENTON THURSDAY.

HUDSON COUNTY INSISTED ON VOTING FOR SENATOR KEAN.

A Stampede Seemed Imminent, but the Senator Stopped It by an Emphatic Statement—Some Old Trouble in Union County at Bottom of It.

There was every prospect of a bitter controversy at the Republican State convention, held at Taylor's Opera House, Thursday afternoon, but United States Senator John Kean stepped into the breech and positively declined to be one of the "Big Four" to represent New Jersey at the National convention at Philadelphia next June. That act promised harmony at the convention. But Col. Dickinson and his friends from Hudson county wouldn't harmonize and it was only the very emphatic statement of Senator Kean, made on the floor of the convention, that finally succeeded in preventing a renewal of hostilities and gave the convention a harmonious ending.

It was that same factional strife now apparent in Elizabeth in the Fowler-Bergen controversy, that was at the bottom of it all. Some months ago the slate for the "Big Four" was made out with Senators Sewell and Kean, Franklin Murphy, chairman of the State committee, and Harkness Summers, Jr., of Trenton as the four delegates at large. It is said that Senator Kean promised Gummere a place on the delegation.

Then the friends of Governor Voorhees wanted the Governor to be one of the party. Neither side seemed willing to give up the point and the feeling ran high. As there was no apparent chance of either Gummere or Voorhees withdrawing Senator Kean stepped out of the race as was told in yesterday's Press. After that it was supposed that the convention would be plain sailing.

There was every visible sign of unity when the convention opened fifteen minutes late. Senator William M. Johnson, of Passaic, was made chairman, and the secretaries were A. A. Barker, of Glouocster; C. B. Bacon, of Camden; Charles H. Bateman, of Somerset; J. Herbert Potts, of Hudson, and J. H. Parker, of Passaic. When Senator Sewell arose to speak he was greeted with prolonged applause. The mention of Senator Kean's name on the State committee was the signal for much cheering.

A recess of twenty minutes gave the committees an opportunity to confer. Judge James Cross, of Elizabeth, was chairman of the committee on resolutions, which reported a platform strongly indorsing President McKinley and the Republican administration in all their acts.

An Essex delegate tried to slip in a resolution indorsing Judge Franklin Fort, of Newark, as candidate for Vice-President, but he was promptly sat upon.

The call was made for nominations and the chairman of the Atlantic county delegation named Senator Sewell, Governor Voorhees, Franklin Murphy and Barker Gummer. The other counties joined in until Hudson was reached. Then Col. Dickinson added the name of Senator Kean. There was a murmur of surprise and the call went on. Only four alternates were named. They were Harry J. Irick, of Burlington, John, I. Blair Riley, of Morris, Robert Williams, of Passaic, and Edward W. Wooley, of Hudson.

When the voting began, the Atlantic county candidates received the straight vote of all until Hudson was reached. Hudson gave 111 to Sewell and Murphy, 109 to Gummere, 91 to Kean, 20 to Voorhees and two were blank. Union county's 46 delegates voted straight for Kean, Sewell, Voorhees and Murphy.

It would not have taken much to stampede the whole convention for Kean to the detriment of Gummere and the Senator realized the fact. He stepped to the front but the wild cheering interrupted him for several minutes. Then he spoke emphatically. He said that he trusted that his withdrawal was understood by the people of New Jersey. He did not want the election and he begged his friends not to vote for him. Then he moved that the other four be elected by acclamation.

Senator Sewell spoke, too, and declared that Mr. Kean's action had been taken in the interests of harmony. Had not Mr. Kean withdrawn, he should have done so, the Camden leader declared.

The question was put to a vote, the Hudson men alone voting a vociferous "no." The Atlantic county nominees were declared elected.

State Senator McCarter, of Essex, promptly introduced a resolution extending the thanks of the convention to Senator Kean for his manly attitude in withdrawing in the interests of harmony. It was unanimously adopted and the convention adjourned.

There was one other meeting of the factions that also had a harmonious ending. It was part of the duty of the Union county caucus, held before the convention, to elect a member of the State Committee to succeed Senator Kean. Both Kean and Fowler were nominated. Speaking for Mr. Fowler, Charles M. Goulding said that Mr. Fowler felt that the place was due Mr. Kean, now that the Senator had voluntarily gone out of the "Big Four," and so the Congressman wished to withdraw his name in favor of the other. The friends of Mr. Fowler claim that the latter could have easily had the place, as a large majority of the delegates favored him.

DEATH CAME SUDDEN.

Mrs. Susan Rafferty Was Sick for Only a Few Hours When She Passed Away.

Death came suddenly last Thursday to Mrs. Susan Rafferty at her home at 42 Sycamore avenue. She complained of an indisposition yesterday but her illness was not thought to be serious. She retired early and passed away quietly at 10 o'clock. She was the widow of Col. Thomas Rafferty.

Mrs. Rafferty was born at Cozzackie, N. Y., seventy-six years ago. In 1888 she moved to North Plainfield with her family and has resided there up to the time of her death. She was a member of the First Baptist church. She was a woman of beautiful character, quiet and retiring, but with a word of cheer and encouragement for all her friends. She loved her home and devoted her life to making it as pleasant as possible. She is survived by five children, of whom four reside in this city. They are Mrs. L. H. Bigelow, Jr., of Central avenue, Mrs. Isabelle Milne, Mrs. DeWitt Brokaw and Miss Susan Rafferty, all of Sycamore avenue.

While Mrs. Rafferty has not been as strong of late as in former years, she was apparently in fairly good health up to Thursday morning. Her death was caused by heart failure.

The funeral will be held from her late residence, 42 Sycamore avenue, Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

L. Warnshius, of the seminary. The larger portion of the afternoon session will be devoted to the Junior societies. Among the missionaries who will speak are Rev. H. V. S. To Top Small Towns With Telephone.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company has about decided to run a telephone line through to Watchung and the small towns beyond, and the chances are that the work will be started this summer. Telephones will be established at convenient points. The residents will appreciate this convenience as it will bring them in closer touch with the outside world and give them an idea of how things are going.

Little Fellow's Birthday.

Master Roy Hafner, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hafner, of Watchung avenue, celebrated the second anniversary of his birthday Friday and in addition to a telephone message received on the occasion the little fellow's parents gave him a party and invited a number of his young friends to be present and join in the festivities.

NOW AT WASHINGTON

Joseph, the Brave and Noble Chief of the Nez Perces.

In Petitioning the National Authorities for Civil Rights for His People—His Part in the Great War of 1877.

That picturesque and noble Indian statesman Joseph, chief of the Nez Perces, whose proud boast has always been that they are the faithful friends of the white man, has come, after an absence of many years, to visit the Great Father at Washington and petition the authorities for those civil rights his people still hope will be granted them. Chief Joseph is accompanied by a delegation, among whom are his nephew and interpreter, Steven Reuben, a brother of Gen. Miles' faithful scout, who was killed by his own tribe, and an alumnus of the school at Carlisle, Chief Shawaway. The other day an Indian, one of Chief Joseph's associates, was brought before the local police court on the charge of carrying concealed weapons and threatening a negro. The chief testified in behalf of his friend, who was released on Joseph's unsupported word. In announcing the prisoner's discharge, the judge paid a high tribute to the chief of the Nez Perces, referring to his dealings with Howard and Miles and his honorable action both during and after the great war, concluding his laudation by saying he deserved and had won the respect of every one.

Chief Joseph, says the New York Tribune, who is a handsome, fine type, through the greed of the white man, were hunted from their old homes, and their present holdings are not those handed down to them by their fathers, but lands allotted the tribe by the government. Conventions made have been repeatedly broken, and there must be in the heart of this proud descendant of a noble tribe a feeling of bitterness and chagrin; but it is doubtless some compensation to know that when he was weighed in the balance he was not found wanting, and that he succeeded, misrepresented and misquoted as he often was, in winning the regard, respect and esteem of his old enemies.

CHIEF JOSEPH.
(Now at Washington to Secure Civil Rights for His People.)

Chief Joseph commanded in the war which the official accounts term "one of the most extraordinary Indian wars of which there is any record." The Indians throughout displayed a courage and skill that elicited universal praise. They abstained from scalping, let the captive women go free, did not commit indiscriminate murder of peaceful families, which is usual, and fought with almost scientific skill, using advance and rear guards, flank movements and field fortifications, and one thinks of him at that time, 1877, as a middle aged man and now as a patriarch. This veteran warrior is, on the contrary, just turned 50, his face is the face of a man in the prime of life, his head sits proudly on his shoulders, and his eyes look into the eyes of his white brother with truth and sincerity as of old. He wears, as a rule, the garb of civilization, but he always at hand his chief's costume, and is a brave figure in his paint and feathers.

After the war Joseph and his people were imprisoned at Fort Leavenworth, where they endured much suffering and where many of them died.

"I cannot tell how much my heart suffered for my people while at Leavenworth," said Joseph. "The Great Spirit Chief who ruled above seemed to take away some other way and did not see what was being done to my people."

Returned the Wrong Child.

An extraordinary incident has come to light regarding one of the Liverpool corporation hospitals for infectious diseases. A grocer had two children down with scarlet fever, a girl, aged five, and a boy of two. They were removed to the infectious hospital, and in due time the parents were notified that they had recovered and might go home again. When their mother attended at the hospital a baby well wrapped up in shawls was handed to her. On getting home and examining the child more closely the mother began to doubt that it was her own. The father and the other children also declared that the wrong baby had been brought home. The child was thereupon taken back to the hospital, where the father demanded his own offspring. At first he was assured that the right child had been handed over, but his persistent denial caused a search of the hospital, when the proper infant was found.

IMITATED THE DARKY.

CLEVER ENTERTAINMENT IN MISS DORSEY'S MONOLOGUES.

Given at the Home of Mrs. H. I. Cooley and Attended by Many Society Folks.

Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, of Rockview avenue, gave a delightful entertainment Thursday afternoon, when Miss Dorsey, in a unique and charming manner, gave some of the characteristics of the southern negro. Miss Dorsey's unmistakable southern accent at once bore witness to the fact that she was no stranger to their words and ways. In the most charmingly natural style she told their stories and imitated their conversations, sermons, revival scenes and confidences. To the accompaniment of a banjo Miss Dorsey sang a variety of songs, some of them, of course, only folk lore of this country, if the songs and legends of the American Indians are excepted. Miss Dorsey did more than sing the songs. She analyzed the life and emotions out of which the songs had sprung. She designated these songs as rhythmic and emotional, the scale of notes being smaller and the words very often silly, but with a peculiar quality of melody that rendered them very fascinating. All the fascination of the happy, go lucky people, who have cast down under adverse circumstances, whose emotions are easily stirred and whose consciences are elastic were portrayed with a genuineness and charm that made each guest regret when the pleasant hour or more was over.

Mrs. Cooley was assisted in receiving by the guest of honor, Mrs. H. H. Belding, of Dayton, Ohio, Mrs. Chas. W. McCutchen and Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers. The ushers were the Misses Cooley, Randolph, Caroline Randolph, Dumont, Gleason, Huntington and Margaret Yates.

Beautiful flowers and plants decorated the rooms and Easter lilies and white jonquils were used with pleasing effect in the dining rooms where ices were served, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers and Mrs. Charles McCutchen presiding at the table.

AFFAIRS OF CHINA.

Missionary Delivered an Interesting Talk at a Parlor Meeting of Congregational Women.

A pleasant parlor meeting was held Thursday afternoon by the Women's Association of the Congregational church, at the home of Mrs. William B. Wadsworth, of West Eighth street. A large number of the women of the church were present.

Opening devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Wadsworth, the president of the association. She read the Scripture lesson, prayer was offered by Mrs. M. E. Dwight, and a solo, "Publish Glad Tidings," was sung by Miss M. G. Morse.

The address of the afternoon was delivered by Mrs. Dr. Sheffield, of Tung-Cho, North China, who went to that field in 1869, and could tell much of the conditions of affairs in China and the Chinese. She told in a very entertaining manner of the work carried on by the Congregational Missions in China, the schools, college and theological seminary, the medical work, in which Mrs. Sheffield herself has borne a considerable part, the evangelistic touring, and the special work for Chinese women. The politics of the empire, the climate, the practice of foot-binding, and the methods of learning the language, were other topics considered.

At the close of the meeting tea was served in the dining room, Mrs. John M. Whiton and Mrs. Alexander Miller presided at the table. The young women who assisted in serving were Mrs. J. A. Robinson, Mrs. Frederick Stack, Miss Mary Wadsworth, Miss Katharine W. Dwight, Miss Minnie G. Morse, Miss Jessie McIntosh and Miss Anna E. Manktelow.

DANCE AT PARK CLUB.

Subscription Affair in Which a Number of City and Borough Young People Participated.

The little ball at the Park Club never looked prettier than it did Thursday for the subscription dance held there by a number of the young people of borough and city. A profusion of rugs, portierres and cushions were arranged about the hall with excellent effect. The music was excellent and the whole affair proved one of the most enjoyable of the happenings of Easter week.

The dance was arranged by Miss Phillips and Miss Seldon Mae Howell. There were about seventy guests present during the evening. The patronesses were Mrs. H. R. Phillips, Mrs. J. H. Howell, Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. George Hallock, Mrs. George T. Rogers, Mrs. George Dupee and Mrs. Charles A. Reed.

TO BE HONEST PAYS.

Senator Depew Gives Some New Views on an Old Subject.

Crooked Methods, He Thinks, Invariably Lead to Loss of Self-Respect and Usually End in Financial Disaster.

Senator Chauncey M. Depew, head of the Vanderbilt system of railroads, in response to an invitation from the Chicago Tribune to write a few lines on the subject of "honesty in business," sent in the following reply:

Honesty is too much talked about as if it were scarce in these days. The business principles of to-day are better, purer, and more universally honest than they were in the days of my boyhood. Then the motto of life ran something like this: "All is fair in love, war and trade!" But this generation has tabooed that maxim, and business methods were never better or more reputable than they are at this minute.

Many immense fortunes have been made by men of this generation, who employed strictly honest means to attain their ultimate success and great wealth. Take, for example, Mr. Bessemer. He invented the steel which is used so extensively all over the world for car rails and revolutionized the manufacture of steel, giving employment to thousands of persons and bringing wealth to himself and his family.

John Wanamaker is a good man to take for another example. He started in a small way with a small store, and he is to-day one of the wealthiest men in the country. He has always been an upright, honest man. In what lay the secret of his success. Simply in this: He knew what the people wanted, he knew where to buy it, and he knew how to advertise. Many a man, as we all know, has made a fortune through judicious advertising. Take two men starting in business at the same time. One uses all the money he makes in living well—even extravagantly.

The other invests all the surplus cash that he can lay his hands on in advertising here, there and everywhere that he thinks will attract public notice. What is the result? The magnificent advertises has crowds flocking to his shop to see the beauties of the advertised goods, and as the public begin to run so they will continue from sheer force of habit. The first shopkeeper will in the meantime be sitting, unknown and uncared for, aghast at the crowds which daily throng the counters of his competitor and bitterly bewailing the bad luck which has followed his own venture into trade. Yet he has no one to blame for it but himself.

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.
(New York Central Magnate and United States Senator.)

Some persons might consider that old Commodore Vanderbilt was dishonest because he did not refund the money which the stockholders of the Hudson River and Harlem railroads would have made if they had continued to hold their stock after he took hold of the roads. But he was not.

When the commodore had made $20,000,000 in shipping of various sorts he thought it was time for getting out of which he might invest his capital. He found these railroads, which were then in a most deplorable out-of-date condition—the stock only worth $6 on $100—and he took hold of them not for love or money. But he took hold, built new bridges, put all modern improvements into the car service, advocated new signal systems; in short, he infused the life blood into the service of the road at an enormous outlay of capital—and then all the capital came back, bringing more with it.

The main temptation with which the ordinary business man of to-day is beset is the temptation to overcapitalize his capital or business prospects and thus obtain greater credit. But don't do it. "Honesty is the best policy" is the safest motto to follow. I know what I am talking about.

"Good nature and good health will help, but you won't have a good time," may sound smart and elicit rounds of applause, but it is a fallacy.

An Immense Kentucky Oak.

J. P. Harl, of Barrett's Ferry, near Fordsville, cut from his farm one white oak tree that measured 99 feet across the stump. He got 40 feet of trunk, which he made into sawlogs and floated to Evansville. He paid a neighbor who owned a low wagon $25 to haul the tree one-half mile on level ground to Rough river. It took eight horses to haul it, and cut at a time, each cut being about 12 feet long. A nine-foot saw was purchased in Owensboro by Mr. Harl to fell this monstrous oak. There would have been about 60 feet of trunk in all, but 20 feet of it was hollow and was ruined on account of splitting when the massive top struck the ground.

BUSY LIFE AT AN END.

FUNERAL SERVICES OVER REMAINS OF LATE JOHN D. RUNYON.

Impressive Sermon Preached by Rev. D. J. Yerkes, Who Had Known Deceased From Boyhood.

A large and representative gathering of people, including many business men from this city and various parts of New Jersey and New York, attended the funeral services of the late John D. Runyon which were held Wednesday April 18th, at 2:30 o'clock from the house, corner of Park avenue and Fifth street. It was a touching and impressive tribute to one of Plainfield's leading and most prominent business men, and gave strong evidence of the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him.

The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, where the deceased was a member and secretary of the board of trustees. They were marked by the absence of any display. Dr. Yerkes read appropriate Scripture selections, after which he spoke in the highest terms of the departed. He referred to his life and character, of his energy, honesty and integrity, and referred to him as an upright citizen. He spoke of the sad blow struck to the community which his sudden death had caused, and of the gloom of sadness that had been cast over the city.

The speaker referred to Mr. Runyon's warm heart and generous hand and said that he would be greatly missed. He then spoke of his personal knowledge. He said that he had known him since he was a lad, having joined his church by letter. He spoke of the fidelity and regularity of the board of trustees of the church. When he was not in his pew he knew that it must be sickness that detained him from church.

Dr. Yerkes said that Mr. Runyon's uprightness and stability of character was recognized by the entire community, and no one could know him without being deeply impressed by his integrity. Those who came in touch with him socially were impressed by his warm heartedness. In conclusion the speaker referred touchingly to Mr. Runyon as a wise counselor and guide for his aged mother, as well as for his household, and said that there is a vacancy left that will be very hard to fill. At the close of the service Dr. Yerkes offered an impressive prayer, in which he remembered the bereaved ones and invoked the blessings of God on the afflicted ones.

The floral tributes were numerous and lavish, consisting of large set pieces, wreaths and sprays, that came from friends, employes, business associates and relatives. It was another strong evidence of esteem that was expressed at the services.

After an opportunity had been given to view the remains they were placed in the receiving vault at Hillside Cemetery. The interment will take place later.

FUNERAL OF LATE ISAAC CONNETT.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes Conducted Services—Many Floral Tributes.

The funeral services of the late Isaac Connett were held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence, 309 East Fifth street, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, conducted the services, and spoke briefly on the necessity of being ready when the last call comes.

The floral tributes from relatives and friends were beautiful, and consisted of several set pieces, together with bouquets of roses. The remains were placed in the receiving vault at Hillside Cemetery and will be interred later. Those who served as pallbearers were L. A. Hummer, J. E. Flannery, Benjamin F. Moore and G. H. Van-Nest.

Want Name of Street Changed.

The question of changing the name of Dunt street to Madison avenue will probably be decided at the May meeting of the Borough Council. The idea is steadily growing in favor and a majority of the people seem to be in favor of it.

PROHIBITIONISTS NAME DELEGATES.

Somerset County Convention Held in North Plainfield Thursday Afternoon.

A LITTLE BIT DISCOURAGED.

STILL THEY RESOLVE TO KEEP SUPPORTING THEIR PARTY.

Better Organization Is Urged and It Is Decided to Continue the Prohibition Column in Bound Brook Scale Center.

The Somerset County Prohibition party Thursday afternoon in Spencer's Hall, Somerset street, for the purpose of electing nine delegates and alternates to attend the State convention to be held at Trenton Tuesday, May 8th.

William Longer, chairman of the county committee, called the meeting to order after which B. W. Hand offered prayer. Mr. Longer was then chosen chairman of the meeting. John Voorhees, of Somerville, acted in his customary position of secretary. The question of electing delegates was the first business and the following were chosen: John V. Haas, Bernards; John L. Corle, Branchburg; John Voorhees, B. K. Hoppock, George W. Adair, George Lamont, William H. Vayer, Bridgewater; William R. Brown, Franklin; William Angel, Somerset Maler, North Plainfield, (borough); Peter Robinson, North Plainfield Township; alternates, B. K. Hoppock, Theodore S. Quick, George H. Murphy, Thomas Maler, Rev. George Bowers, C. E. Dunham, A. P. Suthben, M. Lance and Andrew Wilson.

The chairman and secretary were given the power to fill vacancies if any should occur. J. P. Hewes, chairman of the State committee, was present and had something to say regarding the cause of prohibition. He spoke of the many discouraging features that are constantly presenting themselves, but on the other hand spoke encouragingly of the work. He referred to a plan now under consideration to canvass the entire State and learn exactly who have been and who will vote the ticket. An extra effort is also to be made to circulate judiciously good literature in the hope of enlisting the people along the line of temperance. He urged more effort toward local organization.

Mr. Voorhees, the secretary, spoke at some length concerning the work in general. He for one felt somewhat discouraged when he considered what little interest the other members are taking in the work. He was willing to do anything to arouse interest if the other members would only do their share. He then rehearsed the history of the past year and what was accomplished for prohibition in the county. He offered his house for a meeting once a month if the members would come and discuss plans of work.

Other remarks were made by Ethan Lanphear, of this city; B. K. Hoppock, of Somerville; Thomas Maler, of the borough, and Chairman Longer. All spoke in an encouraging manner and urged the others to do more in the future.

The question of maintaining the column of temperance in the Bound Brook State Centre was discussed. Mr. Voorhees stated that Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Bound Brook, who looked after the column, for which $36 a year was paid, had moved away and for two weeks past he had been looking after it. At his suggestion B. W. Hand and Ethan Lanphear agreed to contribute articles for the column and Mr. Voorhees agreed to edit the material.

Another matter introduced by Mr. Voorhees was that in regard to the shocking condition of the train crew on the Jersey Central Railroad the other day when they were helplessly drunk and could not run their train. He thought it was scandalous that such a condition of affairs should exist and not one person to raise their voice against it.

The meeting, adjourned about 5 o'clock and everyone went away more determined than ever to work for the cause of temperance and the Prohibition party.

To be Paid 37 1-2 Cents an Hour.

The street committee from the Borough Council has made arrangements for the sprinkling of the streets on a daily basis, 37½ cents an hour to be paid to each of the two men employed to do the work. The work comes under the supervision of the superintendent of highways, Thomas Dood, who will keep a strict account of what is done.

Appointed Administratrix.

Mrs. Underhill, of Washington, was yesterday appointed administratrix of the estate of her late brother, who died several months ago. The estate is located in North Plainfield township.

SUCCESSFUL OPENING OF PARK GOLF LINKS.

Kicker's Handicap Competition Was Won by Aubrey C. Hull, W. J. R. Thiers Second.

LARGE TURNOUT AT COURSE

INFORMAL TEA HELD AT THE CLUB HOUSE DURING AFTERNOON.

Despite the Threatening Weather There Were Many Who Attended the Opening at the Park Golf Club Saturday Afternoon.

Even with the promise of rain at any moment, the golfers turned out in force for the opening of the links of the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon. The course, both fair and putting greens, was in good condition. Nobody was in good form and so the "kicker's handicap" tournament, in which everybody had a chance to fix their own handicap, found particular favor. The competition was won by Aubrey C. Hull with William J. R. Taiers second and Sensitr Charles A Reed third.

Although the addition to the club house has not yet been made, the interior of the building was in fine order. The ladies of the club took possession of the parlor during the afternoon and an informal tea was held, Mrs. Charles A. Reed and Mrs. Walter M. McGee presiding at the tables. A few of the young ladies went over the course while a number of others gathered at the club house and watched the play from there.

There was some questions as to whether the putting greens would be ready for use. George T. Rogers, chairman of the greens committee and Professional Blair, conferred and decided that they were hard enough to stand play. It was the first opportunity to play on the greens and nobody could putt at all. After the turf is well started and has been cut and rolled several times, they will be very smooth. The fair greens were in excellent shape except in a few places where they were a trifle soft.

All the afternoon the rain clouds were banked along the mountain and finally a little rain began as the last of the players straggled in. Considering the weather, the attendance was remarkably good and promises well for the coming season that opened Saturday. Almost all of the players of last season were on hand together with many new ones.

The event of the afternoon was the "kicker's handicap." As it opened the season it was made a nine hole competition. A score between 41 and 52 was secretly drawn and not announced until the completion of the event. Each competitor selected his or her own handicap. At the end, the player, whose score should be nearest the one drawn, was to be declared winner. A Verdon driver was given as first prize and a Verdon iron as second.

As it was all a matter of guesswork as to where the winning score would be, the competitors had to take their chances. Some figured on the lower scores and some on the higher. Nearly all, however, availed themselves of the opportunity to take generous handicaps to make up for lack of practice.

The winning score proved to be 44. Aubrey C. Hull, with a handicap of 25, reached that figure exactly. There were twenty-four entries in the competition and fourteen cards were handed in. Most of the net scores were in the neighborhood of 50. The best gross score for the afternoon was made by W. J. R. Thiers, 63 strokes. J. H. Howell was next with 64. It was the first play of the season for both.

The best scores in the competition were as follows:

	Gross.	Handicap.	Net.
Aubrey C. Hull	69	25	44
W. J. R. Thiers	63	14	49
Charles A. Reed	74	25	49
Joseph H. Howell	64	14	50

VACANT HOUSE BURNED.

FIRST WARNING WAS WHEN THE ROOF BEGAN TO BLAZE.

Fire Supposed to Have Smouldered There Since the Occupants Left Two Days Before—Loss $200—Insured.

A confl agration in a vacant house on West Third street, near Plainfield avenue, called out the city fire department at 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning. The fire had evidently been smouldering for many hours before it broke out. The roof was destroyed and the second floor gutted. The damage will nearly reach $200, covered by insurance.

The house is a small story-and-a-half frame dwelling owned by Mrs. Bridget Burke. Thomas Marisy and family moved out of the house two days before, and since then it has been unoccupied. Dashiell Smith, of West Third street, was passing and noticed the flames coming from the roof. He sent in an alarm from box 46.

The cause of the fire is unknown, but the theory of incendiary origin is not believed by the firemen. It is supposed that the fire caught from the stove in some way before the occupants departed and smouldered away until yesterday morning. There was a hole in the roof over shingles and the latter were burning fiercely when the firemen arrived. Two lines of hose were laid in and the chemical engine was also used. It took an hour to get at and extinguish all the fire.

New Telephone Directory

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company will issue a new local telephone directory in the next ten days which will include the list of subscribers at the exchanges in Plainfield, Westfield, Bound Brook and Somerville. The last general directory was issued March 1st, and does not include a number of new local subscribers.

Acts of Vandalism.

Residents of LaGrande avenue, near Washington street, are righteously indignant at the contemptible acts of some person or persons, who wilfully pull up choice flower plants from the dooryards of several persons on the street named and then simply throw them aside. If they are detected they will get the full benefit of the law.

Police Drill Until 1 and Inspection.

The police force of this city will hold its final drill and inspection for the month Saturday afternoon at the Olympia, police headquarters. The Police Board and other city officials will be present.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR LEAL'S SCHOOL TEAM

Easily Defeated Arion A. C., of This City, by a Score of 17 to 2.

HIGH SCHOOL DEFEATED.

LINCOLN HIGH SCHOOL OF WESTFIELD WON 26 TO 17.

Local School Boys Outbatted and Outfielded Their Opponents—Four Exhibition of Ball Given by High School Teams—The Scores.

The baseball team from Leal's School won another easy victory Saturday afternoon defeating the Arion A. C., of this city, by a score of 17 to 2. The game was played on the Washington avenue grounds. Timely batting and almost errorless fielding for the school boys were important factors in the result.

From the very start, it was evident that the Leal School team would be victorious and the question was only as to the score. The Arions hit Dupee's pitching harder than any other opposing team has this season but the hits were widely scattered. Poor base running helped to keep down the score. Eleven safe hits were made off Dupee's delivery but they only netted two runs, one in the fifth and one in the sixth.

Squires pitched a fair game, but the school boys had confidence and nineteen hits resulted. Twelve errors by the Arion team assisted in running up Leal's score. Only two errors were recorded against the latter team. A little wildness on the part of the Arion pitcher proved expensive, nine men taking their bases on balls to Dupee's two. Squires struck out five and Dupee ten.

It was too one-sided a game to please the spectators much. A meeting later in the season between the two clubs may prove more exciting. The Arions showed the need of practice. They had plenty of good material, but lacked the unity and confidence that made victory so easy for the school team.

The teams were as follows:

LEAL'S SCHOOL.	ARION A. C.
Tilney, s.	Kenneth, s.
Dodge, 2.	Dolker, 3b.
Dupee, p.	Flannery, If.
Flaherty, 1.	Conway, c.

SCORE BY INNINGS.

Leals	2	1	2	0	3	2	0	1	2	17

Home very poor ball playing characteris ed the game between the nines of the Plainfield High School and the Lincoln High School, of Westfield, played on Martine Common, Saturday afternoon. The major share of it fell to the local team. The Westfield team therefore won by a score of 26 to 17.

Davis pitched the first three innings for the Plainfield team. Somehow the visitors fell upon his curves with vigor and with the lack of anything resembling support from the infield and outfield, seventeen runs were rolled up to one for Plainfield. Denton went into the box after that and held down the visitors fairly well.

In the fifth inning the local team began to bat. In the seventh Westfield collapsed entirely and Plainfield pulled up to the extent of ten runs. They also scored in the last two innings, but the fat lead that Westfield obtained at the beginning was too great to be overcome.

The fielding of both teams was loose and both lacked team work. The local players showed a decided improvement in base running but their batting would stand much improvement. Squires caught throughout the game. The Westfield battery was Hoganan and Brown.

The score by innings was as follows:

Plainfield H. S.	1	0	0	0	2	1	1	0	2	1—17
Lincoln H. S.	4	7	6	0	2	0	2	1	3	—26

DEATH OF A YOUNG LAD.

Son of Armstrong Mulford—Was a Favorite With All Who Knew Him.

In the sudden death of Edward Armstrong Mulford, son of Armstrong Mulford, this city, the sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved father. About a month ago the young man was taken with appendicitis, and an operation was performed, after which there were good chances of an early recovery. Recently bronchial pneumonia developed and this caused his death, which occurred Monday a. m. at 6 o'clock at his home, 620 Bainbridge street, Brooklyn. Mr. Mulford was with his son Sunday all day and there were no alarming symptoms.

The lad was a favorite with all who knew him. He was in the twelfth year of his age and was bright and active. Many will remember him when he lived in this city, where he made a host of friends. The funeral services were held from the residence in Brooklyn Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, and the interment took place in Hillside cemetery, this city, at the convenience of the family

BEAUTIFUL FIGURES.

How a Woman May Acquire and Retain Symmetrical Development.

A beautiful figure is the most precious gift, after perfect health, that any woman can possess. It is of far more value than a pretty face. It lasts much longer, and it does not betray the years, as most eventually even the most perfect features and the most lovely skin. With a perfect form, shapely limbs and well set up, a woman cannot fail to look charming.

There are three classes of women from an artistic standpoint, who may lay claim to beauty of form. In the first class belong all the daughters of Venus. They are great, tall, magnificent looking creatures, whom some men describe as "full bodied" women. In the second class are the daughters of Psyche. Under this class come the women and maidens usually described as having fragile, girlish looking figures. Of the third classes, some admire one and some another, but very beautiful women are found in all three.

A woman who desires to make the very most of herself should study her own figure. She should find out its good points, its better points, its bad points and its very bad points.

She should then take it in hand, and by means of exercise, diet, gymnastics, a good tailor and a first-class corset maker, set herself up to the best possible advantage.

A woman can really do more with her figure than she can with her face.

If inclined to be too stout she should rigorously abstain from everything that produces corpulency, such as late hours, over indulgence at table and leading in general a lazy, indolent existence.

If she has not the courage to make these sacrifices she must pay good-by to beauty of form. She will then join the overflowing ranks of women who, when they have passed the age of 30, make no further pretensions to beauty of figure.

If, on the contrary, her trouble be an unsightly leanness of body and limb, which makes it impossible for her ever to appear in either becoming evening gown or smart tailor frock, she should, with the aid of both diet and gymnasium, set about developing her form to the right. It is her duty to cover, with soft, firm curving flesh, the harsh outline of her angles. Some thin women think it useless to try to put on a little flesh. They say, hopelessly: "It's not my nature to be fat." They appear never to have learned that it is of the very nature of a human being to possess a healthy, well-developed body.

When they lack this gift of nature, their hirsight is, there is something wrong somewhere. They should find out what it is, and remedy it.—N. Y. Herald.

COLLEGE TRAINING.

Does Not Always Increase a Girl's Stock of Common Sense.

It has been remarked that modern methods of education, whatever may be their merits, do not markedly increase that most valuable of all endowments, common sense. It is of far more value than a pretty face. It lasts much longer, and it does not betray the years, as most eventually even the most perfect features and the most lovely skin. NOVEL AUTOMOBILE.

Invented by a Man Down in Maine, and Ready for Winter as Well as Summer Use.

A. O. Lombard, of Waterville, Me., has just completed the work on a new automobile which is in itself new and novel, as well as being a model machine in every way.

The principal feature of the machine is the manner in which the running gear and boiler are hung on the machinery. Instead of having these hung from the body, Mr. Lombard has a frame attached to the rear axle and made fast to it, while the forward end is attached to the forward spring of the wagon.

By this arrangement the running gear is solidly fastened to the rear axle and is made rigid there where all the connections for running of the machine are made, while the forward end of the frame is cushioned by being attached to the springs.

While the arrangement does not in the least affect the riding of the wagon, it gives spring enough to the frame so that there is no danger of the machinery being injured by being jarred.

The power is furnished by a steel boiler 24 inches long and 14 inches in diameter, with 301 half-inch tubes in it, and set in an upright position, in which gasoline is used as a fuel. Under the boiler is placed the gasoline burner. This is a very novel affair and is so arranged that the whole of the bottom of the boiler has the flame striking it when the boiler is lighted.

This burner is connected with a steam pipe from the boiler and this is so arranged that the supply of gasoline to the burner is governed by the steam pressure, so that when the wagon is not at work the burner will be nearly closed, and thus very little flame will go to the burner. The boiler runs under a pressure of 150 pounds and is supplied with a safety valve, steam gauge and gauge cocks for testing the amount of water in the boiler.

The machine was completed at about the time the snow came, and Mr. Lombard set at work to make some kind of an attachment by which the machine could be used in the winter as well as in the summer.

The only change which he made in the machine was to remove the forward axle and to place on the side a set of hub runners, such as are used on coaches and the like. But with this arrangement, in the cold weather, he found that there would be a cloud of steam coming from the machine. This he remedied by making the runners hollow with a number of small holes in the bottoms of them.

Through a pipe running to the hub, and thence to the axle, he connected his exhaust pipes, and now the engines exhaust right at the axle. The hot runners and the cold snow cools the runner and condenses the steam which soon becomes water and is run out to the snow through the holes in the bottom of the runners.—Boston Globe.

LEAGUE STOPS RACING.

The Step, Some Seem to Think, Will Result in Increased Membership Almost Immediately.

From Maine to California and from the lakes to the gulf the press congratulates the League of American Wheelmen upon its divorce from cycle racing. For four years the question of whether the league should discontinue its control of a racing department or not has been a disturbing element in the affairs of bicycling and wheelmen generally. During the past year the question assumed an acute stage, owing to the opposition of a purely racing body and because of the discrimination against the department by many of the leaders of the league. The statement was repeatedly made that racing troubles were the cause of the decline in league membership, and that if the national assembly discontinued this feature the organization would receive many applications from wheelmen who take greater interest in the more dignified objects of the league, such as highway improvement, securing of wheelmen's rights and privileges, hotel accommodations, road maps and touring facilities and the many other objects for which the L. A. W. has been constantly striving.

Now that the assembly almost unanimously decided to drop the racing department those who have consistently opposed it as well as those who favored it have congratulated the league freely predict that the organization will immediately feel the effect of the action. In the centers of population this effect is already being felt, and it will probably soon extend itself to the other localities of the country. The larger cities have usually taken the lead in league recruiting, and as they have been the most opposed to racing it is natural to suppose they will be the first to show the favorable effects of the action.

Wales Buys an Automobile.

The prince of Wales has joined the ranks of the motorists. He has ordered a six-horse power Daimler phaeton car for four passengers to be delivered at Sandringham, and the prince himself intends to take lessons in its management. This may give a fillip to the motor industry in England, which has been making slow progress.

DINNER IN HONOR OF DR. ENDICOTT.

Given by Former Mayor W. M. Saunders at His Home Saturday Evening.

MANY PROMINENT GUESTS.

TOASTS RESPONDED TO AFTER MENU WAS SERVED.

Dr. Endicott Deeply Grateful for the Expression of Friendship Which the Affair Meant—Those Who Were Present.

The dinner given by former Mayor William M. Saunders, of Rockview avenue, in honor of Dr. George W. Endicott, Saturday night, was attended by many prominent gentlemen. It was a gorgeous and delightful affair. Mr. Saunders' beautiful home was profusely decorated with flowers. The dinner was served in the dining room opening into a well-filled conservatory. The guests sat down to a table formed after the letter E, which, as the host said, stood primarily for Endicott.

The menu was an elaborate one, and after it had been served Mr. Saunders acted as toastmaster and introduced those who were called upon for short speeches. Mr. Saunders said that the guests had come together to honor one whom they all loved and admired, and who had come out of a most trying ordeal of an unjust accusation a clean and honorable citizen and most loyal friend. Mr. Saunders said that Dr. Endicott's friends had never lost faith in his honor and integrity and delighted to do him honor.

Dr. Endicott, the guest of honor, was then called upon and he responded in a feeling manner, saying that words were utterly inadequate to express his gratitude and the emotions that were prompted by the expression of loyalty of his friends.

Dr. Endicott was followed by Hugh Hastings, historian of New York State; Craig A. Marsh, who was Dr. Endicott's counsel; J. E. Martine, the well-known Democratic leader; Admiral Endicott, brother of the Doctor; J. Evarts Tracy, the well-known New York lawyer; Hon. Allan Endicott, Judge of Bergen county, also a brother of the Doctor; Wm. Cook, F. W. Iredell and Howard C. Fleming.

The affair wound up at midnight in a most pleasant interchange of farewells.

WILLIAM DUNAVAN DEAD.

He Was Seventy-seven Years of Age and Had Lived in Plainfield for Fifty Years.

Wm. Dunavan, aged 77 years, one of Plainfield's best-known citizens, died Monday morning about 9 o'clock after an illness of several months with blood poisoning, which caused intense suffering. Very recently Mr. Dunavan was attacked with pneumonia and this was the cause of death.

Mr. Dunavan was born at Asbury, Warren county, and came to Plainfield fifty years ago. He followed farming for several years and finally secured a position as night watchman for Cook Brothers, dealers in coal and lumber, the place now owned by Boice, Runyon & Company. After several years' service there he engaged with the late David J. Boice in the same capacity at his yards, where Captain Hand's building now stands on Park avenue.

Although Mr. Dunavan was not a member of any church, he attended services at the First M. E. church. He is survived by a wife and eight children as follows: Mrs. Frances Slater, of Phillipsburg; Walter Dunavan, of New Durham; Charles Dunavan, of Rochester; Daniel Dunavan, of Milwaukee; A. B. Dunavan, Mrs. R. B. Rogers, L. M. Dunavan and David S. Dunavan, of this city.

Denounced "Ouida."

Last Sunday at the First Presbyterian church, the pastor, Rev. Charles E. Herring, preached a sermon on "Novels." In the course of his remarks he referred to "Ouida," and many of the books written by Zola. In his opinion he thought that the productions of American authors in many instances are as bad as those of French authors. He denounced "Ouida" and all harmful books as dangerous.

PUT UP A SPITE FENCE.

Trouble Between New Brunswick Neighbors Assumes New Phase.

There is another spite fence in New Brunswick. William J Daly and John Garretson, neighbors, on Easton avenue, had a dispute over their property lines. On Saturday Daly erected a board fence 10 feet high between his property and Garretson's, completely shutting off the latter's view.

The dispute over the lines has been before the local courts for sometime. The spite fence is expected to lead to further trouble.

Supervisors May Get More Pay.

For nearly a year the six supervisors of the census in New Jersey have been busily engaged in the work preliminary to the taking of the twelfth census, which will begin June 1st. Hon. William R. Merriam, the director of the census, recently made a recommendation to the committee on census of the House of Representatives, to the effect that the compensation of the supervisors should be increased. This recommendation has had favorable consideration, and it is believed that when the matter comes up in the House it will be adopted without much opposition.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXIII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MAY, 3, 1900. NO. 18.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well as Its Limitations as to Its Authorities."—Madison.

FAVOR SPRINKLING OF THE STREETS BY CITY.

Ordinance to be Introduced in Common Council Providing For City Sprinkling.

CITY IS NOW VERY DUSTY.

EXPENSE TO BE MET BY SPECIAL TAX ON PROPERTIES BENEFITED.

Movement is Now on Foot Looking Toward General Watering of Streets in Limited District—Can be Done Cheaply by the City.

A stranger came to Plainfield a few days ago and started to walk through the business streets. Great clouds of dust swept by. He could not see, breathing was a difficut task, while talking was impossible. His natty suit and derby lost their fine appearance.

"What's the matter with the town?" he gasped, as the dust cloud wandered up North avenue looking for fresh victims. "Why don't you water your streets?" That was what others wondered, too. A number of citizens have been meditating on that same question while they have struggled through the dust for the last month, and have decided that the city should take action in the matter.

This movement for street sprinkling is favored by several of the Councilmen and an ordinance will soon be introduced in the Common Council providing for the sprinkling of the streets by the city within certain limits and at the expense of those directly benefited.

There has been comparatively little rain this spring, and even when it does rain the principal thoroughfares are soon dry. The result has been seen in the clouds of dust that have made life miserable for driver and pedestrian. After swallowing several pounds of it the citizens are waking up to the fact that it must be stopped. There has been some sprinkling done, but the work has not been general enough.

It is intended by those who advocate the scheme to have an ordinance introduced into the Council at the earliest opportunity. It will provide for the sprinkling of all main streets included in the rectangle formed by Plainfield avenue on the west, Front street on the north, Richmond street on the east and Seventh street and LaGrande avenue on the south. It is proposed to have the sprinkling done by city carts under the charge of the street department.

To meet the expense of such a plan, it is intended to provide a special tax to be assessed against the property benefited by the sprinkling. The city will do the work at a less cost to the citizens than will private contractors.

The trolley cars are responsible for lots of the dust, but, under the present city ordinance, the Street Railway Company is only compelled to sprinkle along its lines between May 15th and October 15th. An attempt may be made to amend the ordinance so that the company will look after the streets occupied by its lines whenever necessary.

When property owners, outside the limits of the regular sprinkling districts, wish to have their streets sprinkled as well, the ordinance will provide for the Council taking the necessary action after a petition from the property owners along the thoroughfares in question shall have been received. The special sprinkling tax will then be assessed against the property thus benefitted.

TWO MEN FOR ONE JOB.

RED HOT FIGHT FOR POLITICAL PLACE IN SOMERSET.

Supervisor for Manufacturing of Rood Millstone Road Not Yet Settled.

Somerville, May 2—The fight between the two factions of the Republican party in this county over the appointment of a supervisor of the new stone road which is being constructed between East Millstone and New Brunswick, may result in serious litigation. When the work was begun last week two supervisors appeared on the scene and they have been on duty every day, though the law only provides for one.

Charles Welsh was appointed early in the winter by State Road Commissioner Budd upon the recommendation of L. A. Thompson and other Republicans from the county. There was no objection to the character and ability of Mr. Welsh, but Senator Reed insisted that Welsh's appointment should be revoked and J. Newton Voorhees, of Middlebush, a warm adherent of the Reed faction, should be named in his place. Mr. Budd yielded to the demand for Mr. Welsh's removal, but before any appointment could be made, Mr. Voorhees died. Since then John Stechhoff has been appointed as supervisor. Mr. Stechhoff is highly esteemed and is satisfactory to everybody concerned, but Mr. Welsh claims that the Road Commissioner had no right to revoke his appointment except for better cause than political objection and he is serving under advice of his counsel.

The Board of Freeholders have received a sharp letter from the State Road Commissioner, urging that they recognize Mr. Stechoff's appointment by paying his bill when presented, but it is said that the Freeholders have decided to let the courts settle the difficulty. Mr. Welsh and Mr. Stechoff are personal friends, and the latter says he does not care enough for the office to make a fight for it. He only accepted it at the solicitation of friends. His resignation is daily looked for and then the fight may be renewed. The supervisor gets $3 a day while the work of construction goes on.

FINED $10.

Unless it Was Paid Mrs. Beardsley Would Have Gone to County Jail.

Mrs. Beardsley, who was arrested in the borough Monday evening on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, was arraigned before Mayor Smalley last evening. She was represented by Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., who, on behalf of the prisoner entered a plea of non vult. It will be remembered that the woman was arrested recently and promised to leave the borough is released. The fact that she had returned was against her and Mayor Smalley was not disposed to be lenient with her. He therefore fined her $10 or ten days in the county jail. The fine was paid.

AMATEUR ACTORS SHOW FINE TALENT.

"A Night Off" Performed in Music Hall With Great Success Tuesday.

A BRILLIANT AUDIENCE.

CLEVER WORK OF THOSE WHO ACTED THE CHARACTERS.

Former Mayor Saunders Made a Distinctive Hit in the Leading Role —Host Fashionable Gather-ing Since "Diplomacy."

Local amateur dramatics scored a marked success Tuesday in the presentation of "A Night Off" in Music Hall to an audience that was the most brilliant and fashionable from a social standpoint that has been gathered together since the pretentious histrionic effort of playing "Diplomacy" was made in the same theatre a year ago.

Music Hall was filled to its capacity to accommodate the audience that was anxious to witness the performance for "sweet charity's sake" and to admire and applaud the really meritorious efforts of those to whom had been allotted the difficult roles in the cast of characters to the charming comedy.

The piece has many pleasing and humorous situations, but the fact that it was written by the late Augustin Daly for a company of artists whose great ability was recognized, is suffice to say that it requires skilled and thorough appreciation in interpretation. In this respect the amateurs who portrayed the various characters last night showed remarkable talent.

One setting of the stage was all that was required for the four acts. The scenery and arrangement of the furniture and fittings made a pretty picture for the audience to gaze upon.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, who has been most energetic and indefatigable in his efforts to make the performance a success in all respects, acted a character that displayed his dramatic talent to admirable advantage. As "Justinian Babbitt," professor of ancient history in the Camptown University, who made a venture in the show business that involved him in almost endless complications with his prosaic and puritanical wife, he handled the leading role of the piece in a manner that undoubtedly carried it to the success which was attained. Compared with the character that he portrayed in "Diplomacy" a year ago, it showed that Mr. Saunders was versatile and an artist of more ability than is usually credited to the amateur.

As the comedian, represented by "Marcus Brutus Snap," a theatrical promoter and manager whose professional work involved "Professor Babbitt" in his woes, William B. Cook kept the audience in roars of laughter. Mr. Cook's make-up was typical of the self assuring and presumptious theatrical man that we see pictured in the comic papers. His make-up in the third act as disclosed by the removal of the monster whisker that he effected throughout, which disclosed him in tights, was the height of absurdity, but it was reached with such cleverness of acting and situation that it stood out as a gem in comedy work.

"Harry Damask," son-in-law to "Prof. Babbitt," who became mixed up in a compromising manner with the old man in his deception of the domineering wife to satisfy his theatrical aspirations as an author, was acted by William T. Pelitier in a breezy manner. Mr. Pelitier's part required him to act naturally without resorting to dramatic artifices, and he succeeded finely.

Frank W. Iredell, as "Jack Mulberry," was seen to good advantage and sustained his part excellently. As one who has had experience in college dramatics, considerable was expected of Frederick W. Goddard as "Lord Mulberry." He acted the part of the nervous, pestilous Englishman in characteristic manner.

As the stern wife, whose unexpected arrival home put the Professor in a plight that carried the action of the play to the humorous climaxes for three acts, Mrs. Frank W. Iredell displayed a true conception of vigorous, iron-willed wife.

Mrs. W. L. Saunders added to her laurels already won by amateur acting. In the part of "Nina," the youngest imp of the Professor's household, she showed an exacting idea of the character, and carried it out in the energetic, free and easy manner intended by the playwright.

As "Angelica Damask," the eldest daughter of the Professor, who was the counterpart of her mother, Miss

CHARGED SON WITH STEALING A HORSE.

But Justice Smalley Dismissed Complaint Made Against the Son. Rolindo Smalley.

IT HAPPENED SATURDAY.

SON CLAIMED THAT FATHER WAS UNABLE TO CARE FOR HORSE.

Boy Young Smalley Took Possession of the Horse Belonging to His Father, John Smalley, to Keep it Until Father Was in Condition.

The charge of horse stealing brought against Rolindo Smalley by his father, John Smalley, of South Second street, was dismissed last Tuesday by Justice David D. Smalley after a hearing in the case. Harry Illsley, against whom Smalley made the same charge, was released as soon as the Judge heard the bare facts of the case.

The trouble which led to the arrest of the son on the complaint of the father was over a horse belonging to the elder Smalley. The son alleges that his father had been drinking last week and was in no condition to care for the horse. Furthermore the son declares that the father tried to sell the horse for almost nothing.

Saturday afternoon young Smalley went out to find his father, having learned of his condition. He was accompanied by Harry Illsley, at whose house on South Second street young Smalley boards. They found the horse stabled in George Feller's barn on Pearl street.

The son hitched up the horse and started to take it away when the father appeared. Young Smalley explained that he was going to take the animal away until the elder man was able to look after it properly. John Smalley objected, but the son took the horse and departed, afterwards stabling it in Cole's livery stable.

A warrant for Justice Smalley and young Smalley and Illsley were arrested yesterday morning by Constable Pangborn. They gave bonds for their appearance at the hearing last night. At the hearing J. P. D. Kirch represented the father, and Francis J. Blatz, of the law firm of Murphy & Blatz, represented the others.

Several witnesses were sworn and the substance of all their testimony was that the son had gone after the horse and taken it despite the father's objections, but that the latter had made no interference. Kirch held that it was theft, because the horse had been taken without the owner's consent. Blatz argued that no felonious intent had been shown, and that the son was justified in taking charge of the horse when the father was not in condition to care for it. The Justice took Lawyer Blatz's view of the matter and dismissed the complaint. As Illsley had nothing to do with it, he was dismissed early in in the proceedings.

Gov. Voorhees' Gift.

Some weeks ago Gov. Foster M. Voorhees promised to give $5,000 to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed church of America, on condition that the remainder of the debt of $40,000 was raised by May 1st. The board failed to raise the amount. Yesterday morning Gov. Voorhees sent word raising his gift of $5,000 to $9,000 and making it unconditional.

Death of Peter S. Skillman.

Peter S. Skillman, aged 73 years, a resident of Plainfield for many years, died last Tuesday at the home of his son, Lewis B. Skillman, 1326 Watchung avenue, where he had been making his home. He came here from Clover Hill, N. J., and services will be held from the Reformed church, that place, Friday afternoon next at 3:30 o'clock. Services will also be held from the residence of his son in Watchung avenue the same afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Moving the Dyer House.

The Dyer house on Craig place that is being moved to the corner of Craig place and Grove street, has been taken from its foundations and is now in the street. The borough officials have given the movers five days to get it on its new foundation. So that no damage may result to the trees in the moving of the house the workmen have used large cables in pulling the branches away from the house.

HORSE MET DEATH IN BLAZING BARN.

Alex. Kane's Barn and Stable on Filmore Avenue Destroyed by Fire Tuesday.

CAUSE OF FIRE NOT KNOWN.

KANE RESCUED ONE HORSE AFTER MUCH DIFFICULTY.

Owner Believes That Tramps Are Responsible For the Conflagration—The Loss Will Reach $1200 and is Covered by Insurance.

Flames sprang up from some unknown origin and destroyed the barn and stable in the rear of the home of Alex. Kane, of Filmore avenue, near East Third street, last Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock. Mr. Kane saved one of his horses but the other was burned to death while he was trying to prevent the first from rushing back into the burning building. The loss is estimated at $750, and is fully covered by insurance.

The owner of the place is positive that the buildings were set on fire by tramps. For the last two mornings he says he has found the door to the barn open when he had carefully closed it at night. He thinks that tramps used the place as a sleeping place. The firemen do not believe that the blaze was the work of incendiaries.

Kane had retired when he was alarmed by his wife with the intelligence that the barn was afire. She had seen the flames from an upper window. Dressing hastily he hurried outside and shouted to a boy who was passing to send in an alarm. Then he went into the stable after the horses. He led one of them out in safety and gave it to his wife to hold. The frightened equine broke away and ran back into the stable again. Kane again rescued the horse and led it away to a place of safety.

When he returned the other horse had broken loose from the stall and started to rush through the open door. It fell just at the entrance and was soon covered with burned debris. Meanwhile the fire had been seen by Patrolman Vanderweg on Washington street. He sent in an alarm from box 15 and the department responded promptly.

The burning building made a bright blaze and attracted many people to the scene. The firemen laid in two lines of hose and soon had the flames under control. One of the buildings of the vacant oil-cloth factory near by caught fire but was extinguished before much damage was done.

The barn and stable were completely wrecked and the contents entirely destroyed. Besides the horse, there was a quantity of harness, feed and bags. The horse is valued at $150, the harness and other contents at $100, and the buildings at $600. Everything was insured.

MAY GO IN AS PARTNERS.

Probability That Sisser and Hauck Will Start the New Borough Saloon Together.

There seems to be good prospects that the trouble existing between James Sisser, who secured the liquor license to open a place on Somerset street, near the bridge, and Charles Hauck, the owner of the building, will be settled. It is reported that the two men will probably form a partnership and open the place together. Sisser applied to the court recently to have his license money refunded, stating that he would give up the license. This the court could not do according to law, as the money had passed through the various channels, and the borough has received its share of it.

It was then learned that unless the men agreed to a partnership the place might never be opened and thus no benefit from the money paid in would be received. It is this fact more than anything else that is having a tendency to bring about a settlement.

The place is still guarded by Mr. Hauck and his friends to prevent Sisser taking possession. Not since the fuss began has any work been done toward refitting the place and making it ready for business. Mr. Sisser has been in Plainfield several times recently, but each time the interested parties could not seem to agree. It is believed the lawyers will effect the desired settlement.

Fixing Up.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company's extension to Scotch Plains has been the means of effecting a number of improvements. The property owners along the line have been led to fix up their properties and they present an attractive appearance.

BUILDING NEW TROLLEY

OVER 3,500 FEET OF TRACK LAID FOR ARLINGTON AVE. EXTENSION.

Line Between Park Avenue and Fourth Street Will be Completed This Week.

In another day or two the Arlington avenue extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company will be completed between Park avenue and West Fourth street. For nearly a week now a gang of several score men have been at work on the new trolley road. At noon today they had laid over 3,500 feet of track.

The contract for the construction of the road is held by J. D. Murray. J. N. Crawford, his superintendent of construction, arrived last Thursday and took charge of the work at once. The laying of the rails began on Randolph road, West of Park avenue, and continued out to Arlington avenue and down that thoroughfare.

The track is now laid to West Seventh street while the ground has been broken as far down as West Fifth street. West Eighth and Ninth streets were temporarily closed during the day while the necessary excavation was made for the track and the rails laid.

There is a sufficient supply of rails and other material on hand to complete the line down Arlington avenue to Fourth street. After that the operations will be given their attention to the upper end of the line. If there is no delay there in the matter of supplies, the entire line is likely to be completed in two weeks. At present a gang of seventy-five men are at work but that number may be increased. Patsy Christmas is supplying the labor.

PLEASANT BLOSSOM RIDE.

Charming Trip Made by Party of Plainfield Gentlemen to Morristown.

There is probably no more ardent lover of a fine pair of horses and up-to-date road turnouts in Plainfield than Ed. Scott, of Scott's Corner, and on Tuesday he invited three personal friends, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, J. P. Lake and the writer to take a "blossom ride" to Morristown in his stylish trap behind his fine bay team "Jack" and "Molly." The day was an ideal one and so was the ride. At Morristown a well served dinner was thoroughly enjoyed at the U. S. Hotel. Then a call was made at the parsonage of Rev. Dr. MacNaughton, pastor of the beautiful new First Presbyterian church, recently erected, costing $140,000; not including the grounds. The genial pastor showed the party all through the beautiful edifice, which is perhaps the handsomest church in the State.

From thence a visit was made to the Washington headquarters, a beautiful well-kept property. The house is filled with interesting relics of General Washington and the revolutionary war, and a person could spend a whole day at this place and be well repaid in looking at the thousands of antique articles on exhibition. Before leaving for home the party called on James E. White, father of Edward White, of this city, who is one of Morristown's dry goods merchants, and were pleasantly received by that gentlemen. The ride home just before sunset was thoroughly enjoyed by those present, as was the whole day, and Mr. Scott's generous "outing" very much appreciated.

No New Cases of Fever.

No new cases of scarlet fever have been reported to the Board of Health since yesterday and no new cases are expected at present. There is absolutely nothing new regarding it, all inquiries being made to ascertain the cause for the spread of the disease. However, the Board of Health has not given the matter up and they hope soon to locate the cause for it. No new cases have been reported in the borough since yesterday, and those who have the fever are doing well. Senator Reed has not the fever, as reported, and he expects to be out 4th in a few days.

There are now eleven cases of scarlet fever in the borough, one new case being reported yesterday. This new case is on Watchung avenue and is not considered serious.

Business Club Officers.

The following officers have been chosen by the Business Club for the coming year: President, Mrs. Horace Kimball; vice-presidents, Mrs. Israel Pierson, Mrs. A. S. Patterson; treasurer and secretary, Mrs. H. L. Halloway.

FEW PLAINFIELDERS IN COURT THIS TERM.

Light Calendar in Union County Court Shows Small Percentage of Plainfielder Involved.

ONE CASE WAS SETTLED.

LIST OF CAUSES TO BE TRIED OF INTEREST TO THIS CITY.

Justice Meeker Furnishes Five Out of the Nine Justice Appeal Cases—Others Come From Justices Moffett's, Toomey's and Others.

Elizabeth, May 3—The present term of the Union county courts, which opened yesterday morning, promises to be the dullest for several years. The calendar usually contains a number of cases of general interest and Plainfield generally figures quite prominently. This term there are very few Plainfield people involved in the suits that are booked for the term.

Out of the twenty-one Supreme Court cases listed for this term only thirteen will come to trial. Of that number only one is of interest to Plainfield. The other Plainfield case, Arthur A. Parker against Robert B. Strong, et al, on contract, has been settled. C. M. Vreeland represented the plaintiff and Craig A. Marsh the defendant. The case to come up for trial is that of Benj. W. Jones against Charles Chapot, et al, on contract. Corbin and Corbin represent the plaintiff and Codington and Swackhamer the defendant.

There will be three cases of interest to Plainfield to be tried in the Circuit Court. They are Edward Rushmore against James Dawe, on contract, mechanics' lien, Isaac P. Runyon for plaintiff and W. S. Angleman for defendant; Charles H. Angleman, assignee, against Wm. B. Brokaw, on contract, W. S. Angleman for plaintiff and Reed & Coddington for the defendant; Charles K. Moore against John R. Moore, on contract, William Sawcutz for the plaintiff and Frank Bergen for the defendant.

Only one Justice Jury appeal case is down on the calendar. It is that of Parkas against Frucht, appealed from Justice Moffett's court, Plainfield.

Out of the nine Justice appeal cases, five come from Justice Moeber's court in Plainfield. They are the cases of Ettinger against Kane, Beekman against Yates, Pearson against Peterson, Hargraves against Brokaw, Hand against Kuntzman. The other appeals were one from decision of Justice Moffett in Plainfield; two from decision of Justice Toomey in Westfield, and one from a decision of Justice Mendell in Rahway. At the last term of court seven out of eleven Justice appeal cases were appealed from decisions made by Justice Moeber, of Plainfield.

Judge VanSicklen announced yesterday that there would be no more appeals from decisions or verdicts rendered in the District Court or in the Circuit Court. All such must now be certiorarted to the Supreme Court, to which they can only be submitted on questions of law and not of fact.

This practically will have the effect of making appeals from decisions in the District Court impossible, unless points of law are involved, and puts an end to the number of District Court appeal cases that have been in the habit of appearing on the calendar for trial at every term of the Circuit Court.

Another Fine Residence.

Another addition to Plainfield's valuable collection of handsome residences will in a few months be a reality. Charles W. McCutchen is erecting a new house on Madison avenue, near Stelle avenue, which will cost between $6,000 and $7,000. A. L. C. Marsh is the architect. When the residence is completed in November it will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Beebe.

Valuable Data Being Secured.

Under the direction of Borough Health Inspector William Pangborn a list of the names of every borough milkman, his customers, and other data concerning his business is being secured to be used in the future. The plan was adopted by the city some time ago and is working satisfactorily.

Much Business for Council.

Much business of importance will be considered at the regular May meeting of the Borough Council Friday evening. The sidewalk ordinance will come up for its third reading and will probably be passed.

Organ Recital.

Wm. H. Miller will give a free public recital on the grand organ at the First Presbyterian church this evening, commencing at 8 o'clock.

THE OLDEST MASON.

Adna Adams Treat Has Belonged to the Order Since 1823.

In Many Other Respects He Is Also One of the Most Remarkable Men Now Living—Written Poetry at the Age of 160.

Adna Adams Treat, of Denver, Col., is doubtless the oldest man in the world who is a mason, and by many of his friends it is claimed, since the death of John Blackman, of Derby, Conn., that he is the oldest mason in the world. This Mr. Treat does not claim, as it is said that William E. Cook, of Portsmouth, R. I., although a younger man in years, has still been a mason for years longer than Mr. Treat, who took the oath and went through initiation in February of 1823.

If not the man who has longest been a member of the order, Mr. Treat is certainly the oldest man in the masonic order in the world to-day. He is a fine, patriarchal old gentleman of the type seen all too seldom in these latter days. He is now in his one hundred and third year, and his mental vigor is remarkable. Mr. Treat has been a mason now nearly 77 years, and to the present day his interest and loyalty to the order has never wavered. His masonic record is as follows: Initiated in Apollo Lodge, No. 15, at Troy, N. Y., on February 4, 1823; passed to the degree of F. C. February 7, 1825, and raised to the sublime degree of M. M. on February 21, 1823. On December 25, 1825, he was elected J. W., and on December 5, 1826, was chosen W. M. of his lodge. One of Mr. Treat's treasures is a certificate of life membership in his old lodge.

Mr. Treat was one of a committee appointed by his lodge in 1824 to receive the marquis of Lafayette on the occasion of his visit to Troy, N. Y. Mr. Treat remembers every incident of that memorable occasion as if it were yesterday, and talks most entertainingly of the event. With a bright twinkle in his eye Mr. Treat says, apropos of Mr. Blackman's having belonged to the order longer than he: "At any rate, if I do grant that Mr. Blackman belonged to the order longer than I did, he could not say that he greeted Lafayette on his visit to this country. I was of the masonic company that hied him, and I can see him as plainly as if he stood before me to-day. As I recall the impressions made upon my mind of his appearance and address, he was of medium height, erect in figure, with fashions dress—in manner and appearance a French gentleman."

Mr. Treat was born in Hartford, Conn., April 8, 1797, and comes of Puritan stock. While yet a young man, with the consent of his parents, which was a necessary form in those olden days, he went to Troy, N. Y., where he lived for many years. Later in life he went to Ohio, where he reared his family of seven children. At the age of 60 Mr. Treat retired from active business, and for the past 17 years has resided with a daughter in Denver, who is the wife of a prominent physician. It was at the age of eight that Mr. Treat began to woo the muse. He commenced to rhyme for recreation, and for a number of birthdays past has written a poem for each occasion. His writing he his great delight now. Scarcely is one poem done than another is begun, and he is a poet of no mean ability. One of his best poems was written for Christmas of last year, and he is now at work on one for his birthday, which occurs in April.

Mr. Treat, says the Chicago Times-Herald, is perhaps the most remarkable case of longevity in the world at the present time. With strong mentality and vigorous mind out of proportion to his years, he is likely to still live a number of years unless an unforeseen accident occurs.

This remarkable man enjoys the unique distinction of living in each of the last three 100-year divisions of the Christian era. Born in April, 1797, he has lived two years in the 1700 period, all through the 100 years of the 1800 period and is now on the first year in the 1900 period. If he lives until the end of the year he will have lived in three centuries.

Were Never Called Slaves.

In southern homes before the war it was never the fashion to speak of slaves as slaves; they were called negroes or servants. Judge Waight, who walked with the remark "My people." In his household there were 40 of his people in 1760, 80 in 1770 and 135 in 1774. His hired white servants also and a number of European stewards and laborers, who came over under contract.

Money Wasted in Drink.

The average consumption of alcoholic drinks in England last year was at the rate of $100 worth per family of five.

Some of the Wonders Which We Are Showing the People of the World

OF ALL the nations at the Paris exposition, and every nation of the earth is represented there, the United States stands second to none but France in the excellency, variety and quantity of its exhibits. In liberal arts, in manufactures, in agriculture, in mining, in the fine arts, in every department this country has an exhibit of which we may well be proud, and which the American visitor will be glad to say: "It comes from my land."

Beginning at the United States government building, one of the most imposing governmental buildings at the exposition, down to the minutest detail of the individual exhibitor everything is perfect, and in keeping with the name and reputation of the great country which it represents.

The United States government building stands on that most elaborate of all the exposition thoroughfares, the Quay d'Orsay, with another frontage on the River Seine, and is a conspicuous structure among the buildings of all the great powers of the world. The building is a square 85 by 90 feet and 160 feet in height. While it is a picturesque and imposing structure, yet it is also a home for the American visitor to the fair. Inside it a large rotunda serves as a meeting place for friends. Opening off of this rotunda on three sides are rooms 13 by 36 feet. That on the left of the main entrance is used as a lounging room for men; that on the right for women, and that in the center as a parlor for both men and women. The second and fourth floors are given up to the various states of the union, where visitors may rest and register their names if they desire, while the third floor is reserved for the offices of the American commission.

UNITED STATES PAVILION AT PARIS.

There is probably no more beautiful entrance on the exposition grounds than that to the United States government building from the river front. It is under a large portico, which spans the esplanade, and under this every visitor who walks to the other national buildings is obliged to pass. In the center arch of this portico, facing the River Seine, is French's statue of Washington, while a bust of President McKinley occupies a niche over the door. In front of the building, on the river bank, there is a boat landing, highly ornamented as a classic barge. All the boats of the American line, which connect with the American trolley system at Vincennes make a landing at this pier.

The style of the exterior of the building is classic, and while different in design from any of the buildings at the Chicago fair, yet the school which prevailed there has been retained and will be in marked contrast to the present French buildings, which are not so architectural in treatment.

The interior decorations have been the subject of particular consideration by Commissioner General Peck. The national eagle, with outstretched wings, crowns its top, and over all the American flag has been unfurled to fly while the exposition shall finally close its doors.

But to the American visitor many attractions have been provided other than the building itself. Within its walls the visitor from the states will find his American newspapers, American guides, American stenographers to assist in his correspondence, his mail will be delivered to him from an American post office, and for the man of finance every U. S. American "ticker," giving the latest New York and Chicago stock quotations, will be in daily operation. In fact it is an American building throughout, made for the convenience and pleasure of the American people who visit the fair as well as a worthy representation of the American nation.

Among other American buildings at the Paris exposition none will be more prominent or more attractive to the visitors from all lands than that devoted to the publishers of this country and their interests. Just as the American newspaper is the wonder of the civilized world, so will the methods by which the newspaper, whether it be a large or small one, be of interest to the peoples of all lands. It is in a good location, being situated immediately adjoining the main exhibit palace in the Esplanade des Invalides, the palace in which are exhibited the manufactured products of the world, and which will be the central point of interest to the majority of exposition visitors.

Inside the building there is shown every modern device known to the American printing trades. There are typesetting machines of all the various kinds; there is a well-equipped commercial printing office, supplied with all the latest and best of the various type designs and the best of American commercial presses; electrotyping and stereotyping appliances in operation; a bookbinding plant, and the wonderfully made and interesting multiple newspaper presses turning out their thousands of printed sheets every hour. In this building will also be located the American publishers' headquarters, where Mr. Charles H. Simms, assistant director of liberal arts on the staff of Commissioner General Peck, will be in charge.

Another of the buildings of which the visitors from the states may well be proud, not so much because of the building itself, but because of the exhibits it contains, is the American machinery building, in which all classes of American machinery, designed for every conceivable purpose, are in constant operation. This exhibit will also be an attractive one for people from all lands, for our American machinery is to-day invading every portion of the globe where machinery is used.

Among the novel exhibits prepared by the government is that of the weather bureau. In this is given a thorough demonstration of the American method of determining the weather changes.

Still another is the American post office in the government building, fully equipped with every modern appliance for the rapid handling of mails and the convenience of the public. Here the visiting American will receive his mails each day, as Commissioner Peck has completed arrangements with the French authorities to deliver to the American commission all mail directed to American visitors at the exposition.

The agricultural department has an elaborate exhibit, which includes practically everything of interest connected with American agricultural systems and American agricultural products. Irrigation methods in the western states are shown. American grains and American meats are displayed in interesting and inviting ways, and the entire exhibit should do much to reduce the prejudice against American farm products in Europe.

Another government exhibit is a miniature American navy, with a fleet made up of exact models of such ships as the Olympia, the New York, the Oregon, the Iowa, the Massachusetts, the Boston, the Baltimore, the Minneapolis and the Maine. Such a display is bound to add to the respect for the fighting power of the nation.

There is a merchant marine exhibit, a mineral exhibit, a fresh fruit exhibit, and so many others that even to name them all one would have to go through the entire catalogue of the exposition.

FANCIES OF FASHION.

The Season's Millinery to Be of the Airy-Fairy Variety.

Suits, Clinging Materials Destined to Enjoy Great Favor—An Era of Tucking, Stitching, Plaiting and Appliqué.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

FASHION is going through all sorts of fantastic phases at the present moment, and it is a somewhat difficult matter to describe accurately what she is doing just now or to predict with any degree of certainty what her whimsical disposition may lead her into doing in the near future. It is reasonable to conclude, however, that the general fashions now in vogue will be the prevailing ones throughout the summer months.

For instance, the dainty headgear which first saw the light of day on Easter morn sounded the keynote of the coming fashions in millinery. With each succeeding day milliners are bringing out hats galore, one and all being more or less of the airy-fairy description. In fact, there never was a time when diaphanous materials played so important a part in the world of millinery as they do just now. Lace and chiffon are held in the highest favor, while tulle and fine net of every description are also in high favor. Flowing fashion and trimmed with insertions of lace, a vest of pame velvet in soft coloring and an inner chemisette of tucked silk.

The other model is made of crepe de laine in an exquisite shade of gray, trimmed with the all conquering chantilly lace, the bodice showing any number of charming features only to be seen in gowns hailing from gay Paris.

Smartly dressed women are wearing their skirts, boleros and short coats tucked and stitched in all directions. The furore for this style of ornamentation seems utterly without limit, and the same may be said of the new kilt and box plaitings.

The day of the severely plain tailored frock has passed, and nowadays no up-to-date tailor would think of turning out a gown that did not have its hard lines softened by the addition of lace or chiffon or the somewhat newer appliqué.

One of the prettiest forms of tailor trimming now in vogue is shown in an appliqué or lace silk outlined with chenille. It is particularly effective in boleros, and gives a charming finish to the entire gown, while not detracting a bit from its usefulness.

The jaunty little bolero is still a prime favorite with fashionably dressed women, and is perhaps seen at its best when made of black tucked taffeta, with nicely strapped seams and pouched ever so slightly, both back and front, by the addition of lace over, that newer by far than the ideal tucked bolero and really much more chic is the tight-fitting taffeta or strapped broadcloth coat, made with the shortest of basques and the tightest of sleeves. There is always to my mind something distinctly stylish and swell about the short coat, and I am often led to wonder why women of good taste wear any other kind.

The newest skirt, whether of cloth or silk, is made to fit flat at the top and very frou-frouing at the bottom. The cloth ones usually have three shaped flounces by way of trimming, while those fashioned of silk are mostly tucked and finished round the bottom by a series of accordion-plaited flounces.

A word about waists and I am done. White waists, figured silks and soft oriental crepes will take the place of the plain fabrics so much worn last summer. Some of these figures are very large and striking, and there seems a tendency to return to the large floral designs of several seasons ago. The waists made of crepe are finished off with a folded girdle of the same, with a belt and collar of crushed satin and closed with studs of real or imitation pearls.

Cost of Armorial Bearings.

It costs to have armorial bearings on either your carriage or your note paper, if you happen to live in London. For the first luxury the fee is £2 2s., for the second one guinea a year.

TWO DAINTY CREATIONS FOR EARLY SUMMER.

The picture hat reigns supreme, and when seen at its best has the brim softly lined with shirred chiffon, while the crown is composed entirely of small ostrich plumes. An air of extreme novelty pervades the headgear made of rose petals. This pretty fancy shows to particular advantage in a small French toque seen within the week, made entirely of pink rose petals, its sole trimming consisting of two rather large rosettes of black accordion-plaited chiffon held in place by tiny jeweled pins. The prettiest all black toques are of tulle, adorned by the lightest of lace wings profusely jetted. Large hats of finely-tucked silk tissue are to be reckoned among the sweetest things of the season, and if one can afford to invest a small fortune in headgear, a hat of this description is quite the thing to buy. With the coming warmer weather lovely hats of ivory white tulle will put in an appearance. The material on these dainty-looking hats is shirred, and tucked, and plaited in the most wonderful manner possible, and while fragile in the extreme, and having the appearance of being blown together, as it were, they really represent the highest workmanship and the most artistic skill to be found in the millinery world. When one remembers the hopeless manner in which tulle sticks to the fingers and how bedraggled and forlorn it looks when not absolutely fresh and clean, and the consequent waste thereof, the price of these models and altogether fetching hats, while not to be wondered at, places them beyond the reach of any but the plethoric purse.

The hat in the picture shows one of the latest and most popular shapes, and with a little careful manipulation a pinch here and a pat there will prove itself becoming to the majority of faces.

The chief object and aim of the fashionable modiste nowadays is to find something new and original, as well as smart and elegant, in the world of black, for the black gown still reigns the one par excellence, although there is at the present moment a slight prospect of a little lightening of this extreme somberness. It is to be hoped that this may prove to be the case, as black, although an ideal gowning, is not nearly so dainty and cool-looking for warm weather wear as a soft color.

Soft, clinging materials are destined to enjoy deserved favor. Crepe de chine and crepe de laine vie with each other in popularity, while French cashmere of an exquisite fineness is daily gaining in favor. Some of the handsomest gowns are made of the latter material, chief in attractiveness being the model illustrated. A description will give you a good idea of the prevailing styles. The skirt is made with a number of tiny tucks running downwards from the waist and fitting closely round the figure, while the lower part of the skirt is exceedingly full, the fullness is arranged in a very becoming fashion and trimmed with insertions of lace, a vest of pame velvet in soft coloring and an inner chemisette of tucked silk.

MUSIC as a Feature of the Public Schools of Chicago

Music in the primary public schools of Chicago is not confined to the traditional 15 minutes of "opening exercises" which have long been a part of the daily programme in many schools throughout the country. It is now recognized that there are few things more capable of exerting a more powerful influence upon a child's life than good music. The teaching to keep time to lively airs seems to have been "bred in the bone," so far as the majority of children are concerned. Teachers who, in the past, have frowned upon this subtle tendency have, according to the new order of things, learned greatly in this respect.

A New Use for Music in School.

In the great schools of Chicago the children of the second, third and fourth grades are taught to do their sums to the rhythmic strains of a march and to manipulate their drawing crayons to the fascinating measures of a two-step. By this method, it is said, they not only learn their lessons more easily, but absorb a foundation knowledge of music that is invaluable—a department in which the pupils of the past have been sadly deficient. But any mode which becomes a craze invariably gets passe in a short time, and unless one can afford to change this expensive trimming at the first wink of capricious Dame Fashion it is best to stick to floral decorations or, better still, the ever becoming and modish ostrich feathers.

Methods of Studying Music.

The new system in vogue in some of the public schools of Chicago, which gives to music a place of more prominence than has previously been accorded to it, is rapidly being adopted by the lower grade teachers throughout the city. The realization that music as a study should come in for more attention than it has in the past, is keen. Heretofore, however, the teacher has been at a loss to know how to introduce it without detriment to other studies. The fact that it may be taught easily, and at the same time become an important aid to the general education of the children of the lower grades was fully illustrated in a recent musical institute given by the children of the Alcott school.

The Blessing of Sunshine Music.

As the pianist began the playing of a lively march the pupils from one of the rooms came tripping into the big hall by twos. When in their seats in their seats the teacher stepped before them, held her finger up for a sign, and a humming sound, at first scarcely audible, but swelling into volume as it progressed, followed the motion of her hand. When the whole school was run. Then the pupils broke into a song about soap bubbles and acorn gathering; but there was no "make believe" here. A certain number of pupils, keeping time to the music, actually blew bubbles while the others sang. Surely this was not school! It was a child's Paradise! Everything to which the pupils put their hands was done to the rhythmic strains of music. A particularly pleasing scene was witnessed when the children were allowed to make valentines. Swiftly the scissors flew, and the notes from the piano seemed to be winged with the bright little clippings of paper which flittered to the floor. Out of the medley there appeared first one and then another of the finished valentines—before the piece was ended, there were a score or more of cupid's missives as dainty and beautiful as one could wish to see.

Teaching the Rhythm.

The theory upon which the new method of teaching music, as introduced into the Chicago schools, is based, is the fact that children will quickest learn the principles of music by learning the rhythm of it; for the rhythm of those things which they are accustomed to doing, but keeping time meanwhile to the measures of a march or other lively piece of music. That the new scheme is a success so far as the teaching of music (to a trained crowd of youngsters) is concerned, was demonstrated at the recent musical institute given by the children.

Many severe tests were made upon the pupils, but each was met with apparent ease. For example, notes were struck at random upon a xylophone, and the pupils were able to write immediately upon the blackboard the notes which had been sounded, designating them, however, by numbers instead of names. A table was brought in upon which were arranged bells, whistles and rattles of various kinds, the sounds from many of them being very similar. The pupils were asked to close their eyes while the teacher operated several of the toys. This done she would indicate a pupil by name, and the latter, stepping to the table, would repeat the operation, rarely failing to reproduce the series of sounds he had heard. The various tests, together with the pupils' apparent familiarity with the more simple terms of musical parlance, proved beyond question that the general tone of the public schools with regard to music is capable of very marked improvement.

Patriotism and Music.

The teaching of patriotism is by no means neglected by the advocates of the new system of music instruction as adopted by the public schools of Chicago. In the musical institute given by the children of the Alcott school there was note more stirring feature of the programme than the drawing of the stars and stripes with red, white and blue crayons. Under the spell of the inspiring notes of "The Star Spangled Banner" the children plied the chalk with a spirit of enthusiasm that was contagious and not lost upon the audience. Not a motion was made which was not in perfect time with the music. First there appeared a blue field; it became dotted with stars, and then, under the practiced strokes of a sturdy young patriot, the graceful folds of the waving stripes were delineated. A single stroke gave the flag a staff and the drawing was finished. In the same manner rows of bright and other flowers were drawn with a rapidity and accuracy which would have done credit to pupils of more advanced years. A most noticeable and sightliest feature of the demonstration was the expression of serious earnestness which was depicted upon each chubby face, and it is safe to say that there was not a moment in the proceedings when the interest of the pupils lagged in the slightest degree.

Keeping Time to the Music.

The institute was given under the supervision of Miss M. Elizabeth Farson, district superintendent of schools in charge of District No. 1, who seems to be the patron saint of new and novel methods designed for the benefit of the children of the lower grades, to lessen the labor of teachers and at the same time to raise the standard of the school so far as the prestige in an intellectual way is concerned.

"Short Cuts" of the City.

It is often urged by parents that many of the new methods which are finding their way into the daily school life of the country at large and particularly of the great cities, are based upon sheer nonsense and an unfortunate notion of the vital needs of the American youth of to-day. It is not to be denied that an effort is being made in this direction, which has grown rapidly to such marvelous proportions as has the public school system in America is liable occasionally to suffer as the result of such a tendency to go to extremes. This is the more true from the fact that past growth along the lines of the development of educational facilities has come as the result of repeated experiments some of which very naturally have not proved successful. Consequently the general drift of new aids has been in the line of progress, and in most instances they have demonstrated their right to become incorporated in the daily work of the school.

Trudging Along the Dusty Road.

It is undoubtedly true that there is as much virtue in good, hard, honest study to-day as there was in the days when a greater proportion of the pupils of America were compelled to trudge daily along the dusty highway to the "little red schoolhouse," it cannot be denied that new methods have tended to make the pupil alert to take advantage of many "short cuts" which were wholly unrevealed to the studious youngster of the district school. Therefore, the work of the pupils of the modern school seems less laborious than did the school work in the days when, from every schoolroom, there came a sound like the swarming of bees. It does not follow that the modern youngster will be lacking in the qualities which go to make a good citizen.

Forerunning Ideas In Wraps—Children's Styles.

The class of wrap called visite is revived for the elderly women and is very dignified and elegant when composed of fine cloth embroidered with soutache or of silk effects trimmed with lace.

Fluted capes, with capothons and woolen fringe, continue to be in great demand for traveling, excursions and all purposes where a warm, serviceable and easily adjusted wrap is required. To a great extent they take the places of the shawl, which the last generation found so useful. They are worn by young girls as well as women.

For children the long cloak, the loose sack and the jacket are seen. In the case of older girls the figure is also employed, while the skirt of the gown is plaited, and the chemisette and high mantel belt are added to the wardrobe.

Plain cloth, plaids in different shades of the same color, checked woolens and bengaline are all fashionable materials for children's wear.

Today's cut shows a girl's costume of silver gray cloth. The skirt is laid in stitched plaits, and the bodice and sleeves are also plaited, the folds of the latter being horizontal. There is a short bolero of guipure, which forms epaulets and is secured in front by a chou of velvet and a jeweled button. The plaited collar is of bengaline, the belt of velvet, with a chou and long ends hanging at the back.

mer, ornamented at the ends by large tucks in which satin ribbons are run. Embroidered and fringed scarfs of crepe de chine are also to be used. Nothing is prettier than these large, soft scarfs, the knot of which is sometimes fastened by a jeweled ornament. They are partially pleasing with the full length bone stoques. There are cravats composed of tuscales of mousseline de soie or dentelle, the ends of which are fastened in the belt, which are more suitable for wear with the bolero or short jacket.

A picture is given of a short jacket of black cloth. It is closed at the side by a fly, and all the edges are finished by a band of stitched white cloth. The collar and cuffs are of white cloth with a facing of black velvet, and the pockets are of black velvet. The hat of spangled black net has white feathers at the side.

Various Teas.

There are various kinds of tea which, though not fraudulent manufactures, are not made of the real leaf. In Mauritius they make tea of the leaves of an orchid. In Peru they drink mate, a tea made from a native species of holly. The Abyssinians make a tea from the leaves of the Catha edulis, which has such stimulating qualities that even a leaf or two of it chewed have all the reviving effects of "the cup that cheers."

tones are also shown and are immensely trimmed with crepe de chine, mousseline de soie and chiffon.

Fruit is the season's chief millinery novelty. Grapes—blue, purple and green —with foliage, are first favorites, and next come cherries in all the natural shades. There are also charming wreaths and trails of strawberries, fruit and leaves together, which are most effective on wide brimmed straw hats of the rustic order. Among flowers immense roses, poppies and orchids predominate. Foliage is well represented, both plain and variegated, and a great deal of maidenhair fern is used. Violets, so long a favorite, still retain their prestige.

Tulle with flat velvet spots are more worn than those with chenille dots, but the velvet particles, which are only stuck on the net, are apt to drop off, while the chenille dots, which are woven into the tissue, retain their position.

A picture is given of a hat of toulle lace straw. It has a wreath of violets, and the brim, which is much rippled and twisted, is lined with shirred mauve mousseline de soie. In front is a chou of violets, the stems of which are turned upward to form an erect aigret. This hat accompanies a tailor made gown of fawn cloth, trimmed with large pearl buttons.

Arrangement of Dining Tables—Suggestions For the Wedding Costume.

For ball suppers small tables have entirely replaced large ones. The way of signifying the different tables by letters or numbers often each table is decorated with a different variety of flower, the guests being supplied with small bouquets of flowers like those worn upon the table at which they are to sit.

The wreath of orange blossoms worn by a bride is becoming smaller and smaller, and consists of a smaller proportion of flowers and more leaves. These must be of the best quality to look well.

When widows marry again, they do not wear white or black, but choose pale gray or mauve. Bridal gowns of any kind are usually of the princess form. If not, the bodice is full, the blouse form being absolutely proscribed.

The picture shows a princess gown of pastel red satin cloth. A scant circular flounce cut to points at the edge and bound with black velvet is placed at the foot of the skirt. Black velvet galloon embroidered with jet hents the bounce, and a band of it is carried up the left side of the skirt and bodice. The cicage has a collar and triple revers bordered with galloon, and the wrists of the pointed tight sleeves are also bordered with galloon. The guimpe and high collar are of venetian point over white satin. The toque of red grosgrain is trimmed with a big bow and a feather.

NEW STYLES.

Novel Ideas For Cloth and Other Gowns.

Some of the most elegant among the new costumes are worn with a redingote which is a sort of long, tight redingote laid in plaits at the back and with a train like a skirt. In front it opens over the tablier of a separate skirt. These polonaises are made of cream of linen, liberty foulard and Louis Quinze taffeta and also in plaisper style for cloth costumes, being embellished with stitching, straps or folds of satin and worn over a skirt of the same material.

Embroideries and all sorts of rich accessories are now employed upon cloth gowns, making them of great elegance. On the other hand, the newest tailor made gowns are of penn de sole, cut in the most severe and correct style. The skirt is plain except for stitched straps over the seams. The jacket is closed by a fly and has stitched revers and straps upon the seams and absolutely no other ornament. This is the extreme of fashion. Taffeta jackets of the same uncompromising character are appearing as a wrap for general use.

The illustration shows a costume of lilac voile. The skirt has two scant circular flounces at the foot, bordered with stitching and headed by a band of violet satin. It closes at the left side under a band of violet satin and is ornamented at the back with stitched shirrings. The bodice is gathered at the belt behind and plaited diagonally in front and has a plastron closed at the side by ornamental buttons on a violet satin band. The top of the bodice has two scant circular ruffles with stitched edges and headed by violet satin, and the tight sleeves have bands of satin at the wrist. The belt is of satin, the collar of guipure. The hat of lilac straw is trimmed with lilac tulle fastened by a pearl buckle. A white quill and a cluster of azaleas complete the decoration. SUMMER HATS.

Airy Materials and Trimmings For Millinery Purposes.

Thin, transparent tissues are in great favor in the millinery world. Gauze, tulle, lace, lace straws and braids made of horsehair are all used in abundance, with quantities of flowers and foliage.

An immense variety of shape and style is seen in headgear. There are tiny toques of tulle, large drooping hats, wide brimmed hats, hats with almost no brim, hats with a flower crown and straw brim, and vice versa; high crowns, low crowns, turbans of taffeta, sailor hats and toques, all of straw, with straw trimmings.

Toques composed entirely of violets, roses or poppies are worn with elegant costumes, a drapery of tulle being the only trimming.

On hats of tulle, horsehair braid and lace straw very delicate flowers are used, such as morning glories, lilacs, pompon roses, bluets and hyacinths, mingled with tulle and lace.

Apricots of velvet are now seen and are in excellent imitation of the natural fruit, destined to ornament large hats of La Valliere style, in combination with flowers.

The elderly ladies the capote of jet spangles is preferred and is trimmed with wallflowers, violets and hyacinths, with sprays of the lily of the valley and daisies are consecrated to young girls.

The hat shown in the cut is of pale mauve straw, the brim being rippled. At the back is an immense flower of the same kind of straw, which raises the brim and rests upon the hair. A thick garland of pale pink moss roses passes forward being each side of the crown, disappearing toward the front.

SUMMER FASHIONS.

Continuance of Forms Already Established In Favor.

The bolero and figure remain in favor for both walking and evening gowns. They are seen in lace, velvet and cloth, sometimes one, sometimes all draped or plain, open or closed. In spite of the long continuation of this style, it is still seen among the best and newest models and is varied by many ways of trimming and by the method of cut.

Bolleros cut down in round or other form over a guimpe are still worn. They open in front or at the side and are draped or, tight. The trimming often consists of revers, although fringed fichus outlining the guimpe are much used for this goods.

Skirts with lengthwise plaits and tucks are extensively shown, but the fashion is one not likely to be long lived. The plaits are very fine and extend only to the depth of the knee, the foot of the skirt being left free.

Princess gowns, opening over a tablier, are a feature of the new styles. The polonaise is cut in scallops or points or is finished with a flounce or silk fringe.

An illustration is given which shows a princess gown of blond cloth, very light and soft. It is laid in stitched plaits from the yoke to the knee, the foot of the long skirt being bordered with a band of stitched cloth. There is a pointed yoke of guipure, encircled by a guipure bertha. The plain, tight sleeves are laid at the wrist and are edged with a fine band of guipure. This gown is made over a plain princess lining of silk, and the extra thickness of the folds on the flowing side of the cloth is cut away so as to insure a perfect fit and avoid clumsiness.

OUTER GARMENTS.

Newest Styles in Jackets and Wraps. The Long Sack.

The loose sack seems to have established itself as a hard service wrap, and it is undoubtedly convenient, although ugly. It becomes more or less tall, stately women with a dignified carriage and no superfluous flesh. Upon a small woman it loses all attraction, and on a stout one it is absurd. The flaring collar and large revers give it a stiff, stylish appearance, and for traveling it is decidedly useful.

To most figures the short jacket, tight at the back and tight or loose in front, is more becoming than anything else. This never goes out of fashion, although the basque, revers and sleeves vary a little from year to year. When it is trimmed at all this must be enough by stitching or straps, the decoration usually consists of round ends, which form a design in relief.

The long redingote holds its own. It is adorned with stitching, which often simulates a round pelerine at the shoulders.

The latest form of the cape, for use with elegant toilets, is short at the back and sides and has long semi fronts reaching to the feet of the gown. These capes are covered with lace, beads and spangles and are very elaborate.

The cut shows a new jacket of mastic cloth. It is half fitting at the back and straight in front, entirely bordered with air rows of stitching. The collar and cuffs are very large, and there is a deep pelerine with stitched straps at the shoulders. The lining is of light brocaded silk. The large straw hat has a twisted brim and is trimmed with pinmoss. A fringed scarf of velvet is arranged beneath the brim, over the hair, in the Spanish style.

THE MODE.

Skirts Illustrate the Retirement of Long and Short-ness.

Skirts, instead of becoming shorter, seem to be growing longer. This has led the more conservative dressers to adopt a walking costume which escapes the ground by several inches. The skirt of fashionable models on promenade is usually full, but destruction, they decide to have a costume for that special purpose made in a suitable way, and thus the change has come about. Generally speaking, however, skirts are very long all around, with a decided train. Even the dress of young girls feels the influence of the style, and reaches the feet instead of ending at the heel tops.

There is far greater variety perceptible in the fashionable costumes of today than in that of years past. This tendency to eclecticism has been steadily increasing for a long time, and, as a result, more women are becomingly and appropriately clothed than when everybody blindly followed a fashion because it was the mode, regardless of its suitability or sense.

A picture is given showing a tailor made costume of cloth. The skirt is plain in front and laid in stitched plaits at the sides and back. The double bolero is short and is bordered with stitching, as are the two polonaises. The collar and revers are faced with velvet. The upper half of the sleeve is laid in stitched plaits, and the bolero can be worn open or closed by small gold buttons. The high corselet belt is of velvet. The collar, cravat and plastron are of silk. The hat of fancy straw has a ripplebrim and is trimmed with bows of velvet and a cluster of flowers.

THE WARDROBE.

Pretty Additions to the Warm Weather Outfit.

A fluffy cravat does a great deal toward making a new plainest of costumes, and a variety of such accessories widens the range of the wardrobe wonderfully where only a few gowns can be afforded. Numerous delectations about the neck and shoulders have long been the mode, and, as they are usually very becoming, it is to be supposed prospect that they will be abandoned.

*Stitched plaits have invaded the de*tails of wraps, and now there are straight sacks thus made, to be worn with a skirt of the same character.

Crepe de chine and bengaline are among the favorite summer materials. They come in all the bright and delicate colors and are of double width. Few fabrics are more charming than these, which have just enough wool in them to make the folds stand well, while without a tendency to crush and become stringy.

The illustration shows a costume of gray cloth. The tablier of the skirt is covered with fine braiding, and there are pointed tabs at the top, with ornamental stitching. The tight bodice has a full plastron of red cloth laid in plaits, while over the shoulders are three stitched bands, forming a sort of triple pelerine. Each band is edged with plaits, and one fastens the stitched collar. The belt is also stitched and secured at the back by buttons. The hat of black straw is faced with red velvet and has the same braid and with cogwilles of lace and tulle, while at the left side are two black plumes. JUDGE CHOLLEY.

FRENCH BLOOD IN AFRICA.

Why Gallic Names Are Found Among the Boers of the Transvaal.

We are accustomed to look upon the Boers as being entirely of Dutch extraction, but, in reality, there is a leaven of French blood among them, and, indeed, there are French names among them still, such as Joubert, Du Plessis, Duplessis, Le Roux, Hugo and many others. Probably there are few Afrikanders without a mixture of French blood in their veins. How did this French blood mix with that of Holland? Through a colony of French Huguenots who settled in South Africa as long ago. The actual colonization of South Africa did not begin until 1652, when a small colony settled on Table bay and at Cape Town. This colony was founded by an officer of the Dutch East India company.

The population of the young colony increased but slowly, and was probably not more than 400 in 1685, the year in which Louis XIV. issued a decree revoking the edict of Nantes, under which the Huguenots had enjoyed freedom and toleration. A cruel and vigorous persecution followed and many of the Huguenots escaped to Holland. A proposal was made to send some of these to South Africa, but the Dutch of the East India company feared it might be dangerous to their interests to harbor a large number of French subjects in their South African colony, so only a select few of the Huguenots and such as were skilled in such branches of agriculture and other industries as the Dutch settlers were ignorant of were sent over, in all about 200 souls.

Before leaving Holland the heads of the Huguenot families were required to take an oath of fidelity to the Dutch East India company and to promise to conform to all regulations which might subsequently be made for the South African settlement.

These Huguenots were undoubtedly the best settlers the colony had received, and in point of numbers they were nearly equal to the original Dutch settlers. They were superior to the latter in industrial attainments, and the amenities of life and soon made their influence felt in the colony.

The rule of the Dutch East India company was tyrannical and corrupt and the result was that difficulties arose between the governor and the French settlers, who on several occasions made a bold and more or less successful stand for their rights. Wherever in the subsequent history of the colony principles had to be asserted, the descendants of the Huguenots have been well to the front. In the late '20s it was a man with a French name, Peter Retief, who raised his voice in protest against the tyranny of the British authorities in connection with the emancipation of the South African slaves and the native question in general. This protest was followed by the migration of about 6,000 colonists into the desert, and this migration laid the foundation of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State.—St. Louis Republic.

A GIRL'S REVENGE.

How Cleverness In Getting Even with Some Smart Young Men in a Street Car.

As soon as the good-looking girl entered the car the five young men on the opposite seat began surveying her with critical eye, and she hadn't yet made out whether the bald-headed man with the medical magazine was to be included in the lot, when the conductor came in for his fare. The girl opened her portmonnaie and began to take out latchkeys, samples of ribbon and little memorandum book, and the five young men smiled, each after his own particular style. Baldheaded was out of it. The girl didn't see any of the smiles, but she caught on just the same. There was a nickel all ready for the fare, but when one pale-faced young man added a giggle to his smile, the nickel was thrust aside for a two-dollar bill. She didn't hand it over to the conductor, as she talked it out, but after receiving a wide-spreading smile on her face, she began at the head of the line and asked:

"Will you please be so kind as to change this bill for me?"

It was irresistible. A young man with only a dime in his pocket has no show to bust a bill. The next one had a quarter, but he had to decline, and so it went to No. 5. His hand sought his pocket as his turn came, but it didn't bring up any change. The smiles had been replaced by sheepish looks, and they rubbed elbows and trod on each other's feet in trying to look out of the windows. There was a long minute of painful suspense, and then the pale-faced girl handed the bill to the conductor. She hadn't a word to say to the five young men who had started out in life so gayly, but the old bald-headed had. When all was said he turned half around and growled out:

"If I were you fellows I wouldn't try to be so blamed smart next time."—Philadelphia Press.

Strange Behavior of Fires.

In British central Africa rise cones of embers of the lumps of fuel on the surface of the water of Lake Nyassa. The natives living along the shores of the lake esteem these fires as a great delicacy, and when these extraordinary smokeless columns of incandescence rise they are hastily put out to be cooked up for food. They are then pounded up into cakes and made into a kind of bread.—N. Y. Journal.

MR. M'SWAT AS A COOK.

Nervethatcheding Exploits! Instructions He Makes a Dismal Failure of It.

The McSwat household was thrown into temporary confusion by the sudden adjournment, sine die, of the kitchen lady, a young woman of great force of character, who had learned of a place where the hours of work were shorter and the afternoons out longer and more frequent, and had gone to fill it.

"Now, Lobelia," said Mr. McSwat, as they were preparing to retire for the night, "if your headache isn't any better in the morning don't you hurry about getting up. I can manage the breakfast."

"You!" exclaimed Mrs. McSwat, with the contempt that every experienced housewife feels for the meddlesome masculine being who seeks to thrust himself into the affairs of the domestic cook-shop. "You! Why, Billiger, you don't know any more about cooking a breakfast than an old hen!"

"I'll show you," he retorted. "We have buckwheat cakes every morning, don't we? Well, you tell me how to manage them, and if I don't turn out as good an article of buckwheat cake as you ever put into your system I'll eat the griddle. What is the first thing you do?"

"Well, if you are bound to try your hand at it—but you've got to promise one thing. Will you do exactly what I tell you?"

"Of course I will. What do you take me for?"

"Then the first thing you do after you have got your fire all ready is to prepare the batter. It's in the stone jar on the kitchen table. There's always some left over after breakfast, and it leavens the batter for the next morning. Understand that?"

"Anybody can understand that. Go on."

"Well, I've fixed it for to-morrow morning. All you will have to do will be to thin it, put in a little soda, salt, and New Orleans molasses—"

"What is the molasses for?"

"Why, to make the cakes brown nicely, stupid."

"Don't you call names, madam. What else?"

"Have your griddle on the fire. You'll find the greaser in the little saucedish by the butter jar. Don't use too much grease—"

"How do I thin the batter?"

"I hadn't forgotten that. You take a cup of warm water—not hot, remember—stir in a small teaspoonful of soda, then add a quantity of salt, pour it in the batter, stir it slowly a minute or two, add the molasses—that's in a fruit jar in the pantry—and then bake a trial cake. If it lacks anything you can correct it by the further addition of what it lacks. Can you remember all that?"

"Remember all that!" said Mr. McSwat, with crushing disdain. "Do you call that anything to remember?"

"There's one thing more. You'll need the cake turner. It is in the drawer of the kitchen table. Now do you think manage it?"

His only reply was a soft snore.

About 6:30 the next morning Mr. Billiger McSwat might have been seen in his garret, clad in a suit of flannel.

He lighted the gas range, hunted up the griddle, put it over the fire, and approached the jar of batter.

Rolling up his sleeves he contemplated it in silence a moment, and then began operations.

The first thing he did, after hunting up the necessary groceries in the pantry and greasing the griddle, was to fill a teacup with water from the boiler, which, providentially, was still warm, and stir in a heaping tablespoonful of soda.

"I thi nk that's the quantity she prescribed," he said, cheerfully. "If it isn't enough I can put in more."

Then he added a tablespoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of the New Orleans molasses and poured the mixture into the batter jar.

He stirred the batter fiercely. It foamed up at once and ran out over the top of the jar.

"She never told me to put so much of the blamed stuff," he muttered, stirring it still more vigorously.

By this time the kitchen was filling with smoke.

Concluding that the griddle was hot enough he hastily lifted the jar, carried it to the stove and poured a quantity of the batter out on the smoking griddle through the spout on the side of the jar.

There was a tremendous simile.

"You bet it's hot enough!" he exclaimed. "Now where's the blooming cake turner?"

He could not find it.

"Never mind," he said. "I've seen my mother use a pancake knife."

When he had secured a cakeknife it appeared to be high time to turn the cake. On the upper side it looked dry and yellowish. But the cake stuck. He sawed the knife under it with desperate haste, however, and finally got it over—in sections—a blackened, translated, discouraging semblance of a buckwheat cake.

"I don't believe it needs any cooking on that side," he said, scraping it off the griddle into a dish and putting it on the table.

"This," he continued, with a ferocious grin, "is the 'trial cake' she was talking about."

He tasted it.

"It's good," he said.

It was all he said.

And then Mr. McSwat took that jar of buckwheat batter, carried it out to the alley and emptied it into the garbage box.

Five minutes later he appeared at the foot of the stairway running up from the front hall.

"Lobelia," he yelled, "that batter of yours got spoiled last night! I'm going to the meat market for a steak!"—Chicago Tribune.

Thompson Men May Be Fired.

The Somerset Messenger in an editorial in this week's issue, discusses the trouble between the Reed and the Thompson Republican factions in a lively manner, and declares that notwithstanding the harmonizing process that was brought into play at the State convention there is going to be a veritable disruption at the approaching Congressional convention in Asbury Park for the selection of delegates to represent the Third district at the National convention in June. Referring to the disposition of the Bridgewater contest in the State convention, the Messenger goes on to say that at the district convention Chancery Clerk Thompson's friends will insist on his being named as one of the National delegates, despite the intentions of the Reed followers to secure that honor for F. P. Olcott, of Bernards. The Messenger then says:

The Thompson men claim that Mr. Olcott has, until the last few years, been an active Democrat, and that if David B. Hill or some personal friend should, four years hence, receive the Democratic nomination for President, he would at once jump back again. Against this the opposed party has an unanswerable argument that, if the Republicans win the election this fall. It will have to be accomplished by the persuasive power of the second and concluding dollar, and the possibility of said second contingent simply asks for the privilege of voting Mr. Olcott's log good and strong, and then vote with the Prohibition, Socialist-Labor or any other old ticket he chooses four years from now.

The leaders of the Reed faction are already claiming that Mr. Thompson's delegation will be unanimously fired from the Asbury Park gathering, and, on the surface, it looks like a pretty good guess. Mr. Thompson's friends have been jumped on so often in the last few years, and then have performed the kiss-the-rod-and-look-happy act, that the Democrats would be disappointed at any other outcome.

The importance of the great systems of electric street railways that are springing up all over the country can not be over-estimated. The tracks of the North Jersey Traction Company already unite the important cities and towns in the northern part of this State. Trenton is another centre of the radiating lines while Camden is the important point in south Jersey. Plainfield first possessed a little system of its own without connecting with any of its neighbors. Then came the Bruenswick Traction Company and the two lines met at Dunellen, giving up the Brunswick system with Bound Brook, Somerville, Raritan, New Brunswick, South River and Metuchen, all within reach of Plainfield by trolley.

Thursday the line of the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company, between Elizabeth and Plainfield, was opened. All the spring the cars have been running to Roselle, but the connection is now complete. By this act Plainfield is now included in the great network of trolley roads that cover the northern part of the State. Hereafter it will be possible to reach Newark, Orange, Jersey City, Paterson, Passaic and other cities of that section by trolley. It means that trolley communication between Jersey City, at the very door of New York, and New Brunswick and Raritan river.

The spread of these lines will continue. From New Brunswick a line will be extended down along the Jersey coast. Plainfield may look forward to direct communication with Metuchen in a year or two at most and to a branch to Watchung and possibly further.

Advertisements are read at all times, without regard to whether the business season be dull or active, says the Philadelphia Record. Therefore, the business man who advertises when business is quiet is bound to be remembered by the purchasing public when commercial activity becomes greatest. Whosoever among merchants can keep himself in the public mind will enjoy the greatest amount of custom.

It Ought to Have Been Settled.

The Somerville Unionist-Gazette has found itself in a peculiar position with reference to Republican affairs in Somerset county for the past two years owing to the differences between the Thompson and the Reed factions. It has been very careful not to take sides with either faction in the bitter contest for power, and has succeeded remarkably well. In this week's issue, however, it makes bold to discuss the recent contesting delegations from Bridgewater township in the following manner:

The seating of both the regular and the contesting delegation from Bridgewater township in the Republican State convention last week was deplorable the easiest way out of the difficulty, but the dangers of repetition seem in the future. Hereafter, with such a precedent, there need be no regular certified delegates sent to any convention. A half-dozen primaries may be held by dissident factions and their delegates will be given one-sixth of a vote in the convention. There need be no contests in primaries to send delegates representing that viewers of a majority of voters, for the minority and majority can both send delegates and all will be seated and the vote divided up and intained.

One or the other of the two delegations which went to Trenton from Bridgewater was entitled to represent the voters of that township. Which was the rightful one should have been decided in order that the voters may know what to expect. It made little difference last week because there was really no contest when the stand up delegates-at-large came before the State convention. But under some circumstances it would be of vital importance to the voters.

There would have been no change in results last week, but we believe it would have been only just to all parties concerned, after both sets of delegates had gone to Trenton, to have had the matter come before the committee on credentials and had a decision upon the merits of the case.

It is a very guarded and fair statement that The Unionist-Gazette makes in respect to this political contest, and from present prospects it looks as though its suggestions, if they had been carried out at the State convention, would have been of considerable value.

The Porto Rican Judgeship.

The acceptance of the judicial position in Porto Rico by Frank Bergen, as he is being urged by many prominent Jerseymen who possess great influence in administration circles, would simplify the situation in the Eighth Congressional district in a wonderful manner. Considering the determination and earnestness that has always characterized Mr. Bergen, it hardly seems possible that he will consent to be side-tracked in his Congressional aspirations by the offer of a place in the judiciary of Porto Rico, especially since he has started out with such vim to defeat Congressman Fowler for a renomination. That Mr. Bergen will go off to Porto Rico as a judge, however, is probably devoutly hoped for by the friends of Fowler. With the former out of the way Mr. Fowler would undoubtedly have clear sailing for another term in Washington.

Concerning the talk that connects Mr. Bergen's name with the Porto Rican judgeship, the Jersey City Journal says:

If Frank Bergen consents to accept a position on the bench in Porto Rico he will be a good thing for the Porto Ricans. They will get an honest and capable Judge. If he accepts appointment, Mr. Bergen will become a National factor in a short time. He will find so much that is stupidly wrong in the Spanish methods which have become habitual to the people that his instincts as a genuine reformer will be deeply stirred and Porto Rico needs reforming.

William B. Gourley, chairman of the Democratic State committee, has issued the call for the Democratic State convention, to elect delegates to the National convention at Chicago, to be held in Trenton May 31st. Under the rules fixed by the State committee the basis of representation will be one delegate for every two hundred Democratic voters cast in the last Gubernatorial election. This will make a total of 1,089 delegates in the convention, of which 545 will be necessary to a choice. Union county will be entitled to fifty-seven delegates, Somerset to twenty-four and Middlesex to forty-five. Differing from the practices of the Republicans in New Jersey, the Democrats elect both their delegates-at-large and their district delegates at the State convention. There are four delegates-at-large and sixteen district delegates, or two for every district.

An Iowa young man not long ago proposed marriage to a young woman of that neighborhood. But hearing that her hair was false he declined to fulfill his engagement. She brought suit against him for breach of promise, and, being put on the stand, admitted that she wore a wig; whereupon she was non-suited on the ground that she had won the young man's affections under false pretenses. The defendant probably now figures that he escaped by some other measure than that which is described as "a hair's breadth."

If the Democrats of New York finally decide to select Comptroller Coler as their candidate for Governor, Roosevelt, if he escapes the Vice-Presidency nomination, will be pitted against a candidate that can come nearer defeating him for the executive chair in Albany than any other man in the Empire State.

The selection of Chief Justice Magie for the place of Chancellor puts one of the most astute and brilliant legal minds in the judicial chair occupied with such honor and capacity by the late Alexander McGill.

Perhaps the Sultan thinks that if he can postpone the payment of that $90 000 till November, Uncle Sam will forget all about it in the wholesale slaughter of turkeys for Thanksgiving.

Clearing the Way for Fowler.

The observing Trenton correspondent of the Philadelphia Record has this to say of the offer of a Porto Rican judgeship to Frank Bergen:

"The olive branch is being held out to Frank Bergen, who is a candidate for Congress in the Eighth Congress district. His friends wanted him appointed as a Judge in Porto Rico. Should President McKinley tender him such an office, and he accept it, then Congressman Fowler would have clear sailing for a re-election to the National Legislature. This was a happy thought on the part of those who originated it, because it will remove some vexatious complications which were caused by the contest for the nomination for Congress between Mr. Fowler and Mr. Bergen. And it promised to be a bitter fight—so bitter, indeed, as to open many ugly sores which could not well be healed during this year's campaign. It involved the old fight over again between Senator Kean on the one side and Mr. Fowler on the other, and it is asserted that Mr. Kean trotted out Mr. Bergen as a candidate solely for the purpose of defeating Mr. Fowler. So far the struggle for superiority has been very much in favor of Mr. Fowler, and, seeing this, the friends of Mr. Bergen, no doubt, hit upon the idea of saving him from the humiliation of a defeat by having him withdraw to accept a judgeship in Porto Rico. That now seems to be the solution of the problem, provided Mr. McKinley agrees to the proposition. And thus another spoke, which was out of joint, will be welded in a wheel of the party machinery. All of this goes to show the great anxiety of the Republican leaders in the interest of harmony."

The little boom to make Grover Cleveland a member of the State Game and Fish Commission seems to have fallen by the wayside.

It will be a sad blow to the anti-Fowlerites to have Frank Bergen accept the judicial appointment in Porto Rico.

IN THE FISH BUSINESS.

B. O. Bowers, Jr., Will Have Charge of an Important Industry in Maine.

Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., of Franklin place, left Sunday morning for Cutler, Maine, where he will assume charge of a large canning factory of which he is now sole owner. Mr. Bowers has been associated with his father, B. O. Bowers, of this city, in the commission business in New York. They handled sardines and other canned fish. Mr. Bowers has now gone to learn the practical side of the general fish canning and curing business.

Mr Bowers' factory at Cutler is the principal industry in that town and employs from 150 to 200 hands. He will have complete charge, assisted by an experienced superintendent. The nearest town of any importance is Machias, fourteen miles away, where the bank is located.

The fishing season begins there May 10th and there is every prospect of a good catch this year. In case of a successful catch the factory will turn out as many as $2,000 cans a day. Mr. Bowers will be there all the season and will not return to Plainfield again before Thanksgiving Day. The season ends December 15.

It is a great responsibility for a young man to undertake but the success that Mr. Bowers has met with so far and had his friends to believe that he will do equally as well in his new venture.

Wind Too Strong for Many of Them.

Owing to the high wind and the scarcity of trailing arbutus, the bicycle scramble of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church Saturday afternoon was not the success it might otherwise have been. The wind was so strong that only seven gathered at the meeting place for the start. The season for the arbutus was found to be practically over and not enough was obtained to send to the New York flower mission as was first intended.

HOLY CROSS MUSICALE.

TALENTED ARTISTS WERE HEARD SATURDAY EVENING.

The Affair Arranged by Clarence Sears, Organist of the Church.

A musicale was given Saturday evening in the Parish House of the Church of the Holy Cross under the auspices of the Guild of the church. There was a large attendance of members and friends who enjoyed the several numbers on the programme, arranged by Clarence Sears, organist of the church Mr. Lane, of this city, expected to render vocal solos, but was detained by illness.

Part first consisted of banjo solos by Fred VanEps, piano selections, "Poem," and "Fantasie," by Miss Weir; a tenor solo by James H. Rough, of New York, with violin obligato by Maurice Audsley; Scotch songs by Miss Bertha van Nuise Willis, and violin selections by Maurice Audsley. In part second Miss Weir played a "Dirge," by Weir; Mr. Audsley rendered violin selections; Miss Willis sang two pretty selections; Mr. VanEps gave several popular banjo selections and M. Rough sang two favorite selections.

Each and every number was cordially received by the audience, but Miss Willis was slightly favored by receiving a few more encores than the rest. Her voice was clear and strong, and her control of it was an enjoyable feature. All of her selections were favorites, but the Scotch songs won the most favor.

Mr. VanEps also came in for a large share of applause, and he was recalled several times. Mr. Rough, tenor, was well-received, and his work was thoroughly appreciated, as was also the work of Miss Weir, whose playing was delightful. Mr. Audsley's violin playing was, as usual, a feature. His work is always of a high standard.

Miss Saidee Mae Bowne was the accompanist for Miss Willis; Stuart Pope for Mr. VanEps, and Clarence Sears for Mr. Rough. The work of the accompanists was superb and added greatly to the enjoyment of the several numbers.

A CHORUS CHOIR.

Charles L. Lewis to Organize it for the First Methodist Church—Commences the Work Immediately.

The official board of the First M. E. church Monday closed a contract with Charles L. Lewis to take the position of musical director for the coming year. Mr. Lewis will organize a large chorus choir with about thirty-five voices, and it is the purpose to bring the musical part of the services at this church up to a high standard of proficiency. Mr. Lewis enters upon his work this week and he will begin to enlarge the present choir. This work will be gradual. In addition to organizing a choir and directing it, Mr. Lewis will sing at both Sunday services. His solos will be a feature, as they were at the Crescent Avenue church, where he sang for a long time.

The enlarging of the choir will necessitate some improvements, and the choir loft will also be enlarged to accommodate the extra singers. This work will be started very soon. Mr. Lewis will be in charge next Sunday for the first.

PLUMBERS ORGANIZE.

Their Purpose is for Protection and to Foster Best Interests of Their Trade.

The master plumbers of Plainfield met in the Board of Trade rooms last week Friday evening and effected an organization for protection and for the best interests of the plumbers. All the master plumbers in the city were present and complete harmony prevailed. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, John H. Carney; vice-president, C. W. Krause; treasurer, A. E. Ender; secretary, D. H. Pound.

The plumbers will meet from time to time as the occasion demands, and plans will be formulated to strengthen the organization so that the greatest good may come to all.

A Sprinkling Car a Necessity.

According to the ordinance the Plainfield Street Railway Co. is compelled to commence sprinkling May 15th, and it is quite likely that a regular sprinkling car will be used, as the lines have been extended making the old system impracticable.

No Trace Missing Her.

From all appearances it would seem as if young Robert Morgan, of the West End Road, who ran away last week, had every detail arranged ahead. Although his father, Lewis H. Morgan, has made every effort to get trace of the missing boy, his search has been fruitless so far. No doubt now exists but what he is on his way to the Paris Fair.

WOMEN WILL HELP SAVE THE PALISADES

State Federation of Clubs to Try and Raise Money to Aid the Project.

STATE HAS FAILED TO DO IT.

PALISADE COMMISSION HAS AUTHORITY, BUT NO CASH.

Without Both it is Impossible to the Legislature, and the Women Have Decided to Come to the Rescue.

The New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs has arranged for a meeting to be held this Thursday afternoon in the Assembly hall of the United Charities building, 105 East Twenty-second street, New York. At this meeting the federation will probably take steps to form a Palisades league to raise money throughout the United States to save the Palisades.

A Palisade commission is provided for under a law passed by the last Legislature, but this commission is without funds with which to buy the land that is to be saved from further defacement.

In a call for this Thursday's meeting it is stated:

"The New Jersey Federation took up the question of Palisades preservation at its spring meeting in 1897. The conferences and careful investigations of the commission resulted in the bills introduced at Albany and Trenton during the past sessions of the Legislatures, for the appointment of a permanent commission in each State, to create an Interstate park. The bill passed the New York Legislature with practically no amendments, but as New Jersey owners were more affected by its provisions, certain alterations were imposed on the New Jersey bill, which somewhat affects its usefulness. Enough has been gained, however, to make a good beginning.

"The fate of the bills was not decided in time to ask for appropriations, except for commission expenses, and if anything is to be accomplished by the commissioners this year money must be raised from outside sources.

"The New Jersey Federation desires a representative on the commission, as it had done much work and hopes to continue its efforts, but in any event its Palisade committee is pledged to carry out instructions received at the annual meeting held in October.

"It was then authorized to form a National League for the purpose of raising money, and now that a plan has been formulated and responsible men chosen, with the legal authority to carry out its provisions, it seems a suitable time to set in motion the auxiliary society. A meeting for this purpose will be held in the United Charities Building Thursday next. Members of the various commissions have been invited to speak, and Frederick Lamb, of the Scenic Society, and DeWitt Warner, of the Reform Club, have also agreed to deliver addresses."

WON BY ONE RUN.

Great Game Played by Arion A. C. and Lincoln High School, of Westfield, Saturday Afternoon.

A thirteen-inning baseball game was played on the Sherman avenue grounds Saturday afternoon when the Arion A. C., of this city, defeated the Lincoln High School team, of Westfield, by a score of 15 to 14. The game was exciting throughout.

Charles Smith pitched a good game for the home team and had satisfactory support from the rest. Hegeman also pitched a careful game for Westfield. The runs were made by good batting rather than poor fielding. Quite a crowd witnessed the game.

Want a Graded School.

The members of the School Board of Bernards township, since the defeat by popular vote of the measure to erect two new schoolhouses in Bernards township—one at Bernardsville and one at Basking Ridge—are discussing the project of erecting a graded school in the township. The site selected is on the old parsonage grounds, near the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad depot at Basking Ridge. An election will probably be held in a few weeks to vote on the proposition.

ROSTER OF TEACHERS.

NEW INSTRUCTORS ENGAGED FOR THE BOROUGH SCHOOLS.

Fred M. Brown Appointed to Take School Census—Truant Officer Appointment Deferred.

An important meeting of the Borough Board of Education was held Monday when many matters were introduced and discussed. On account of the resignation of several teachers, the Board has been compelled to secure others in their places, and all but two were announced at the meeting. Miss Elizabeth Lum, graduate of Wellesley College, will fill the place of Miss Grace Petrie, resigned, in the High School, and will teach science and mathematics; Miss Alberta E. Waterbury, of Cortland Normal School, New York, and Oberlin Conservatory of Music, will take Miss Ida Horn's place as teacher in the Eighth grade; Miss Minnie H. Green, also of Cortland Normal School, will take the class in the sixth grade taught by Miss Anna Miller, who has received one of Miss Helen Gould's free scholarships at Wellesley College; Miss Cora Remington, of Trenton Normal School, will take Miss Edith Horton's class in the third grade; Miss Katharine F. Ball, a graduate of Wellesley College, this year, will teach in the second grade, filling the position held by Miss May Brown, resigned, and Miss Mabel Hare, of Cortland Normal School, has been engaged to take Miss Lizzie Southworth's place in the first grade. There are two more new teachers to hear from, and until they notify the Board of their acceptance of the positions offered their names will not be announced.

The board also appointed Fred M. Brown as taker of the school census, and Dr. J. H. Carman, of this city, as school physician. It was also decided to fix September 11th as the date when the schools shall re open after the summer vacation. The sum of $15 was contributed toward macadamizing Watchung avenue near the Watchung School, and the building and grounds committee was authorized to have crushed stone spread each side of the curb surrounding the school property.

The question of appointing a truant officer, as provided by the new school law, was discussed, and the appointment will be made at the adjourned meeting next Monday evening. It shall be the duty of this officer to see that all children attend school unless a good and sufficient reason can be furnished.

The committee on heating and ventilating the Somerset street school announced that bids for the work will be received at the meeting next Monday evening, and a public meeting will be held at a later date, to be announced, when the bids will be considered and acted upon.

Thursday evening of this week the committee on commencement will meet and complete plans for that event.

SETTLED IN THEIR NEW HOME.

Rev. Mr. O'Donnell Received in a Pleasant Manner in Flemington.

Rev. and Mrs. William C. O'Donnell and their little son are now settled in their new home at Flemington. Rev. Mr. O'Donnell, formerly of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, of this city, is now pastor of the M. E. church of that place, one of the largest and most flourishing churches of that section. It is a grey stone structure, somewhat resembling Grace P. E. church, of this city, in appearance. They received a cordial welcome from the congregation who gave them a reception last week. Mr. O'Donnell and his family are very comfortably quartered in the parsonage which stands close by the church. Mrs. R. O. Bowers, mother of Mrs. O'Donnell, accompanied them to Flemington and returned home last Friday after seeing them properly settled.

Sermon to Young People.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, of LaGrande avenue, who occupied the pulpit of Trinity Reformed church Sunday delivered a most excellent sermon to a large congregation, from the text of II King, 8th chapter, part of the 12th verse—"But what, is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great thing?" Mr. Griffin has many warm friends in Trinity church and the very earnest words of the preacher last evening were attentively listened to and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Vermeule-Scully Nuptials.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Scully and Frank Vermeule was performed last Monday by Rev. F. B. Symthe, at the rectory of St. Mary's church. Mr. and Mrs David Angermeier, of West Third street, stood up with the couple. A reception was held later which was attended by the immediate relatives and friends. They will take up housekeeping shortly on East Front street.

C. T. Kilburn, of the Orange Y. M. C. A., will speak to the boys of the gymnasium classes of the Y. M. C. A. next Saturday at 4:15, and to the men at 8 p. m. There will also be a social-able for men next Saturday.

TO REPAIR PRESSES HERE

CAMPBELL COMPANY SECURES OLD CARPET WORKS BUILDING.

It Will be Equipped With Modern Machinery and Hands Skilled Hands Given Employment.

The Campbell Printing Press Company, one of the oldest press manufacturing concerns in this country, have leased the VanDeventer carpet factory and will use it for the re-building of second-hand machinery that is taken in exchange when installing new presses. This work was formerly done in New York city, but the many advantages of Plainfield as a manufacturing centre induced the company to bring this department here. Presses are now being built for them in large quantities at Bridgeport, Conn., and at the Potter Press Works in this city. As this department will employ about forty skilled mechanics at present and possibly more in the future, it will add considerably to Plainfield's industries.

Grace Kelley acted the role in a sympathetic manner.

Miss Mary Anderson Belshart scored a positive success in the role of "Susan," the servant. She acted with a freedom of manner and estimation of the requirements of the part that was charming.

While the success of the performance depended upon the ability of those acting the various parts, it was due to Alfred Young, who directed and staged the piece, that the parts were mastered and carried out in the manner in which they were. Mr. Young has been assiduous in his work of coaching the company, and how well he succeeded was evidenced in the finished performance given.

The total receipts from the performance amount to nearly $750, of which about one-half will be profit.

Stealing a Ride on Royal Blue Liner

Harry Newton was arrested by Patrolman Saffron Saturday evening for stealing a ride on a passing Blue Line express. He explained that he was going from Philadelphia to New York looking for work. The Judge suspended sentence but suggested that the county roads were better means of reaching the desired end than the Central Railroad unless Newton had the necessary cash.

Sidewalk is Too Narrow.

If the Board of Education want to make an improvement that will be greatly appreciated they have the side walk on Arlington avenue, running by the Franklin and High schools, relaid and straightened. A few nights ago a person walking along there narrowly escaped serious injury. The walk is very uneven and should be attended to before a law suit follows.

Good Music Heard.

One of a series of concerts was given in Y. M. C. A. hall Saturday evening, by Willard and Bartlett, two New York musical artists. They played a number of difficult pieces on the saxaphone, harp, guitar, piccolo-banjo, mandolin and violin. The audience showed their appreciation by loud and frequent encores.

BANQUET OF THE ROYAL ARCANUMITES

One-half of the Guests at the Affair Were Non-members of the Order.

GRAND OFFICERS PRESENT.

DEAN RODMAN MADE A HAPPY TOASTMASTER.

Interesting Remarks Concerning the Work and Benefits of the Royal Arcanum Heard From Several of the Guests.

Exactly one-half of them Royal Arcanumites, but all royal good fellows, nearly one hundred representative Plainfield men filled the dining halls of the Hotel Kensington Monday night as participants in the banquet arranged by Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum. Tickets had been issued to just such a number of the members of the Arcanum that it was possible for each one to have as his guest a gentleman who is not a member of the order, but whose connection with it is earnestly sought. It is often said that the way to reach a man's mind is through his stomach, and in one sense this was the design of the committee of Plainfield Council that arranged the affair last night. By entertaining the non-member guests it was believed that they would be sufficiently impressed with what they saw and heard at the banquet to feel like associating themselves in an official way with the order in the not distant future. So the affair last night was sort of a double-edged instrument intended to be both a love feast and a business proposition. Considered from both standpoints, it was a success.

Covers were laid for one hundred, and when the service started there was not a vacant seat. Dean Rodman, who is one of the most active and interested members of the Council, presided as toastmaster. He performed the duties of the position in a happy manner, combining wit and wisdom in the pleasant remarks introductory to the speakers of the evening. The menu and service that had been provided by Proprietor Staats was excellent in every respect.

The guests of honor for the evening were Grand Regent L. E. Lightfoot, of Westfield; Grand Secretary R. H. Alberts, of Hoboken, and Supervising Deputy Grand Regent E. K. Mossig, of Cranford. Before all the courses of the menu had been served, Dean Rodman interrupted the feast of material things to commence the feast of reason, and in a pleasant little speech introduced Grand Regent Lightfoot. As the head of the order in New Jersey, Mr. Lightfoot was equipped with a ready knowledge of the facts and figures in reference to the order. He explained the benefits of being a member of the Royal Arcanum, expanding his points in several instances by relating tragic and pathetic incidents that had come under his observation to impress in a most forcible manner upon the living the necessity of providing life insurance for those dependent upon them.

Grand Secretary Alberts proved himself a speaker of exceptional ability. Ordinarily life insurance is a dry subject for discussion, but Mr. Alberts infused an energy and interest in his remarks that kept the close attention of the guests. He spoke particularly at the outset to the members of the Arcanum, urging them to work constantly for the improvement and enlargement of the order. In closing he pictured the benefits of the order to the non-members in a graphic and humorous, but withal argumentative, manner.

Mr. Mossig followed, but as he had only a few minutes in which to catch the train that he had to take to get home, his remarks were brief, but pleasant.

In a few good natured remarks and observations, Dean Rodman then introduced James E. Martine, whose popularity was attested by the warm applause that greeted him. Mr. Martine said that he was somewhat perplexed as to what he should say on an occasion of the kind, but he was not at a loss at any moment and he delivered an interesting talk, paying a pleasing compliment to Dean Rodman, whom he said was his ideal of a clergyman, and praising the practices and benefits of the Arcanum.

Brief remarks were also made by Peter A. Emmons, Dr. W. Kempton Browning and Edward Love, all members of the Arcanum, who dwelt particularly upon the advantages to be found in the membership of the order.

The committee in charge of the affair was as follows: Rev. E. M. Rodman, chairman; Dr. W. Kempton Browning, Frederick J. Pope, Herbert Buxton, Albert L. Littell, P. A. Emmons, T. B. Greene, W. S. Lowry and Eliot Barr.

FELL UNDER THE CARS.

STRANGE COLORED MAN KILLED ON THE CENTRAL.

Mangled Remains Found Near Prospect Avenue Crossing at Dunellen; County Physician Called.

The body of an unknown colored man was found lying on the tracks of the Central Railroad just west of the Prospect avenue crossing at Dunellen, about 6 o'clock Tuesday morning.

From appearances it seems as if the man had been riding on a freight train and had fallen off.

Both legs were cut off and the head was badly mangled. He was picked up by the railroad employes and carried to the freight station.

Undertaker W. G. Runyon was notified and took charge of the body. As no one in Dunellen recognizes the victim a search of the clothing will be made upon the arrival of the county physician.

A curious part of the accident is that every bit of the man's clothing was torn from the body, the shoes being taken off without a tear.

A contingent of about forty girls arrived in Plainfield Monday, from Dover, N. The girls, who are all experienced in the business, will probably be set to work by the first of next week. The management is making every effort to have everything in perfect running order by that time.

WAS MORRISSEY OF AGE WHEN HE DIED?

Important Question to Be Settled in Case Now Before Court of Chancery.

INVOLVES LARGE ESTATE.

MRS. HICKEY, OF MADISON, TRYING TO RECOVER BROTHER'S PROPERTY.

David Morrissey Left All His Property to His Son James, Who Willed the Estate to Latter's Mother—Question of Legality of Will.

Former Senator Marsh, of Elizabeth, has as yet failed to file his answer to the suit instituted by Bridget Hickey, of Madison, who is a sister of the late David Morrisey, one of the wealthiest hotel proprietors in Summit, at the time of his death, which occurred about eight years ago. His widow, Catherine Morrissey, has managed the business since his death. Suit was instituted in the Court of Chancery two months ago by Edward A. and William T. Day, counselors-at-law, of Newark, in behalf of their client, Bridget Hickey, of Madison, whose husband, Michael Hickey, was a well-known rose grower previous to his death, which occurred about two years ago.

At the time of Mr. Morrissey's death his property, including real estate and money invested in bond and mortgage, was estimated at $100,000. He died intestate. Four years after his only son, James Morrissey, died. A few days previous to the son's death he made a will bequeathing his entire interest in all of the real estate and money invested by his deceased father to his mother. It was a well-known fact in and about Summit that James Morrissey at the time of his death was a minor, but for some unexplained reason "23 years of age" appeared on the coffin plate.

About three months after the death of James Morrissey rumors began to circulate that at the time of his death he had not attained his majority, and it was said that in order to overcome any technical obstacles to perfect the title Mrs. Morrissey was advised by her counsel to transfer all the real estate possessed by her late husband and bequeathed by her son to her to another party, and have that party for a nominal consideration transfer it back to her. Acting upon this suggestion all of the real estate owned by her husband was transferred to Edward B. Kelly. It included four deeds. John A. A. Hicks, as commissioner of deeds, executed the acknowledgments. The real estate was at the same time transferred back to Mrs. Morrissey. The consideration mentioned in each transfer is $1.

In the meantime Mrs. Hickey was not letting any grass grow under her feet. She had employed a detective, who visited Brooklyn, where James Morrissey was born, who obtained the exact date of the boy's birth, and from St. James' church, the date of his baptism. The church records also contained the date of his birth. According to these he lacked almost three months of being 21 years old when he died.

It is understood that a demand was then made on Mrs. Morrissey by her husband's sister for her legal share of Mr. Morrissey's estate, but the demand was refused, and suit was immediately instituted.

The amount should have been filed twenty days ago, but ex-Senator Marsh, who is counsel for Mrs. Morrissey, has already asked two extensions of time. Prominent lawyers say that the only defense that can be offered is to prove that James Morrissey was of age at the time the will was executed, and it is conceded by all parties that his mother will not go on the stand and swear he was born on any other date than the one mentioned in the church records, especially as there were two sons and a daughter of old time residents of Summit born on the same day.

The value of the real estate now in controversy is estimated at from $35,000 to $45,000.

ROBINSON POUND DEAD.

Had Been Ill With Consumption for a Long Time—Member of Friends' Society.

Robinson Pound, aged forty-three years, died at 3 o'clock Friday morning at his home, 255 East Second street, after an illness of six-and-a-half years with consumption. During the past four months Mr. Pound was confined to the house, and his death was expected at any moment.

Mr. Pound was born in this city in the old house that stood where the Y. M. C. A. building is now located. He was the son of the late George Pound, and a brother-in-law of A. M. Griffin, and worked at the latter's hardware store for about four years. He was a member of the Friends' Society on Washington avenue, and was always faithful in attendance at the various meetings. He leaves a wife and two children, a boy and girl. The funeral services were held last Monday afternoon from the house at 2:30 o'clock.

FINE MUSIC WAS HEARD.

PROF. CONDE'S ORCHESTRAL CONCERT WAS A SUCCESS.

Attracted an Appreciative Audience to Y. M. C. A. Hall—Mixed Singer Very Fine.

A fair-sized audience greeted P. Ludwig Conde and his pupils in the Y. M. C. A. hall last Thursday on the occasion of their annual orchestral concert and received the various numbers on the programme with polite but hearty approval.

The playing of the entire orchestra was a fine example of ensemble playing worked up to a high degree of excellence, and the unity of purpose, the keen understanding of the relative value of the different parts and the harmonious conception of the compositions being played, spoke very highly for these young people and their tutor.

Much interest centred in the conducting of Mr. Conde. The first few minutes of the performance, however, gave ample intimation that a man was in control whose will was being carefully, even enthusiastically, obeyed. His personality simply dominated the whole work of the orchestra by the almost unfailing balance of tone he kept among the various instruments and by the apparently spontaneous fashion in which his orchestra would follow him in accelerating or retarding the tempo.

The programme opened with the march "Athalia," by Mendelssohn, followed by a selection by Massenet, played by nine string instruments.

Miss Charlotte Cave won the hearty applause of all by a well executed violin solo, in which she displayed an intellectual grasp and a keen artistic perception, making her ability apparent.

Lewis Schnepel, the blind singer, scored a great success and was enthusiastically applauded and encores were demanded until he was tired. Mr. Schnepel possesses a fine baritone voice, of wide range and remarkable clearness, while his enunciation was a pleasing feature of his performance. He appeared at two different times on the programme and sang several of his selections in German.

A sextette, of which Mr. Conde was the leading violin, played a waltz movement by Gillet, which contained a very pretty rythm. A selection from Lohengrin, in which the musings of the 'cello were plainly audible, and in which the brass took up the theme of the well-known wedding march, brought the first and largest half of the programme to a close.

Mr. Conde delighted his hearers with a violin solo, a selection from the Mendelssohn Concerto. He has temperament, but it is absolutely under his control, and this, combined with his well-rounded technique, his delicacy of touch and refinement of expression, made his performance a distinctly artistic achievement. It was evident that the popular demand for the violinist was not satisfied.

The overture to "William Tell" by the orchestra brought the concert to a close.

Funeral of Late William Dunavan.

The funeral services of the late William Dunavan were held from the house Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and were conducted by Rev. Cornelius Schoch, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, who read the Scriptures and spoke comforting words to the bereaved ones. He also spoke words of commendation about the departed and his upright life. There was as a large attendance of relatives and friends, including all of the children. There were many floral tributes, including a set piece from the children, one from the Epworth League of the First M. E. church, and another from the fire department. Interment took place in Evergreen Cemetery.

Jersey Central and Lehigh Coal.

Rumors that the Jersey Central Railroad would absorb the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company and make it part of one great system caused a quick advance in the price of Lehigh coal shares yesterday. Geo. F. Baber, Vice-President of the Jersey Central Railroad, said that that company already had a 999-year lease of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, and so far as he knew there would be no change in the relations of the two properties.

Great Improvement on Third Street.

East Third street has been greatly improved by the new macadamizing and the improvement will be much appreciated by the truckmen who are daily called upon to drive along that street. When that job is completed the street department will next turn its attention to Putnam avenue, where repairs are greatly needed.

Cheap Bread.

There is a bread war on among the bakers of Clinton. High Bridge and Glen Gardner, and the price has fallen to three cents a loaf, or nine loaves for a quarter of a dollar.

Windfall for Hunterdon Girls.

By the death of a brother in California the Misses Hunsale, two well-known young ladies of Frenchtown, Hunterdon county, will receive about $40,000 each.

Prospectus of the Siegel-Cooper Co.

CO-OPERATIVE STORES, NEW YORK AND CHICAGO.

Profit-Sharing with our Patrons. Co-operation with our Employees.

THE great success attained since 1887 by Siegel, Cooper & Co., has induced and given warrant to the enterprising owners to further ingratiate themselves into public favor by consolidating their two mammoth establishments into a co-operative enterprise on a profit-sharing basis. They recognize the tendency of the present age to be in the direction of co-operation of employers with employees, as well as in profit-sharing with patrons. To accomplish this desired condition, a new Company, the Siegel-Cooper Co. (Co-operative Stores, New York and Chicago) has been incorporated under the laws of the State of New Jersey with a capital stock of $24,000,000.00, of which $14,250,000.00 is divided into 285,000 shares 6 per cent. cumulative Preferred Stock of $50.00 par value, and $9,750,000.00 into 195,000 shares Common Stock of $50.00 par value.

The charter of the Company provides that, after full dividends of 6 per cent. per annum have been paid on the Preferred Stock, and full dividends of 3 per cent. per annum have been paid on the Common Stock, all additional dividends shall be apportioned and paid on the basis of ⅓ in amount on the Preferred Stock and ⅔ in amount on the Common Stock.

To carry out the plan of Co-operation

with its employees, $2,000,000.00 of the Common Stock has been placed in trust, the annual dividends of which will be distributed among such employees as have been or may hereafter be with the New York or Chicago establishment for a period of three years during their satisfactory continuance in the service of the new Company; such dividends will also be continued and paid to employees for life who, after ten years of service with the new Company, become incapacitated for further employment, thereby practically providing a pension fund for faithful employees in their old age.

To carry out the plan Profit-Sharing

it is proposed by the present owners, who are the owners of all the stock of the new Company, to offer to the public through the undersigned, 200,000 shares (fully paid and non-assessable) of the 6 per cent. cumulative Preferred Stock at par, upon which the full 6 per cent. dividend must always be paid before the Common Stock receives any dividend whatever, the Preferred Stock also having a prior right to all the assets of the Company.

In order to give double assurance to the general public, whom it is desired to interest as Stockholders (instead of Speculators) and who may not be fully conversant with such investments, the money required to pay dividends on said 200,000 shares has been set aside and will remain on deposit with the Central Trust Company of New York, and the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, respectively, to secure the dividends of 6 per cent. per annum, payable 3 per cent. semi-annually, for a period of five years, i. e., until July 1st, 1905, on all such Preferred Stock as may be allotted in their respective territories, and each Certificate of Stock so allotted will have an endorsement by said Trust Companies, respectively, to that effect. We thereby offer, we believe, not only an absolutely safe 6 per cent. investment, but one which will without question yield considerably more.

Under no circumstances will any of the Preferred Stock not so allotted, nor any of the Common Stock, be sold, the present owners having no desire to sell out, but intending to remain with the business; they will therefore not part with any more stock than they believe necessary to fully carry out their plans for co-operation and profit-sharing, as previously stated.

The owners confidently believe that, by inaugurating the liberal policy above outlined towards their employees, they will in return be rewarded by more faithful services and courteous attention to patrons, the result of which must be beneficial to the new Company as well as augment the continued good will of the public.

Furthermore, it can be calculated to a certainty that with many thousands of new stockholders exerting their personal influence toward the success and welfare of the business, larger patronage and correspondingly greater earnings for the new Company will be assured. It is from the increased benefits and material advantages which these changed conditions are expected to bring about, that the present owners feel confident of better pro rata remuneration on the stock which they retain, and in a measure justifies them in parting with any portion of their interests in an established and exceptionally profitable business.

The SIEGEL-COOPER CO. Co-operative Stores will take possession Monday, July 2d, 1900, of the two great department stores of Siegel-Cooper Co., New York, and Siegel, Cooper & Co., Chicago, in their entirety, covering a floor space of over thirty acres, with their millions of dollars' worth of Merchandise, Store Fixtures, Delivery Plants (consisting of many hundreds of Horses, Wagons, etc.), Machinery, extensive Stable Properties, and all the appurtenances required for the complete operation of the two stores, and also its Palatial Fireproof Store Building and Real Estate in New York City, which alone represents an asset of many millions of dollars, free of all encumbrances or indebtedness whatsoever, so that the Siegel-Cooper Co. (Co-operative Stores, New York and Chicago) will start its career without owing a single dollar.

For the good and sufficient reason of not wishing to divulge the details of our business to our competitors, we present no balance sheet for publication. We do not however, desire to ask our patrons or the public to rely exclusively on our representations, and, therefore, the money required has been set aside and will remain on deposit with the above-named Trust Companies to absolutely secure the dividends on all the Preferred Stock to be allotted as stated. Moreover, we allude with pride to the fact that the Chicago establishment has since its inception *paid millions of dollars in dividends to its stock*holders, and that the New York establishment, while only in its fourth year, is not only doing a larger business than the Chicago store, but is also on a most profitable dividend-paying basis. We can also say for the benefit of subscribers, that the net earnings of our two establishments for the past year were largely in excess of the amount required to pay the dividends on all the Preferred Stock of the new Company.

There will be no change in management, and the same men who thirteen years ago started the original Siegel, Cooper & Co. store in Chicago (and later its sister-store in New York) and who have achieved a success almost without parallel in modern retailing, have pledged themselves to continue in the management of the business of the new Company the same as in the past, and they will deposit with the Central Trust Company of New York, all of their stock holdings for a term of years to secure such pledge.

Subscriptions for the 200,000 shares of the Preferred Stock will be received in person, or by mail, on blank forms provided for that purpose, by the Central Trust Company, 54 Wall Street, New York, and Siegel-Cooper Co., New York and Chicago, beginning at 10 a. m. Monday, May 7th, 1900, and will continue for a period of One Week; the right, however, is reserved to close subscriptions upon one day's notice in the New York and Chicago daily papers. The above Trust Company, for the convenience of our patrons and the public, will receive subscriptions at the Siegel-Cooper Co. store in New York, or at its own office, 54 Wall Street. All subscriptions must be accompanied by money, check, money order or draft, payable to the Central Trust Company of New York, to the amount of 20 per cent. of such subscription (equal to $10.00 per share), for which proper receipts will be given by said Trust Company. Notice will be given as soon as practicable of the number of shares allotted to each subscriber, and the balance due must be paid to said Trust Company on or before July 5th, 1900, upon the delivery by said Trust Company of the stock allotted.

INVITED GUESTS TOOK TRIAL TROLLEY TRIP.

First Ride Over Elizabeth and Westfield Company's Complete Line.

SUPPER AT CLARK'S HOTEL

OL. HINE AND EL'ZABETH OFFICIALS SWAPPED COMPLIMENTS.

Successful Opening of Trolley Road From Elizabeth to Plainfield Thursday Afternoon—Who the Guests Were.

A party of invited guests made the initial trip from Elizabeth to Plainfield and return over the lines of the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company Thursday afternoon. The line will be opened to the public tomorrow. It is still necessary to change cars at the B. and O. crossing at North Cranford, as the bridge over the tracks has not yet been built. Otherwise the line is complete.

The trip of Thursday afternoon was made the formal opening of the line, and was followed by a supper at Clark's Hotel, Elizabeth. The guests included many of the city officials from Elizabeth and a few from Plainfield.

One special car brought the guests over from Newark and was then joined by another with the Elizabeth guests. These two cars ran out to the B. and O. crossing, where the passengers were transferred to cars Nos. 8 and 9, of the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway. The latter cars had left Plainfield at 1:30 o'clock under the charge of Superintendent John Adelmann. The Plainfield guests were with him.

Then the whole party was carried on to Plainfield and over the local trolley lines to Dunellen, making the trip from Elizabeth to Dunellen in one hour and fifty minutes. The cars were then sent back over the same route, transferring the guests again at the B. and O. crossing.

At Elizabeth a collation was served in the banquet room of Clark's Hotel. After the supper Col. Hinee and a number of the prominent guests spoke, congratulating each other on the general success of the line and the possibilities that lie before it.

Neither of the Rikers were able to be present so Col. E. W. Hine, of Newark, did the honors of the occasion. Among the Elizabeth guests were Mayor W. A. M. Mack, City Attorney James C. Connelly, City Clerk James J. Manning, Councilmen D. F. Collins, Paul Noll, Frank Kleinhans, Joseph L. Benedict, George W. Horre and Robert L. Patterson, City Treasurer James Morrison, Street Commissioner N. K. Thompson, Former Sheriff Jacob Glaser, Chief of Police Delaney, Detective William Decker, City Surveyor W. H. Luster, Theodore Glaser, Richard F. Henry, Health Inspector Richards, William *N. Edelsten, Albert Stevens, superin*tendent of the Suburban Electric Light Company. Mayor George W. Troubled by Ash Carters.

Residents of West Front street in the vicinity of Plainfield avenue are indignant, and justly so, regarding the various ash carters that dump rubbish, etc., on the grounds corner of West Front street and Giraud avenue. When the wind blows the papers are blown about the street and a disgraceful sight is presented. There should be some way of putting a stop to this sort of thing and if the Board of Health has the power to stop it the residents are hoping that they will do so at once.

"Bobs" Untimely End.

The fox terrier puppy "Bobs," named after the English commander in Africa, met with an untimely end Thursday night. "Bobs" was the property of Sergeant Kieley's little son. That evening "Bobs" ran out on West Fourth street as a trolley car was passing and his young life was suddenly ended beneath the wheels of the car. His youthful owner sadly mourns his loss.

SUPPER WAS A SUCCESS

ANNUAL AFFAIR OF LADIES OF THE SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Held in the Parlors April 25th—Excellent Repast Served—Those Who Assisted at the Supper.

A delightful repast was provided April 25th for those who attended the annual supper, given by the Ladies' Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, in the church parlors. As were its predecessors, so was this affair, a complete success.

The tables were arranged in the parlors, where yellow was the prevailing color of the decorations. A menu of good things at reasonable rates was offered. The attendance was good and a large number of suppers served. In addition to the supper there were several booths in the chapel where the guests gathered after supper for a social hour. A few piano solos and duets helped to make the time pass pleasantly.

The apron and cake table was under the charge of Mrs. Frank H. Smith. At the candy and popcorn booth were Mrs. J. E. Kimball, Miss Ernestine Smith and Miss Louise Clawson. The committee in charge of the refreshments consisted of Mrs. C. H. Randolph, chairman; Mrs. J. F. Hubbard, Mrs. L. T. Rogers, Mrs. F. A. Dunham, Mrs. J. G. Miller and Miss Lucy Dunham. The waitresses at the different tables were the Misses Nelle Miller, Bertha Mitchell, Kizzie Neagle, Ethel Titsworth, Bessie Randolph, Merrie Randolph, Matie Green and Mabel Rogers.

The results of the supper will be devoted to the tract and missionary work of the society.

OBJECT TO WIDENING.

Strong Protest From Many Dunellen Residents Against Widening That Thoroughfare.

Many of the residents of Duer street are highly indignant over the report that there is a scheme on foot to widen that street and set the sidewalk back to the fence line. They say that not over one or two property owners on the street desire the improvement, and they should not be allowed to have their own way in the face of so much opposition. They claim that for a residential street it is wide enough for all purposes, and then the thoughts of cutting down the beautiful shade trees along the street has only caused a stronger feeling against the scheme. There is little likelihood of the street being widened in view of so much opposition, and if the matter should be brought up in the Council no doubt the residents would bring their strongest influence against the movement.

South Jersey Democrats for Bryan.

James E. Martine and W. W. St. John, of this city, attended the Democratic dinner in Camden Thursday Mr. Martine making the principal address to the large assemblage of South Jersey leaders who were present. His talk was characteristically enthusiastic, and at the conclusion he was greeted with a veritable ovation. The sentiment in favor of Bryan's renomination was very pronounced on the part of the South Jersey men, and they dwelt especially on the idea that the New Jersey delegation to Kansas City should be instructed to vote solidly for the Nebraskan.

THE COOKING OF FISH.

Some Points Which May Be of Service to the Careful Housewife.

That fish is almost invaluable as a food is well known; although a small proportion of flesh-forming material is low compared with beef or other meats, it contains a large proportion of phosphorus, which is necessary for the nourishment of the brain, and even in this particular fish differ as to their nutritive value. The white varieties—such as cod, haddock, halibut, sole and flounder—contain but a small per cent. of solid nutritive matter, and for this reason are usually served with butter sauce. Other fish, such as mackerel, salmon and herring are richer in fat, and contain more nutritive matter, but because of their fat are somewhat difficult to digest. Of the shell fish whose nutritive value is on a par with white varieties of fish, oysters are most digestible, scallops, shrimps, lobsters and crabs following in the order named.

In selecting fish it is well to remember that it cannot be too fresh; then that the flesh of a fresh fish is firm and elastic, leaving little or no depression if pressed with the fingers, and also that the eyes of fresh fish are bright, not glassy.

In cooking it is best to boil or bake a large fish. When boiled they should be served quite plain with potatoes steamed and peeled, and a buttered sauce flavored with a more tasty fish, such as lobster, shrimp oysters or herbs. Most fish admit of boiling; it is usual to prepare them for this process by washing them in strong vinegar; they should not be allowed to soak in it, however.

All large fish with the skins whole *should be put in cold water, first care*fully wrapped in a cloth, but the smaller varieties of fish in slices require more rapid cooking, and should therefore be plunged into boiling water at once; by this way the outer surfaces are hardened and closed and the juices of the fish prevented from boiling out. No more water than will just cover the fish should be used, or the skin will crack and the juices escape. As fast as the scum rises on the water it should be taken away, and after it has come to a boil a tablespoonful of salt added for each quart of water is advisable. The fish is said to be done when it begins to leave the bone, but if a fish has been cooked steadily by simmering instead of fast boiling, the skin may remain quite sound and yet the flesh be sufficiently cooked. The best method of learning whether it is entirely cooked is by pushing a wooden skewer through the thickest part; if it goes in easily it is done.

As soon as the fish is cooked lift it from the water and let drain thoroughly; then untie the cloth and transfer the *cooked fish to a heated dish. The wa*ter the fish is boiled in will make a sauce, or may be used as stock for a fish soup.

For frying, fish requires the same preparation as for boiling, being afterward dipped in butter or egg and bread crumbs. The pan should be half full of boiling fat and the fish let brown in a strainer or basket previously heated.

For broiling, fish should be washed and carefully dried, rubbed over with a lemon and then floured. The bars of the gridiron should be hot and well buttered before the fish is placed on them.

The foregoing general instructions are sufficient for most purposes and those usually practiced.—American Queen.

BEAUTIFUL FRANKNESS.

That of the Little "Pitcher" Which Is Always Manifested at the Wrong Time.

The new minister was preaching temporarily at the church in the western suburb to which he had accepted a call. He had not yet completed his pastorate in the city, and consequently it was an unsettled matter whether he would be able to fill his new pulpit regularly until the end of winter by the old congregation. It may be premised that the minister's name was not Brown. Mrs. Brown went out to call one day at the house of one of the prominent members of the church, whose name was not Smith. Mrs. Smith received Mrs. Brown graciously and the two women had a pleasant call. Little Miss Smith, aged eight, assisted her mother in doing the honors for the new minister's wife. Finally Mrs. Brown arose to go. She was accompanied to the door by both Mrs. Smith and her daughter.

"By the way, Mrs. Brown," asked Mrs. Smith, as the former stood for a moment in the open door, "who will preach in the church on next Sunday?"

"O! my husband," said Mrs. Brown. "Mr. Brown will preach next Sunday, surely."

"Why, mamma," said the Smith child, with the beautiful frankness of childhood, "I thought you said Mr. Brown couldn't preach at all."—Chicago Tribune.

To Restore Polish to Marble.

When the polish has been removed from marble by acids or from any other cause it is quite difficult to restore it with such appliances as one can use in the home. However, if one have patience and strength, it can be done. Cover the defaced place with a thick bed of powdered pumice stone, wet this with water and then rub with a large flat stone, renewing pumice stone and water from time to time. It requires a great deal of hard rubbing to get a smooth surface; half an hour a day for three or four days may do it. Finish by rubbing with putty powder and water. For a rubber, use a block of wood covered with a piece of soft woolen cloth.—Ladies' Home Journal.

CENTRAL IMPROVEMENT.

RAILROAD OFFICIAL ON A TOUR OF INVESTIGATION.

Complete Under the Railroad But gas and Manufacturing of Streets Proposed.

George W. Twining, engineer of maintenance and ways for the Jersey Central Railroad, with offices at Mauch Chunk, came to Plainfield April 26th at the request of Street Commissioner Gavett for the purpose of acquainting himself with several matters that need attention here. One matter introduced was that of placing canopies under the Grant avenue and Plainfield ave*nue bridges, so that pedestrians will* not be annoyed with the dripping of water when it rains. Another matter was that of macadamizing South Second street below Plainfield avenue bridge, and the erection of a small retaining wall along the railroad bank on South Second street west of Plainfield avenue. One other thing brought to the attention of Mr. Twining was that of enlarging the surface drainage inlets under the Watchung avenue bridge so that the water would be taken off more readily.

Mr. Twining, accompanied by Station Agent Joseph A. Haynes and Street Commissioner Gavett, made a tour during Mr. Twining's official visit, and personally looked after the various improvements suggested, and Mr. Twining seemed inclined to do what was right. He said that he would report the matter to the company and then inform Mr. Gavett of the result.

Regarding the improvements suggested the railroad company would not have to stand the entire expense if they are made. They would only pay a portion of the cost of macadamizing South Second street and enlarging the inlets under the Watchung avenue bridge. Mr. Twining said that when the company erected any more canopies under the railroad they would be of galvanized iron, thus making them perfectly water-tight. Mr. Gavett was much pleased with the encouragement he received from Mr. Twining and feels as though the improvements suggested will be accomplished at an early date.

MORE WORKERS WANTED.

Mrs. A. M. Waterbury Talked of Mission Work to Audience in First Baptist Church.

There was a good-sized audience at the First Baptist church last Friday to hear Mrs. A. M. Waterbury, secretary of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society. She has been engaged in mission work for many years and her knowledge of those affairs is wide and complete. Mrs. Waterbury told of the great amount of work being done for missions by the Baptists, but she said that much is needed in the way of money and additional workers. She told of recent gifts by a Scotch Presbyterian of a large schooner to be used in missionaries to Japan, and a valuable piece of property in Japan, where the missionaries can live comfortably. This, she said, should excite more interest among Baptists.

Dr. Yerkes was in charge of the meeting and there was special music, with vocal solos, by Edson C. Martin, baritone, and George Smith, tenor. She two also sang a hymn together. After the address a collection was taken for mission work.

THEIR SILVER WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Emmons Married Twenty-five Years—Entertained Their Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Emmons celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding Friday evening at their residence on Prospect place. The members of the Jolly Whist Club, of which they belong, a number of relatives from New Brunswick and Ford's Corner, were present in honor of the event and a very enjoyable evening was spent.

Whist occupied the attention of the guests for the first part of the evening. Mrs. H. S. Taylor and Peter A. Emmons won first prizes at the game. The second prizes were captured by Mrs. John Whitenack and J. P. Homan.

At the conclusion of the progressive whist, a collation was served and the rest of the evening was spent in dancing and social intercourse. Mr. and Mrs. Emmons received the congratulations at the successful termination of a quarter of a century of their married life.

Planted an Ivy Vine

Arbor Day was observed in the North Plainfield High School Friday by recitations and songs appropriate to the day. In place of the customary tree, an ivy vine was planted in front of the school by the senior class president, Frank Bach. As the vine was planted the school sang the "Ivy Day Song," composed by Maud Homeycutt, and set to the music of "Kentucky Babe."

The Union County W. C. T. U. annual school of methods will be held in the chapel of the Scotch Plains Baptist church Tuesday, May 12th. Prominent women in the State organization will be present.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

A training college for Sunday School teachers—the first of its kind in England—has been opened at Handsworth, Birmingham.

Dr. E. J. Banks, former consul at Bagdad, has undertaken to excavate the ruins of the historic Ur of the Chaldees for the Smithsonian institution.

Rev. Dr. Patrick, of St. Paul's church, Dundee, Scotland, has signified his acceptance of nomination for the principalship of Manitoba college, Winnipeg.

Rev. Henry J. Callis, the pastor of the African Zion church of Syracuse, N. Y., was born a slave. He is a Hampton graduate, has studied law, and once declined a nomination for member of the Virginia legislature.

Some of the English clergy in the diocese of Natal and Pretoria have been reduced to the humblest poverty, owing to lack of funds from England and the inability of the appeals for money for other purposes.

Rev. Dr. Curtis, pastor of Mount Auburn Presbyterian church at Cincinnati, has been devoting his church services to the especial interest of street railway employes. The Cincinnati street railway companies grant free transportation to employes and their families to and from the church.

In a number of our oldest and largest universities in the colleges circle a professor is addressed when spoken of as president or professor, but only as plain "Mister." It is "Mr. Eliot," "Mr. Hadley," not President Eliot or Hadley. The reason is an inherent modesty, which dislikes to assume titles of distinction and prefers the forms of democratic equality.

PICTURES OF VOLCANOES.

Some of the Difficulties Encountered in Photographing These Wonders While in Action.

As things go these days, the photographer is the man who is at the front, whether it be at El Caney, or off Morro, or at Manila, and one has but to make any danger worth while to find some one of the staff or professional brethren taking it with his camera, to hand it down as an imperishable and indisputable evidence of what man will risk and accomplish.

When it was reported in Honolulu last summer that Mauna Loa, which in was enveloped in a thick cloud of smoke, it knew without any further reporting that Mauna Loa was once more on the rampage. And so it turned out, the great volcano, through new fissures in the sides of the craters, was pouring out great masses of lava, which made the eruption one of the most striking of recent years. When it was made known from the island of Hawaii that the spectacle was likely to prove unique, two parties started out from Honolulu for the great mountain, accompanying them being Mr. Frank Dewey, a photographer, who did not mind such a thing as the upper lake of lava take a snap at a full-fledged eruption on the plank of Mauna Loa near the summit.

The main outburst formed a lake of boiling lava 100 feet in diameter, from which the fountains rose 1,000 feet in the air. From a breach in the cone a flood of lava 40 feet wide rushed down the mountain side at a rate of 30 miles an hour. A dozen vents near the great lake added new craters, was pouring out great masses throwing lava in the air, which covered the surrounding territory with a thick coating gliding down and enveloped in a thick smoke.

Lower down a new crater not so large as the upper lake threw great masses of lava and solid rocks in the air weighing hundreds of pounds. While the onlookers were fascinated at the sight, there was considerable danger, as the wind blowing from time to time blew thick columns of sulphurous smoke toward the party when they were on their way home. The running lava behind them prevented a retreat and death from asphyxiation surely threatened as the lava flood advanced in a menacing manner. Just as it was about to cover them, a violent gust of wind opened a gap arched like a tunnel. Through this the terrified tourists rushed and reached the open air on the other side in safety, falling upon the ground exhausted and overcome by their fearsome experience.

They also suffered from hunger and thirst, as the time under these circumstances that Mr. Dewey took the views, his zeal causing him among other things to lose his shoes, which were burnt off his feet by the hot lava. However, he got back to Honolulu safely, and was delighted at his success in catching one of the small cones in operation, as well as photographing some older lava beds and the solidified rivers of lava of other days.—Philadelphia Times.

Temperature of Surface of Sea.

In a paper communicated to the Royal Meteorological society on "The mean temperature of the surface waters of the sea round the British coasts and its relation to the mean temperature of the air," Mr. Dickson arrived at the conclusion that the mere presence of Atlantic water is more effective in depressing the summer temperature in Britain than in raising that of the winter months.—Chicago Tribune.

A BEAUTIFUL FOUNTAIN

LOYAL TEMPERANCE LEGION'S EFFORTS REWARDED.

The Fountain Has Been Ordered and Will be Set up Within the Next Month.

Plainfield is soon to have a handsome public fountain, which will be a credit to the city and to the efforts of the Loyal Temperance Legion, who were instrumental in raising the funds. The fountain, which is to cost $425, is being built by the G. F. Mott company, of New York, who designed it especially for Plainfield. The work is expected to be done and the fountain erected inside of a month.

The matter of an appropriation was laid before the Common Council five months ago, but no action was taken until February, when $300 was voted to the league fund.

Since then the children have made great efforts and the remainder of the amount has been raised mostly from the Sunday-schools and public school of the city. Fifty dollars was given by the Plainfield Water Company, who will also give the water free.

The fountain, which is to be for man and beast, will be twelve feet in heighth, with a child's statue on top, as it is aimed to symbolize those who have worked so hard for its success. At night it is intended to have it lighted by incandescent lights. It will be erected directly opposite the North avenue station, in front of the property of John MacIntyre, who donated the site.

The legion would urge those who have promised contributions to send them at once to Mrs. D. S. Miller, of 423 Orchard place, who is treasurer of the fund.

WANT EIGHT HOURS.

Journeymen Plumbers Ask for a Concession From Their Bosses.

At a recent meeting of the plumbers of the city it was decided to ask the bosses for eight hours work with nine hours pay. The demand has been made and the bosses will meet in a few days and make a reply to the contemplation. There seems to be but little doubt but what the demand will be granted. The plumbers are now well organized and have a good set of officers. It is impossible to learn who they are for their business is transacted in secret and not even the bosses know them.

BIG JOB FOR HIM.

F. A. Dunham to Build Roads in Tennessee to Cost $650,000.

F. A. Dunham, civil engineer, has returned from a southern business trip, during which time he was looking after a great deal of work in Bradley county, Tenn., where he is county engineer. New honors has just come to Mr. Dunham since his return. He received the appointment of county engineer for Hamblen county, Tenn., and the inhabitants of that county have decided to spend $50,000 at once on road work. As little time on a mile the amount will be expended in addition to the other. There is a great boom at present in the south for good roads and a great amount of work will be done in the next year.

Mr. Dunham returned home by the way of Wellowville, N. Y., where his chief engineer, Ephraim Vail, is now superintending the construction of fine roads.

Prosperous Condition of Congregational Church Shown at Annual Meeting.

MEMBERSHIP INCREASING.

TRUSTEES WILL CONSIDER ENLARGEMENT OF THE CHURCH.

Annual Meeting of Congregational Church and Society Held April 25th—Officers Elected and Reports Received—Board of Trustees Organized.

Absolutely free from debt, a small balance in the treasury, and with a growing membership, the Congregational church is in a flourishing condition. These facts were brought out at the annual meeting of the church and society held in the church parlors April 25th.

The meeting of the church was first held. L. I. VanAlstyne acted as clerk in the absence of George Fuller. The report of the Sunday-school work was made by J. A. Robbins, superintendent of the school. It showed an increase in the enrollment and attendance and of the benevolences. The report of the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, gave the total benevolences of the church as $2,042. The membership is now 251, a net gain of 11 over last year. During the year only one member was lost by death.

The election was held and L. I. VanAlstyne was elected clerk and L. B. Morgan and J. M. Whiton deacons. The members of the official board chosen were H. C. Nomer, J. W. Wyntant and J. A. Robbins.

It was decided to sell the Swedish church, which meets in the Congregational church once a week, by private subscriptions and by two collections yearly. A committee of five was appointed to prepare a new church constitution.

At the meeting of the society of the Congregational church J. M. Whiton acted as chairman. The report of the treasurer, M. C. VanArsdale, showed that all the bills against the church had been paid and that there still remained a balance of $30.46. There is no mortgages nor bonded indebtedness to the church and never has been since the church was formed.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Clerk, L. I. VanAlstyne; auditor, Stacy Baynolds; trustees, George W. Rockfellow, Joseph E. Morse, Alex Millar, H. W. Tomlinson, J. E. Stewart, M. C. VanArsdale and L. I. VanAlstyne.

The board of trustees were directed to take up the consideration of plans for the enlargement of the present sanctuary and report to the church in the fall. The salary of the sexton, George Dean, was slightly increased.

A meeting of the board of directors for organization was held at the close. George W. Rockfellow was elected president of the board, Joseph E. Morse secretary, and M. C. VanArsdale treasurer. The following committees were appointed: Church property, G. W. Rockfellow, J. E. Stewart and Alex. Millar; music, M. C. VanArsdale and G. W. Rockfellow; pews and sittings, J. E. Morse, L. I. VanAlstyne and H. W Tomlinson.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

AN EVENING IN SPAIN GIVEN AT THE CASINO.

An Enjoyable Entertainment in Honor of Twelfth Anniversary of Monday Afternoon Club.

SERIES OF TABLEAUX SEEN

SPANISH MUSICAL SELECTIONS WERE RENDERED DURING THE EVENING.

Unique Programme Was Greatly Enjoyed by Large Audience of Members and Friends—Those Who Took Part—The Committee.

The twelfth anniversary of the Monday Afternoon Club was celebrated Thursday at the Casino under most favorable circumstances. The attendance of members and friends was large and everything passed off successfully with not a thing to mar the pleasure of the occasion. The programme was unique and something different from anything given before.

The music for the affair was furnished by an instrumental quartette, mandolins and guitar, under the direction of Julian M. Fioersheim, of New York. The selections through out were Spanish, in fact, the whole affair might be termed a Spanish evening, as the tableaux represented events in Spanish history.

After the opening selection by the quartette the first tableau was given. It was entitled "A Jewish Merchant displaying his wares to Queen Isabella, about 1490." This was arranged by Mrs. Isaac Miller. Mrs. Howard Tracy took the part of the "Queen," and the merchants were Miss Scribner, Miss Viola Conklin, Mrs. Deuse M. VanVliet, Mrs. Charles S. Lee, Mrs. Malcom McKenzie and Miss Louise Green. The second tableau, "Courtship of the Cid," was in two scenes, and was in charge of Miss Whiton. E. C. Perkins took the part of the "King;" Mrs. Jose A. Machado, the "Queen;" Mrs. W. L. Saunders, "Princess," while Miss Bushmore and Mrs. Howard Fiemin were the "Ladies in Waiting." The second scene was the same as the first excepting the addition of Jose A. Machado who took the part of the "Prince."

In part second, the tableaux were from "The Spanish Gypsy," of George Elliot's poems, and consisted of four scenes, the first being the scene in the plaza. Miss Munger and Miss Tracy were in charge of these tableaux. Mrs. Howard Tracy represented "Fidelma," and Mrs. Charles Stover "Pepita." The other participants were Mrs. S. R. Kroni, Miss Krom, Mrs. Walter M. McGee, Mrs. Deuse M. VanVliet, Miss May Shreve, Charles Stover, Edward Patterson and VanWyck Brooks.

Scene two was the jewel scene. Mrs. Howard Tracy represented the "Princess," and C. E. Perkins the "Count," and in scene third Jose A. Machado, the "Gypsy Father," appeared with Mrs. Howard Tracy, who was the gypsy. The last scene was "The Gypsy Camp." Here Mrs. Tracy appeared as the "gypsy;" E. C. Perkins as the "Count," and Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Miss Sutphen and Miss Krom represented gypsies.

Additional pleasure was given those present by Miss Grace Cooley, whose explanatory readings of the tableaux were greatly enjoyed. Interspersing the tableaux some of the best songs from the Spanish were rendered by a member of the quartette, and while the scenes were being given the quartette rendered pleasing instrumental selections. Every tableau was well received and the participants heartily applauded.

The committees who deserve unstinted praise for their efforts include Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury, Mrs. John Gray Foster and Mrs. W. L. C. Gleaney, who were in charge of the entertainment, and Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, Miss Whiton, Mrs. Charles E. Corwin, Miss Tracy and Miss Munger, who were in charge of the tableaux.

After the entertainment refreshments were served. Those who presided at the tables were Mrs. D. N. Groendyke, Mrs. W. H. Sterling, Mrs. Charles Stover and Miss Sutpnen, and they were assisted by a number of the members.

TO TIDE WATER NOW.

Important Obstacle Overcome by the Lehigh Valley at Jersey City.

The only remaining obstacle to the completion of the Greenville and Hudson branch of the Lehigh Valley Railroad through Jersey City was overcome Friday, when laborers dug a deep cut at Chapel avenue and built a temporary bridge across the opening. Last year the street and water commissioners granted the application for the change of grade of Chapel avenue, enabling the construction of a viaduct, but the resolution went to the Supreme Court by a writ of certiorari, granted on the application of the Morris & Cumings Company, owners of the shore front at Chapel avenue. The ordinance was sustained by the Supreme Court, its decision being rendered a few days ago. The Lehigh Valley owns the property north and south of Chapel avenue, and will establish a large freight yard there.

SUING FOR EXCESS OF LICENSE FEES.

The Setting Off of Borough of Dunellen Caused All the Trouble.

$50 TOO MUCH EACH YEAR.

HOTEL KEEPERS CLAIM THEY ARE ENTITLED TO REBATE.

The Case Tried in Middlesex County Court Friday — Briefs Submitted to Justice Collins, Who Reserved Decision.

An interesting suit was on trial in the Middlesex county court Friday before Justice Collins, brought by Francis Mulvey against the inhabitants of the township of Piscataway for the recovery of certain excess licenses fees paid the township prior to 1898. Theodore H. Strong represented the plaintiff and H. C. Suydam, of Plainfield, the defendants.

Mr. Mulvey together with Patrick Fitzgerald, Lena H. Dantz and Charles Mulvey, all of whom have assigned their claims over to the plaintiff, secured inn and tavern licenses, according to the opening of Lawyer Strong, from the county courts during 1896 and 1797, paying a license fee of $150.

Before any testimony was taken Lawyer Strong read a written stipulation relatives to certain facts agreed upon by the counsel concerned. This statement gave the points agreed upon as follows:

In 1896 the population of the township exceeded 3,000 the number necessary to justify a license fee of $150. In 1896 the borough commission of Dunellen became a borough and Dunellen was set off from the township as a distinct municipality. This reduced the population below the figure of 3,000 and yet the license fee remained the same and was not cut down to $100 till 1898. The suit was brought for the recovery of these excess fees with interest from the time they were paid to the township through the County Clerk.

That the persons licensed were as named above; that they lived outside the borough of Dunellen; that Dunellen became a borough commission in 1896 and a borough in 1896 and that the limits of each were identical; that the township population from 1896 to 1896 including Dunellen exceeded 3,000 and since the borough was set apart was less than 3,000; that the fee from 1896 to 1898 was $150 and that in 1898 it was reduced to $100.

It was also admitted by counsel for the defendants that the county had paid the fees to the township each year.

The first witness was Francis Mulvey, who testified that he paid a license fee of $150 during the years 1896 and 1897 and $100 in 1898.

On cross-examination he said he had made no effort in 1896 or 1897 to see what the population of the township really was.

Similar testimony was given by the three other parties interested.

No witnesses were called on the part of the defence. The case was argued by the two attorneys and briefs will be submitted to the justice, who reserved his decision.

The amount involved is about $600.

HAS A FINE RECORD.

Admiral Terry, the Commander at Washington Navy Yard.

Will Become the Ranking Officer of the American Navy, Next to Admiral Dewey, in the Course of Three Years.

Rear Admiral Silas Wright Terry, who became the junior flag officer of the service by promotion to the highest grade the other day, and who will become the ranking officer of the navy, next to Admiral Dewey, in the course of three years, has recently been placed in command of the Washington navy yard and ordnance factory. His record is one of the best in the service. It was his good fortune to be in the positions frequently, in his career afloat, to grasp opportunities for distinguishing himself, as well as reflecting great credit on the flag.

Admiral Terry is a Knickerbocker, and was 15 years old on December 28 last. He entered the naval academy at the age of 16 as an acting midshipman. Before completing his course, at the outbreak of the civil war, he was ordered to active sea duty, and from June, 1861, to September, 1862, he served on the Dale in the Atlantic coast blockade. His first fight occurred while he was a member of a boat expedition up the South Edisto river, in April, 1862, when he was attacked by confederate sharpshooters. After this he was promoted to ensign and transferred to the flagship Wabash, and thence to the Alabama as aid on the staff of Rear Admiral Lee, until July, 1862, when he joined the sloop Dakotah, blockading the mouth of Cape Fear river. In the autumn he was transferred to the flagship Black Hawk, of the Mississippi squadron, where he took part in the Red river expedition, and for conspicuous bravery and good judgment was placed in command of the transport Benedit, with a detachment of 50 men and two brass howitzers, to carry dispatches and supplies for Admiral Porter.

Of Terry's discharge of these perilous duties, Admiral Porter, in an official report to the secretary of the navy, dated May 4, 1864, commented most highly on his 21-year-old officer.

President Lincoln promptly advanced Terry five numbers in the grade of lieutenant for gallantry and Admiral Porter appointed him detail officer on his staff, retaining him in this capacity until the close of the war. Terry was with the admiral during the operations against Forts Fisher and Anderson, at the capture of Wilmington and through the James river campaign, participating in the fall of Richmond and accompanying President Lincoln into the city the morning it was occupied by Gen. Grant.

Terry then had a European cruise on the Ticonderoga, a tour of theoretical inspection at Annapolis, served as executive officer of the flagship Severn and, finally, in 1881, secured his first independent command of a regular warship, the cruiser Marion, attached to the South Atlantic station.

After a tour of shore duty at League island, Commander Terry was made a flag officer, a distinction unique in its grade, and given command of a training squadron, consisting of the Portsmouth, the Dale and the Saratoga. In 1887 he came to Washington for board duty for five years. He was promoted to captain in 1893, and received command of the Newark. In that vessel he went with Admiral Benham to Rio during the Brazilian insurrection. During the war with Spain he commanded the receiving ship Franklin at Norfolk, and, though petitioning for a fighting ship, he performed most important naval service in recruiting and manning the active ships. At the close of the war he was placed in command of the battleship Iowa, and after taking that vessel around the Pacific was summoned to Washington as a member of the examining board, to be transferred a few weeks ago to the command of the Washington yard.

Profit from Refuse.

Clinker from the refuse destructors at Bradford, England, which in 1894 cost nearly $5,000 for carting and dumping, is now turned to profitable purpose in mortar and concrete making. Ground and mixed with cement, it has been found to give excellent results for the formation of reservoirs and tanks, and during the winter months screened clinker has found favor for sprinkling on roads made slippery by the frost.

They Are in Three Sizes and Contain Twelve, Twenty-four or Forty-Eight Two-Cent Stamps.

The new pocket stamp books were placed on sale at the postoffice Tuesday morning and found many purchasers. The idea has found immediate favor with all who have seen Uncle Sam's new convenience.

The books are of three sizes and contain twelve, twenty-four or forty-eight two-cent stamps. The stamps are arranged in pages of six stamps each. The whole is bound with card-board, on which is printed the domestic and foreign postage rates and the important facts about the money order and registry systems.

All the books are three inches long and a trifle over one and a-half inches wide. The larger of the books contain more pages. The price of the books is the amount of the stamps plus one cent for the cost of binding. The twelve stamp books cost 25 cents; the twenty-four stamp books 49 cents, and the forty-eight stamp books 97 cents.

Postmaster E. H. Eird has a limited supply of the books on hand and has placed an order for a large number. At present there are only a few of the larger sizes. Quite a number were sold during the day.

Plainfield Boys Won Easily.

Last Monday five members of the Y. M. C. A. played a game of basketball at the Somerville Y. M. C. A. These men do not constitute a regular team, but were picked out of the regular attenders of class work. The result of the game stands 16-13 in favor of Plainfield. C. Heywood acted as referee, E. Moraller and L. I. Van-Alstyne as umpires. The men representing the Somerville association did very good work for a new team, but roughness and kindred fouls had to be dealt with. After the game refreshments were served to players. The Somerville team will probably visit the Plainfield association to play a return game Saturday evening next.

Heath, 1,417 Pacific street, Brooklyn, where he had been living for some time past. Mr. King's death was due to an abcess of the stomach. He was a long and patient sufferer from the disease which caused a great wasting away. He had many friends in Plainfield who will learn of his death with deep regret.

Mr. King is survived by three children, David W. King, of Craig place, in the borough; Mott King, of New York, and Mrs. A. B. Heath, of Brooklyn. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Fannie A. Death of Miss Peckham's Mother.

The friends of Miss Helen Peckham, formerly teacher of German in the Plainfield High School, will regret to learn of the death of her mother, Mrs. Nabey Wooster Peckham, who resided here with her. Last February she fell on an icy pavement and broke both bones in her limb. After patiently suffering for seven weeks her physician decided, as the bones did not knit, amputation necessary, but in her enfeebled condition she did not rally, and her death occurred in the hospital at Syracuse, N. Y., April 23d. Her son, who resides in St. Louis, and Helen, who was in Los Angeles, Cal., reached her bedside a few moments before she became unconscious. Interment at Pulaski, N. Y.

Mr. Vail in Charge.

On account of being away from Plainfield so much of the time, looking after engagements in various cities and counties, where he is supervising engineer in charge of the construction of permits, roads, sewers, etc., and finding it impossible to give home work the attention it should have, F. A. Dunham has arranged with Ephraim Vail, who has had charge of his main office for sometime, to personally look after all engineering that may come to the office.

CONSPIRED TO KILL THE PROSECUTOR?

Serious Charge Made Against Woman Hotel Keeper in New Brunswick.

SHE IS UNDER ARREST NOW.

MRS. BUCK INCENSED BECAUSE SHE HAD BEEN INDICTED.

Detectives Allege That They Were Offered $100 to Commit the Murder—The Prisoner Denies the Charge.

Mrs. Rose Buck, keeper of a hotel at Cathcartsville and prominent citizen, was arrested last Sunday on a charge of conspiring to bring about the assassination or disappearance of Prosecutor John S. Voorhees, of Middlesex county. The charge is preferred by Sylvester F. Cosgrove, a detective connected with an agency in New York city.

March 28th last there was a fire at the factory of the Consolidated Fruit Jar Company, in this city, which was almost a duplicate of one which had occurred at the same factory only a few months before. It was believed that the fires were of incendiary origin, and to discover the incendiaries and accomplish their arrest and conviction the Fruit Jar Company offered a reward of $1,000.

For some time Cosgrove and another detective named John Hill, connected with the same agency, have been in New Brunswick working up the case.

Cosgrove secured employment with the Fruit Jar Company. He was discharged in a few days for smoking a cigarette in the factory. He went to Mrs. Buck's place and secured board, and told her that he would "do up" the man who had discharged him before he left the city. Mrs. Buck, Cosgrove alleges, said that she wanted the prosecutor put out of the way, as he was constantly persecuting her. Cosgrove says she offered to give $100 if Mr. Voorhees was killed.

Mrs. Buck is alleged to have made the same offer to Hill, and to have given as her reason that the Prosecutor had had her indicted for keeping a disorderly house. Cosgrove and Hill entered into the arrangement, it is said, and agreed to kill Mr. Voorhees Thursday night.

Friday, they say, they reported to Mrs. Buck that they had been unable to carry out the plan, as they had no positively identified the Prosecutor.

The detective agency received reports from Cosgrove and Hill, and these reports were submitted to the Fruit Jar authorities. Mr. Voorhees was informed of the contents of the reports so far as they concerned him. He waited without action until Saturday night, when, on the advice of the agency, he allowed the complaint to be made by Cosgrove.

Mrs. Buck had a hearing before Recorder Kuhn after her arrest. The two detectives made sworn statements. Mrs. Buck made a voluntary statement denying the charges and asserting that the men had offered to put the Prosecutor out of the way for $100. She said she laughed at their talk, as they had been drinking.

FANWOOD'S MAYOR IS LAID TO REST.

Funeral Services Over Remains of Late George Kyte Held Tuesday Afternoon.

LARGE NUMBER MOURN.

MANY OFFICIALS WERE IN ATTENDANCE AT THE FUNERAL.

Beautiful Floral Tributes From Organizations the Dead Man Was a Member of—Episcopal Service Carried Out.

Very impressive were the tributes given Tuesday afternoon in honor of the late George Kyte, whose funeral services were held at 3 o'clock from the home in Fanwood and at 3:30 o'clock from the Scotch Plains Baptist church. The early service was private and was for the near relatives. It was conducted by Rev. Mr. Mulford, rector of All Saints' P. E. church, where Mr. Kyte was a member and an attendant.

Following this service the remains accompanied by the mourning relatives proceeded to the church, where a large assemblage of people from various parts of the county were gathered to do honor to one to whom they owed so much.

Numbered among the mourners were many who had for years been associated in a business way with Mr. Kyte, and many who were employed by him, and for whom Mr. Kyte had done so much.

There was practically a suspension of business, and flags about the place were hung at half-mast. Everyone, from the oldest to the youngest, seemed to feel as though they had personally sustained a great loss, and that the place had also lost an exemplary citizen.

The church where the services were held was completely filled when the funeral cortege arrived, only those seats reserved for the relatives and members of the various organizations being vacant. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. They consisted of a pillow from the Exempt Firemen's Association, another from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and a third from Fanwood Council, No. 1105, Royal Arcanum. There were also pieces from Goodwill Lodge, K of P., and a number of wreaths of galax leaves and bunches of lilies from friends They were banked about the platform, in front of which the casket was placed. On the casket there was placed bunches of lilies and cut flowers.

As the cortege passed from the house to the church the members of the different organizations, who turned out in a body, followed. At the church Rev. Mr. Mulford, accompanied by Rev. G. M. Shott, pastor of the church, preceded, and were followed by the pall-bearers bearing the remains, and the mourners. As the church was entered Mr. Mulford read appropriate scripture selections. During the service he also read from the scriptures, and was assisted by Rev. Mr. Shott.

At the conclusion of the services those present were given an opportunity to view the remains. Then prayer was offered by Mr. Mulford, after which the interment took place in the cemetery adjoining the church. Mr. Mulford again read from the scriptures and the last sad rites were performed.

Among those of prominence at the service were County Clerk Howard, Surrogate Parrot, Sheriff Hopston and A. E. Gaddis, of Elizabeth; Freeholder Hope, of Roselle; Mayor George W. Rockefeller, James C. Pope, Former Sheriff W. T. Kirk, Joseph B. Coward, Amos Andrews, Former Collector John Johnson, Joseph M. Titsworth, Alex. Mallinson, George W. Moore, Nelson Runyon, George J. Tobin, Lawyer George Ball, Former Councilman L. B. Woolston, Constable Amos Moffett, Former Councilman S. F. T. Wilbur, of this city. There were many others from distant points and from other parts of the county.

Those who served as pall-bearers were E. L. Hand, Wm. E. Collins, F. K. Allen, George Carter, of Scotch Plains; W. W. Coriell, of this city, representing the G. A. R., and Charles Harris, of New York, a personal and warm friend of the deceased. The first four named represented the various organizations to which Mr. Kyte belonged.

TEA GIVEN BY MRS. LEWIS.

Delightful Event in Honor of Her Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Steel.

A very delightful informal tea was given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. David Lewis, of Illion, N. Y., who is temporarily at her former home on Rockview avenue. The tea was given in honor of her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Howard Steel, of Frankfort, N. Y. Mrs. Susan Clapp and Mrs. Curtis assisted in receiving the guests. The dining room table was very prettily decorated with greens and pansies. Miss Munger and Miss Cooley presided at the tea table, assisted by the Misses Frances and Helen Welz, Helen and Frances Phillips, Kathryn Dwight, Annie Jennings, Dora Waring, Miss Curtis and Miss Howell. A delightful feature of the tea was the charming instrumental music of Miss Frances Welz, the elder daughter of Mrs. Lewis. She rendered a number of selections on the piano with fine technique and exquisite skill, among them being several of her own composition.

A FAREWELL RECEPTION

GIVEN TO MR. AND MRS. HENRY GEE BY EPWORTH LEAGUE MEMBERS.

Held in Vincent Chapel Tuesday Evening—Musical Programme Given—Sailed This Morning on the "New York."

The Epworth Leaguers of the First M. E. church tendered a farewell reception last Tuesday to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gee, of Westervelt avenue, on the eve of their departure for Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Gee have both been active in the work of the church, particularly in the Epworth League.

The reception was held in Vincent chapel. The thunder storm that threatened and finally arrived during the evening had its effect, keeping away part of those who were expected to take part in the programme and many of the congregation. There was a fair attendance however and all joined in wishing the couple a pleasant and successful trip abroad.

The chapel was tastefully decorated in red and white, the colors of the League. The members of the social and literary committees of the League were in charge and assisted in receiving.

A musical programme was rendered during the evening. It included selections by an orchestra of home talent, vocal solos by Miss Mary Griswold and vocal solos by Charles L. Lewis. The selections were all heartily encored. Refreshments were then served.

Mr. and Mrs. Gee sailed yesterday on the American liner, "New York." While abroad they will visit the Paris Exposition. They will probably be absent two or three months. A party of their friends were on the dock yesterday to see them off.

MRS. RIKER'S FUNERAL.

The funeral service of the late Mrs. Tillie Biker, of Central avenue, were held yesterday at 10 o'clock from the house, and were conducted by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope Memorial chapel, where the deceased was a member. There were delegations present from Mizpah lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., Martha Washington Council, Daughters of America and the Women's Relief Corps, of which organization Mrs. Biker was a member. There was also present representatives from the State Council, Daughters of America, as Mrs. Biker held a state office.

There were beautiful floral tributes from the various organizations, showing esteem and love for one who was greatly loved and respected. After the services the remains were taken to Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn, for interment.

WHO GOES TO CHURCH IN CITY AND BOROUGH

The Information Will be Learned by Means of a Church Census.

WILL START ABOUT JUNE 1 ST

CENSUS IS TO BE TAKEN BY VOLUNTEER WORKERS.

An Executive Committee and District Secretaries are in General Charge of the Work—The Questions That are to be Asked.

About the same time that Uncle Sam starts after statistics concerning this country and its people for the census that is prepared every decade, an organized movement will begin in Plainfield to procure facts and figures regarding the church goers of city and borough. Under the auspices of the Ministers' Association and the Federation of Churches and Christian Workers, every home in both municipalities will be visited and a church census prepared after the same lines as the one taken in Philadelphia.

This proposed census has been under consideration for sometime and arrangements are now nearly complete so that the work will begin on or shortly after June 1st. In charge of the work is an executive committee composed of Rev. Dr. W. B. Richards, Rev. E. M. Bodman and Rev. A. E. Main. The general secretary is J. H. Manning, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Under him and in immediate charge of the collection of information are the district secretaries, one for each ward in the city and one for each election district in the borough. They are A. J. Moore, First ward; Frederick R. Stevens, Second ward, Harold W. Tomlinson, Third ward; Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, Fourth ward; Rev George W. Gardner, First borough election district; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Second borough election district.

The actual work of making the house-to-house visitation will be done by volunteer workers, appointed by the district secretaries. They will call at every house in their district and seek to find out the following facts: The number of children under twelve years of age; the number of boys under sixteen years of age; the number of men under thirty years of age; the number in the family attending church; the number attending Sunday-school; if not attending, the name of church or school preferred; the number attending public or private schools; the number of church communicants; the name of pastor of church or school, attended or preferred.

From these questions and the answers thereto, statistics regarding the church and Sunday-school attendance will be compiled. The results will also be referred to the various pastors to be dealt with according to circumstances.

Epworth League Anniversary.

The eleventh anniversary of the organization of the Epworth League will be observed by Chapter No. I, of that league, at the First M. E. church Sunday evening. Gen. James F. Rusling, of Trenton, will deliver his celebrated address on "The March of Methodism." The service will begin at 7:45 o'clock. There will also be special music.

Roselle Left Out.

It is a sad blow to Roselle that not one of the signs hanging from the Elizabeth and Westfield Company trolley cars bears the name of that beautiful borough. Every other town along the line of the road is mentioned, but not one word about Roselle. It is rumored that the boroughites are incensed at the omission.

Shooting Craps.

Almost every week, especially Saturday, large crowds of men gather in the open field just off of Sycamore avenue, in the city, and play craps. It is said that last Saturday an officer visited the place in uniform and expected to catch the violators of the law. The crowd saw the officer first and therefore got away.

Missionary Sociable.

The annual missionary sociable of the Women's Association of the Congregational church will be held in the church parlors Friday evening. The work of the American Missionary Association in Porto Rico will be described by one of the secretaries. There will also be a musical programme and refreshments.

Seven New Members.

Seven were admitted to membership at the Congregational church Sunday morning. Three were received on confession of faith and four by letter.

B. Roseling Byrne, of Rahway, was chosen clerk of the Board for the sixth year.

The following officers were appointed by the Board: County Attorney, W. R. Codington, of Plainfield; County Collector, E. M. Wood, of Elizabeth; County Engineer, Frank J. Hubbard, of Plainfield; County Physician, Dr. F. W. Westcott, of Fanwood.

After the Board had completed its organization the members, together with a number of county officials and prominent citizens of Elizabeth, were tendered a banquet by Collector Wood.

The Republicans have a majority of two members on the Board, Freeholder Adams, of Cranford, who was elected on a Citizens' ticket in opposition to the regular Republican candidate, voting with them.

COUNTY FINANCES.

Reports Made at the Final Meeting of the Old Board of Freeholders.

Elizabeth, May 9.—The Union County Board of Freeholders for 1899-'00 held its final meeting here yesterday afternoon. The report of County Collector Wood showed that the receipts of the county for the year were $635,482 and the expenditures $609,170, leaving a balance of $25,169 in the treasury, whereas last year it was only $18,000.

Freeholder J. Martin Boll, who retires after sixteen years' service, received from his colleagues a handsome rosewood case containing twenty-four pieces of solid table silverware.

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS.

William J. Logan, of Bridgewater Township, Re-elected Director of the Board.

Somerville, May 9.—The Somerset County Board of Freeholders for 1900-1901 met for the first time in the county courthouse this morning and organized for the year. William J. Logan, of Bridgewater, was re-elected Director. Justice Suthpen, of Somerville, will continue as clerk as his term does not expire till next year. There are seven Democrats and three Republicans on the Board. The following appointments were made: County Attorney, John A. Frick, of Somerville; County Collector, E. B Allen, of Somerville; County Engineer, Joshua Doughty.

CAR WAS ON FIRE.

Delayed the Train Twenty Minutes, but Then it was Impossible to Locate the Blaze.

As the 4:45 train from Philadelphia was about to pull out from the North Avenue station last Tuesday an unusual lot of smoke was seen issuing from the smoking car. The train was stopped and upon investigating the trainmen found that the car was on fire somewhere in the interior. The smoke continued to pour out, forcing the passengers from the car, but the exact seat of the trouble could not be found. As the train did not stop again until it reached Jersey City, it was finally decided to take the car there and put the fire out.

The trouble caused a delay of twenty minutes.

Horse's Wild Race.

A horse owned by Andrew Huff, of Chatham street, and driven to a cart by Thomas Duffy, ran away in the borough Tuesday afternoon. Some stones were being carted and the jolting of the cart caused some of them to drop from the load. This frightened the animal, and he made a tour of several of the streets. He finally landed in front of Sharkey's blacksmith shop, where some gymnastic evolutions were given. Several bystanders took a hand and in the course of time the animal was subdued. The driver was not injured, neither was the horse or cart. The load of stone, however, was somewhat diminished when an accounting was made.

Fifty Girls at Work.

About fifty Plainfield girls were started at work in the skirt factory Tuesday. More will be added as fast as the machinery is placed in position.

—D. W. Rogers, the sea food dealer, has just placed a handsome rubber tire delivery wagon on his route. This will be used specially for the early morning breakfast delivery.

TO PUT MILK SUPPLY UNDER REGULATIONS

Important Step Taken by Board of Health to Prevent Epidemics of Contagion.

A STATE LAW IS DESIRED.

HOPE THAT MILK DEALERS WILL ACQUIESE IN THE SCHEME.

Legislature Will be Appealed to—Fine Charge Placed on the Raritan Dairy Has Not Yet Been Raised—State Board in Charge.

A very important meeting of the Board of Health was held last Tuesday when the question of milk supply as regards the present epidemic of scarlet fever was taken up and discussed in detail. The members are thoroughly alive as to the opinion that something must be done at once to regulate the milk business, so that further epidemics may be avoided if such a thing is possible. It was decided to have a committee, consisting of Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk and Fred W. Dunn, examine carefully rules and regulations that can be adopted to conform to the State law, so that the Board may have more power over the milk supply in this city.

It is the purpose to take up the present condition of the dairies with a two-fold idea. First, for the protection of the consumers and secondly, in the interest of the milk dealer. The idea is this: That such rules and regulations be adopted that will permit the Board to inspect dairies, cattle and all things pertaining to milk supply. If everything is found correct the dealer will be given a certificate—a clean bill of health. It is hoped that by this action the milk dealers will have a sufficient amount of interest to gladly acquiesce, and thereby have no trouble at all. The joker in this scheme will be the losers thereby, for persons will not be disposed to purchase milk from dealers who cannot show a certificate.

The power of the Board of Health in this matter is limited, but the members hope to secure the hearty cooperation of local milk dealers, who want to do all that is possible to avoid a recurrence of the present troubles or anything similar, and they do not believe that much opposition will be met on the part of the dealer. There is no doubt but what he would rather possess a certificate showing that everything is all right, instead of taking a risk otherwise.

The Board is not going to let matters rest here, but when the legislature convenes next winter a determined effort will be made to secure the enactment of such a law that will compel milk dealers to take out a license, and have their dairies and cattle inspected. Such a bill was introduced last winter by Senator Reed, but it is said that Governor Voorhees vetoed it in the interest of the agricultural men.

The embargo placed on the Raritan dairy has not yet been raised. The farm is in charge of Dr. Voorhees, of Somerville, who has been put on duty there by the State Board of Health. It is well to state that the matter is now in the hands of the state authorities, and until such a time as all danger is removed no milk will be sold from this farm. The local Board hopes to receive a report from the State Board in a short time.

Impressions of England.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, will deliver a lecture on "Impressions of England," in the chapel of the Seventh-Day Baptist church this evening. No admission fee will be charged but a silver collection will be taken up for the benefit of the Christian Endeavor Society of that church.

Wanted Indigestible.

It is understood that some of the people who are quarantined on account of scarlet fever, are indignant because the U. S. Express Company will not leave packages at their doors. This is in direct violation of the law and the expressmen would run great risks in going to these houses.

Going South to Look After Work.

F. A. Dunham, the civil engineer, started yesterday for Tennessee, where he will look after his work as supervisor of roads in several counties. He was accompanied as far as Philadelphia by Ephraim Vail, of this city, who has charge of Mr. Dunham's Plainfield work.

Heavy Doors.

The large and heavy doors for the new vault being erected in the basement of the City National Bank arrived Tuesday, and Captain Theal and his men placed them in the basement. The doors weigh nearly three tons.

M'CARDELL NOT THERE.

The Report That He Was at the Recent Councilmanic Caucus Proved to Be Wrong.

According to the opinions of many of the Councilmen expressed since that time, the caucus held to consider Mortimer's application for a license, during the Council proceedings Monday night, was not satisfactory. Had they known, they say, that the legal representative of Mortimer and of the opposition were going to present their arguments there, they would never have consented to the caucus. There seems to have been a general misunderstanding at the time. No vote was taken at all in the caucus. Such action was seriously objected to by several of the Councilmen who decided that they would vote on the application only in open Council. The statement that any tacit understanding was reached is vigorously denied. Andrew McCardell, who was reported as having been present at the conference, was not there. Only the two lawyers, for and against, were invited into the caucus.

BRICK WALL COLLAPSED

ACCIDENT IN STABLE AT REAR OF J. C. BLIMM'S GROCERY.

Wall Fell Out—Horse Had a Narrow Escape From Serious Injury—Destruction Supposed to Have Settled.

One of the walls to the brick stable in the rear of J. C. Blimm's grocery, corner of East Third and Washington streets, collapsed Tuesday. There was no apparent cause. Mr. Blimm's horse narrowly escaped serious injury from the falling masonry.

The first that Mr. Blimm or anyone else knew of the accident was when the former went out to the stable early this morning to water the horse. He found a part of the wall, bounding the stall where the horse was, had fallen out. A few of the bricks fell inside and against the horse's legs, cutting them slightly.

The wall fell away for a distance of twelve feet and for a height of seven feet. There still remains a foot or more of the masonry supported by the roof beams. Mr. Blimm took the horse out of the stall at once for fear that the rest of the wall would fall.

Mr. Blimm believes that the foundation settled and caused the wall to bulge out, resulting in the falling of the wall. There is no clue as to the time of the accident. The horse was still greatly frightened when taken out of the stall. The animal had pulled so hard on the rope in its efforts to escape that the rope had cut the skin on the animal's neck. The stable belongs to Assemblyman J. W. Welch, of German Valley, and will be repaired immediately.

DR. PATON TO BE HEARD.

Famous Missionary Will Speak in Westfield Tomorrow Evening.

An excellent opportunity will be given to Plainfield people tomorrow evening to hear Rev. Dr. John Paton deliver an address in the Presbyterian church at Westfield. Special cars will be run from the Watchung avenue switch for those desiring to attend. Mr. Paton belongs to the new Hebrides group of cannibal islands and has probably had more hair-breadth escapes and trying experiences than any other living man. At one time he faced the pleasant aspect of being on the reserve list of a cannibal feast. He was easily first among the really noted missionaries at the Ecumenical conference held in New York last week.

IS BERGEN OUT OF RACE FOR CONGRESS?

He Intimates as Much While Talking Over the Political Situation.

PORTO RICAN JUDGESHIP.

MR. BERGEN EXPLAINS HOW IT WAS HE DECLINED IT.

Gives it as His Opinion That the Republicans Will Meet With Overwhelming Reverses in the Year 1900.

Lawyer Frank Bergen, who declined a Porto Rican Judgeship last week, is out of the Congressional race also. He did not say it, in just so many words, but he intimated as much.

It has been rumored about town for sometime that he was offered a seat on the bench in Porto Rico to get him out of the way of Congressman Charles Newton Fowler, who seeks a renomination. But this Mr. Bergen denies. He says that Governor Foster M. Voorhees urged him to accept, "seeming to think it a good way for me to get into political life, but as far as I know Mr. Fowler had nothing to do with it, and I never consulted with him about accepting or rejecting it."

Then he dictated the following statement:

"The Porto Rican incident is closed, as far as I know. The matter had nothing to do with the Congressional campaign in this district. Governor Voorhees and other friends of mine thought the position offered a desirable opportunity for me; others thought differently, and I decided not to go for the reason that the change in my situation here would be so great and sudden, separation from friends and acquaintances would be very unpleasant, and I hesitated to take my children to a tropical climate. The report that I had once made up my mind to accept and subsequently changed it is erroneous. Senator Kean kindly went with me to the President and other officials in Washington, and my impression is that he rather inclined to think that I should accept the position, but he was not willing to advise positively one way or the other. I have an admirable corps of friends, and I like to please them; but in this matter it was impossible to agree with the views of all."

In talking of the Congressional fight he said: "I have lots of friends and if I wished to organize them I have no doubt of the result, but I do not think I shall do so."

His friends were organized in the Fowler-Voorhees ward this spring election and won out easily.

Mr. Bergen is a politician of foresight. He says that the political tide has turned, and in about 1902 it will wash the Republican majority out of Congress and leave the Democrats in.

"The man who is elected this term," said he, "is a one-term man and his time will expire in the middle of a Presidential administration when the party in power is always more or less in disfavor and he will have to come home and make an uphill fight against great odds."

He pointed out that the Republican majority in Congress today is only twelve and of the Congressmen elected at the last election, thirty-seven of them got less than one hundred majority.

He spoke of the strikes throughout the country and the unrest as a sign that four years from now the Democratic party would be successful.

"My threat to enter the Congressional race benefited the city at any rate," said Mr. Bergen, with a smile, evidently alluding to Congressman Fowler's donation of a public library site and building to the city.

Three Score and Ten.

Miss Henrietta Vermeule, aged 70 years, daughter of the late Leonard Vermeule, died Tuesday night at her home, 202 West Front street. She was a native of Plainfield and formerly lived on East Third street. One sister survives her. The funeral services will be held from the house Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Buffalo Conference Results In Amicable Adjustment.

But Reserves the Right to Decide as to the Men to Be Employed and the Methods of Reducing Expenses.

BUFFALO, May 3.—An amicable adjustment of existing differences between the members of the car repairers' association employed of the New York Central railway and Superintendent Waitt of the motive power department, who represented the company, was concluded at 6:30 o'clock last night after a conference which was nearly continuous from 11 o'clock in the morning until that hour.

The agreement reached was ratified at a joint meeting of the strikers last night so far as it relates to their own grievance. The reservation made by the Central men was that they would not return to work until the car repairers on the other lines who struck either in sympathy or on similar grievances alone shall have arranged with their employers to resume their former positions.

The roads on which the repairers, inspectors, helpers and others went out in sympathy for the Central's men are the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, Lehigh Valley and Michigan Central.

On the Western New York and Pennsylvania and Erie the men have made demands for an increase of wages. The grievances, however, were of long standing, but that of the Erie was only presented, and their men went out yesterday. The men on the Western New York and Pennsylvania struck on Monday.

The session between the joint executive committee of the car repairers and Superintendent Waitt was a dignified discussion of issues in which, it appears, the men have practically won. The Central, according to Superintendent Waitt, carried out its declared policy to deal not only justly, but liberally, with its employees, but strongly emphasized the determination to sustain its officers in the exercise of discretion in the employment of men and the reduction of forces when the demands shall so require.

The men claim that the wage question was adjusted substantially according to their demands, which were 22 cents per hour for carpenters and painters, 22½ cents for machinists, 21 cents for pipe fitters, 20 cents for tinsmiths, 17 cents for blacksmiths and $65 per month for airbrake inspectors, the company, the strikers declare, conceded these rates with the exception of the carpenters, who will receive 21 cents per hour; mechanics, who will receive 22 cents, and the airbrake inspectors, who will receive $62.50 per month.

STRIKES IN PHILADELPHIA.

The Labor Trouble Spreading—Building Is at a Standstill.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—The strike which was begun yesterday by the building trades for an eight hour workday, with increased wages, has spread to several additional industries connected with the building trades.

In a number of trades some of the masters have signed the workmen's scale, and the men have returned to work. A large number of others, however, have been forced into idleness by reason of the fact that the builders on which they were working were blocked on account of strikes. This was particularly so of bricklayers, who could not work because of the strike of the hodcarriers. Fully 4,000 men who are employed in the erection of buildings are out, and the number is likely to increase for a few days.

Several large structures, including the new mint building, were practically tied up, and operations on many others were likely to cease for the time. The mint building is a sympathetic one, the men employed there refusing to handle structural iron made by nonunion workmen.

German Sugar Makers Alarmed

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Vice Consul Murphy, at Magdeburg, reports to the state department that the growth of the beet sugar industry in the United States and the increase of sugar production in other parts of the world are already causing anxiety in Germany, and the scientists are casting about for other uses for German sugar. Various propositions are under consideration, one looking to increase of the export trade and others to an augmentation of the internal consumption of sugar, to be subsidized, so as to relieve the areas concerned, by arbitrary legislation. Numerous experiments also are being made with potatoes and rye, to determine to what extent it can be utilized as food for hogs and as a muscle developer for the human race.

Receipts in the Philippines.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The division of customs and insular affairs of the war department has made public a cabled statement to the effect that the receipts of the Philippine Islands from all sources during the month of April were $881,255. The receipts of the previous month from all sources were $670,446, a difference in favor of the month of April of $131,809. Of the total amount of customs receipts collected during April $472,650 was collected at the port of Manila, $57,000 at the port of Iloilo, $13,450 at the port of Cebu and $1,400 at Jolo.

A New Railroad Planned.

TUNKHANNOCK, Pa., May 3.—A syndicate of New York men has contracted to build a railroad from Lopez, Sullivan county, to Forkston, in the extensive deposits of fire clay, building and monumental stone on Forkston mountain, Wyoming county. This will make accessible a rich territory hitherto without railroad facilities. In addition to the building materials there is a considerable quantity of coal in that section.

Pennsylvania Town Scorched.

LOCKHAVEN, Pa., May 3.—Westport, this county, was visited by a disastrous fire yesterday. The following buildings were destroyed: The general store and warerooms of Goodman Bros., the general store of Thomas Bros., the residence of T. M. Robbins, the general store of W. C. Wertz and the residences of Curtis Caldwell, J. W. Costner and C. W. Wilson, several barns and outhouses.

Negotiations Broken Off.

LONDON, May 3.—The negotiations between Denmark and the United States relative to the purchase of the Danish West Indies, according to the Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail, have been definitely broken off.

NEVER SO CHARMING.

Dame Fashion Is Breaking All Its Records of the Past.

Both as Regards Fabrics and Styles the 1900 Easter Gowns and Hats Are Unsurpassed in Genuine Loveliness.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

FASHION was never more charming, less exaggerated or more generally becoming than at the present moment. The discretion and good taste of fashionmakers seem to have been exercised to the very utmost, with truly fascinating results, and madam will have no one to blame but herself if she does not look prettier than ever in her new Easter finery.

There are many interesting things to say concerning the new dress materials. Never were they more beautiful in texture or more harmonious in color than now. The variety is utterly without limit, and the same may be said of the price. While many of the so-called novelties are sold at a disproportionately high figure, on the other hand some of the choicest patterns are marked at such a reasonable figure as to place them easily within the reach of the multitude.

Wool fabrics have been restored to all their old-time popularity, while silk and wool mixtures were never prettier or more in demand than at present. There are silks of all kinds and descriptions, from the stately looking rich black down to the most inexpensive taffeta. Foulard silk, which has been so popular the past three summers, is giving way to the pretty printed crepes which are brought out for the first time this season. They come in all colors, as well as in the new pastel shades, and are ideal for summer gowns. The furore for crepe de chine remains unabated, while embroidered crepe de brege is to be counted among the novelties sought after this season. It is, however, in wash gowns that manufacturers seem to have reached the limit of perfection, particularly in the silk mulls and printed organdies. Something entirely new are the organdies showing an Egyptian design on pastel grounds. They are as beautiful as the costliest silk, and if one can afford the luxury are the thing to buy.

There is a prevailing tone of black in both gowns and millinery this season, and it is safe to predict its popularity for some time to come. Dame Fashion has set the seal of her approval on all shades of gray, especially a new shade called Parisian gray. It is certainly charming to look upon, but is too cold in tone to prove becoming to any but a small minority, and the same may be said of the new shade of green very much in vogue. Brown is another favorite color of the season, and some of the new shades which border closely on tan are ideal for street wear, but they require careful handling and must be worn en suite or the wearer will look hopelessly dowdy and ill-dressed.

Many of the handsomest gowns seen thus far are made with accordion-plaited skirts. While this is hallowed a new fashion it is really a revival of three years ago; but, after all, we cannot have too much of a good thing, especially when it concerns one of the prettiest vagaries of fashion. The plaiting, unlike the work of past seasons, is done so extremely well, so fine and yet so firm, that a skirt of this kind can well be reckoned among one's most serviceable belongings. These skirts look particularly well when fashioned of crepe de chine or any of the soft clinging stuffs now in vogue.

Anent of black, the newest black gown in the blackest of the black, its rich tone not marred by dashs of color here and there, as was the prevailing fashion through the past season, and which at its best showed a lamentable lack of originality. On the contrary, the trimming on this new gown invariably takes on the same somber hue, and usually consists of many tiny tucks and frills of fine lace or net or the ever-becoming chiffon or tulle.

The tailored skirt of the moment is long and trailing, made with a quantity of perpendicular tucks and plaits which give the required amount of fullness at the bottom, and is sung and close fitting about the hips, like the gowns of the early autumn. These skirts look particularly smart when worn with a jaunty little black silk coat and headgear composed of lace, adorned with chenille and ostrich plumes. Fashionable tailors are trimming their swellest looking tailor-suits with handsome appliqué lace, with a more or less liberal hand. It is a daring mode, but when manipulated by the deft fingers of the expert is in good taste. For instance, a black broadcloth gown, otherwise commonplace in itself, takes on quite a different air when ornamented with an appliqué showing an intermingling of black, white and silver, while equally fetching in appearance is a gown made of royal blue venetian cloth, fashioned with the all-conquering Ascot coat, adorned with a quantity of silver and blue appliqué.

In spite of the fact that the blouse has been relegated time and time again by certain fashion writers, there is nothing further from the minds of those who decree the fashions than the extinction of this useful and generally becoming little garment. Dame Fashion, however, wills that for this particular season it shall not be worn with a skirt of a contrasting color. The blouse may be ever so much finer and elegant in every way, but the color scheme must be the same as appears in the skirt. The newest silk blouses are made to fit the figure with perfect snugness, and how to get into them is a mystery to the beholder, for there are apparently no seams and no opening and no wrinkles are visible. On the other hand, those made of ribbon and lace are pouched over so slightly back and front. They are daintier and prettier than anything yet seen, and with the added charm of novelty are, of course, in great demand.

Many of the newest blouses are made entirely of accordion-plaited lace and chiffon, and from the point of good looks and becomingness have much to recommend them. For the woman who errs on the side of too much plumpness such a waist will prove ideal, as it yields to the figure, takes good lines and when properly adjusted at the waist invariably makes it look small.

There is no doubt of the important part lace is going to play this summer both as a trimming and for entire gowns. In the latter form it is most attractive, and when mounted on a silken lining makes as charming a gown as one can desire. Next in importance are the little lace boleros that ornament the bodice of every other gown this season. It is a very pretty fashion in itself, besides affording an excellent opportunity for doing over last summer's frock; for with the addition of a little accordion-plaited chiffon and a lace bolero one can readily turn out a most respectable "done over" at very little cost.

There is so much newness in millinery this season that every woman must see for herself in order to appreciate the radical changes Dame Fashion has wrought. Some of the newest shapes dip in the front, thus forming a becoming shading to the eyes, especially when surmounted by endless folds of chiffon. Others, again, turn upward at the face in directoire fashion, while the three-cornered headgear is a happy compromise between a toque and a hat.

The picture hat may be bent into any shape you like, but according to the best authorities it must be dead black, shaded with the softest ostrich plumes. The craze for the all-jet hat is becoming daily more marked. When trimmed with ruches of softest chiffon, and worn with the clear tulle veil of the moment, it is chic and becoming, but unless toned down in this manner the wise woman will not fall into the error of wearing one.

DEVOTED PAPA FROG.

He Holds His Little Sons and Daughters on His Back and Carries Them Wherever He May Go.

Here is the picture of a male frog with the little tadpoles living on its back, discovered lately by Dr. August Brauer of Marburg, Germany. For a little fellow it has a pretty long name, but perhaps its paternal devotion has earned it the Latin name, arthroleptis seychellensis boettger. It has been noticed before that in some species of frogs living in Venezuela and the island of Trinidad the male bears the young on its back, to which they hold by their mouths. But this new species is the first one on which so many as nine little ones were discovered, and, besides, they do not hold on by their mouths, but seem to be stuck to the papa frog's back and sides by some gummy substance, which holds them in place until they are large enough to care for themselves. Like all tadpoles, these still have the tails, which will soon drop off, and if you look carefully you can see the beginnings of their legs just in front of their tails. It is a wonderful device of nature that the female sometimes deposit her eggs on the back of the male where they hatch out, and the little tadpoles grow until they attain a certain size. Such is, of course, not the case with our common frogs, but in these rare species, only lately found by naturalists, is a strange reversal of what seems to be the usual law that the mother takes care of the young. In this species the eggs are not laid on the back of the male, but on the ground, and only after they are hatched do they take up their position on papa's back. And there they may ride, not for a trot upstairs or through the hall, as little children do, but until they are big enough to walk around and look for their own food. It would hardly be an attractive pet to sail into kind of a frog the most paternal of animals.—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

THE FLOATING NEEDLE.

How a Pretty Experiment Can Be Performed with a Sewing Needle and a Small Magnet.

An interesting experiment may be performed with quite a small magnet and a common sewing needle. Insert a light thread in a needle, tie and cut off one end, leaving a single thread six or eight inches long. Lay a horseshoe magnet on a table, with the poles in front.

Magnetize the needle by rubbing it several times, always in one direction, by one pole of the magnet, after each stroke returning the magnet in an arc through the air.

Take the end of the thread between thumb and finger, and suspend the needle over its attractive pole, allowing the point to come within one-fourth inch of the magnet, then, with a circular sweep of the hand to keep the point in position, draw the eye of the needle down toward the other pole. This, if carefully done, will bring the needle to a horizontal position, where it will remain, floating or in suspension, as long as the thread itself is held steadily.

The magnetic forces operating to produce this effect appear to be: First, the attraction of the left pole for the point of the needle; second, the repulsion of the right pole for the same point, and, third, the attraction of the right pole for the eye of the needle, which is resisted by the thread supporting the needle; the latter also is held from approaching the left pole by the same means.

The experiment may be made more effective by covering the magnet with a sheet of paper, thus concealing it.—Golden Days.

WONDERFUL CREATURE.

Nature Has Given the Chameleon the Power to Change Its Form Almost Instantaneously.

The chameleon has for ages been an object of curiosity, not only on account of its ability to change its color at will, as one might suppose who had read accounts which mentioned only that one characteristic, but also on account of a remarkable power which admits of the creature instantly changing its form. At times it takes upon itself almost the exact form of a mouse; again, with back curved and tail erect, it is the exact counterpart of a miniature crouching lion, which no doubt gave origin to its name, chamaleon, which clearly means "ground lion." By inflating its sides and flattening back and belly, it takes upon itself the form of an ovate leaf, the tail acting as the petiole, the white line over the belly becoming the midrib.

When thus expanded it also has the extraordinary power to sway itself over so as to present an edge to the observer, thus greatly adding to its means of concealment. As is well known, the least excitement, as in handling, will cause a change in the color. In its normal state it is of a light pea green. When excited, the groundwork remains the same, but transverse stripes about 30 in number appear on the body. These stripes, which are of a very dark green to begin with, soon change to inky blackness. The prevailing idea that the chameleon takes upon himself the peculiar hues of whatever he is placed upon is as curious and widespread as it is erroneous. Placed in boxes lined with red or blue silk, they retain their pea green color, with no leaning toward the brighter hues of the surroundings.—Brooklyn Eagle.

HOMEMADE COMPASS.

How to Put Together a Toy Which Affords Amusement as Well as Instruction.

Get a piece of a mainspring 2½ to 4 watch, from three to five inches long. It can be straightened by passing repeatedly between the thumb and finger if held firmly. Now, if you have nothing better, take an old file and grind or file the small end, or handle, to a sharp point. Then strike this punch with a hammer into the middle of the steel so as to make a little dent; then give the steel a little bend at this point. Now drive a nail through a little block of wood and sharpen the nail to a long point. You are now ready to balance the steel on the standard, made of the sharpened nail. If the work had been carefully done the steel will balance nicely upon the point of the nail, as shown in the drawing.

Now comes an essential part of the proceedings, and not a difficult part if you have a magnet. If you haven't one, you will have to find some one who has. At some other time I may tell you how you can magnetize your needle without a magnet. To magnetize the compass needle, lay it upon a smooth surface, and with one end or end of the magnet strokes the steel from near its middle to one end; and with the other end or pole stroke the other end of the steel from the middle to the other end. This should be repeated until the steel is thoroughly magnetized. If now the needle be balanced upon its support it may dip a little. This can be remedied by breaking off a little of the heavy end. Try different metals on, to see what will act best, and set upon it in just the same way.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Hunter Pursued by Baboons.

While exploring in Borneo, a hunter shot a large baboon at a spring some distance from camp. It fell with a sharpery, and immediately another baboon came in sight and gave a loud yell. While the hunter was preparing to shoot the newcomer, a small army of baboons appeared on the scene and the man realized that he was in danger of being torn to pieces. One full-grown baboon is easily a match for a man, and a hundred are to be dreaded more than as many wolves. The hunter promptly took to his heels and the baboons after him. Occasionally he paused and shot the nearest animal, but he would have been overpowered had not his comrades rallied out from the camp and with shouts and a combined volley compelled the pursuers to retreat.

CLEVER DANCING BEAR.

La Belle Fatima, of the Baltimore Zoo, Goes Through a Series of Oriental Movements.

Baltimore has a dancing bear at its zoo that quite outdoes all the other bear movements and tricks up to date.

This bear, called La Belle Fatima, has made her reputation by a "specialty," an imitation of the couchee-couchee dance of oriental women.

When Fatima climbed out upon the platform in the airy attire of a Turkish dancing girl, it is then time for all other attractions of the zoo to subside into dark corners. For Fatima is certainly the queen of all animal dancers.

Time was when La Belle Fatima was only an ordinary trick bear, with tumbling as her specialty, but one day while in Chicago she was foreigled into a Midway Plaisance performance that lingered there after the world's fair was over, and there she saw several of the Egyptian dancers perform their peculiar dance.

Here it was demonstrated that evil communications corrupt even the good morals and manners of a bear, for, during a moment or two, when the Hagenback band was playing the melody of that famous oriental dance, Fatima stood upright and gravely proceeded to "wiggle" in exact time with the music.

Mr. Francis Ferrari, her trainer, was dumfounded, but upon regaining composure saw that he had a real dancebear in the versatile Fatima.

The director general of the Baltimore zoo also appreciated the new accomplishment of the bear to such an extent that he paid a bonus of several thousand dollars to secure her talented bearship.

In the garb of a Midway dancer Fatima reveals the twitch and play of her muscles. She shakes like a huge bowl of jelly, keeping exact time to the oriental music, and she is as vain over her performance as the average stage beauty.

There is nothing in the dance to offend the most sensitive—in fact, the whole performance is hugely humorous.

Fatima evidently has a lot of wisdom stored away in her curiously shaped head. In her leisure moments she likes rolled up in a huge brown ball, thoughtfully contemplating her long toenails, but wears a far-away look, indicating that her mind is occupied with nobler things.

The only sign of self-importance thus far observed is the bear's obvious repugnance to continuous performances. Fatima's contract requires her to appear morning, afternoon and evening, and she is kept hustling, to her manifest disgust.

The elephant, Jolly, takes no pains to disguise his professional jealousy, and trumpets maliciously while Fatima is dancing.—N. Y. World.

A Wise Mexican Bird.

Mexico has a clever bird called the melanarpex, which has discovered a new use for the telegraph pole. At the foot of the pole this bird makes a large hole, in which it rears its family. Somewhat higher up the post it makes an observatory, from which bored holes permit it to observe the horizon in every direction. Still higher this sagacious bird makes its storehouse, and thus the pole serves as its house, fortress and warehouse.

HABITS OF RACCOONS.

They Are Mischievous and Pretty, and Fond of Nuts and Fruits as Well as Fat Chickens.

A few years ago, in the top of a large hollow tree in a dense bit of woods in northern Pennsylvania, there lived a family of four young raccoons. Their mother, with a feeling common to all mothers, thought these four, flaxy, frolicsome youngsters to be the finest babies in the world. All went well with the little fellows while they remained in the hollow tree, under the care of their wise old mother. As they grew older, however, they felt a desire to see the big world outside, and, accordingly, fell into the habit of taking long rambles by night.

It was while returning home early one morning from one of these rambles that the prettiest one of the lot came face to face with a bright-eyed boy of about 14. For a moment both were too frightened to move; but the boy soon recovered and made a prisoner of the poor little raccoon. For a time the little captive bore his imprisonment very sullenly; but good food and kind treatment soon changed his wild, shy nature into a spirit of love and confidence. When he had attained full size his appearance was between that of a fox and a bear, on a smaller scale, of course.

For the benefit of our girls and boys interested in nature, our friend, Mr. E. A. Sterling, sends a photograph of this pretty and intelligent little animal climbing up the big limb of a tree.

In the wild state the raccoon always conducts himself like a perfect little gentleman. His favorite feeding-grounds are the shady banks of streams, or in some swampy bit of woods, where can be found those large delicious frogs he loves so well. He has, however, no scruples against going out into the fields and orchards, in search of fat fields and green corn; and, moreover, when Dame Fortune puts nice fat poultry in his way Mr. Raccoon is too much of a gentleman to refuse them, which often gets him into trouble with the farmer. He also eats mice, rats, lizards, eggs—in fact is almost omnivorous. He is active day and night.

A curious and interesting habit of raccoons is that of washing all their food in water. It matters not whether it be a piece of meat or an ear of corn, a nice clean berry or a big fat bug, they will always seek a little pool of water and carefully dip the object in it several times before conveying it to their mouth.—St. Nicholas.

Milk Direct from the Cow.

Mrs. Morey of Coney Island, New York, peddles milk, but she doesn't keep a horse and wagon. Instead of that she has a cow tethered to the houses of her customers, and while they wait Mrs. Morey says, "So, Bess!" to the sleek-looking cow, and proceeds to milk the desired quantity. In this way each customer is assured that the milk received is fresh and free from adulteration. This custom of leading the cow from door to door was a common practice in this country many, many years ago, and in parts of Europe the milch cows are goats are still made to serve in the place of the modern milk wagon.

FOOLED THROUGH THE EYES.

THERE is nothing of which we are more sure than of that we see—yet there, it matters not how sure we are, we easily deceived. Anyone would declare that the two bears in the picture are indicating a big in the smaller of the two in the picture—but it isn't. Both of these are exactly the same size, as measurement will prove. Why do we think that one is larger than the other? Because the boy and the man alone of the figures turn toward each other on the right, and this makes the fierce seem smaller than it is, although a comparison will prove that they are of precisely the same size. Now, if the two pictures of the bears and the boy and man were reversed, everyone will say that the bear must be the larger of the two, but they are really exactly the same height. The reason of this deception is that the street man, because of the breadth of his figure, seems shorter. This explains the very common phrase, "thin and tall," the thinness seeming to add height to the figure. The importance of proportion for beauty, either in person or in art, is demonstrated by this example.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE NEW WAISTS,

They Are Stiff as Boards, but They Give the Required Figure.

Everybody can have everything that heart of woman can desire now, for all the things that ever were are now waiting for them to choose from. There are empire dresses and mantles, and there is no end of other things, the chiefest among them being polonaise and princess shapes and styles.

The princess is well adapted to the new shape of the woman in the new corset. With this figure a woman wants a dress that will accentuate the figure, and the princess dresses of the season are made with smooth fronts, and they hang in one unbroken line from top to bottom. The backs fit closely, and the fronts fall in that serpentine outline now so much affected.

The polonaise is like the princess in form, but is not so long and is understood to be only a part of a dress. The skirts worn with the polonaise are often of quite different stuff, and the bottom of the skirt is made to flare out as much as possible. This special garment is for outdoor wear more particularly and looks better in broadcloth than anything, though there are a number of other goods quite suitable, among them silk in the heaviest weaves.

A few of the thick cottons are made in polonaise shape, such as khaki, pique and the thick pebble weaves in the cotton cheviot. Some of these cottons are really very handsome and stylish when made in the approved styles. These are with Eton jackets and short jackets made with almost tailor finish. Being firm, the goods will take a finish which up to now has never been achieved.

All of these cotton goods are washable, and so when they are made the wearer should remember that fact and have whatever trimming is put on them done so that the dress can be ironed without taking the whole business apart. There will always be one or two so called wash dresses in a summer's wardrobe, so fancifully trimmed that the owner knows very well that it will be impossible to have them done up so as "to look anyhow" after. So let the everyday dresses be plain and put as much trimming on the best ones as may be desired.

The khaki cloth is unexpectedly dear, probably on account of the Boer war, and so it is a mark of the bloated bondholder to be able to have one unless the wearer makes her own gowns.

We are told that green is the fashionable color, but where one sees anything made of green one sees a hundred other shades and colors.

There are many things of green, notably the straw hats. These are very suitably trimmed with flowers, more so than with fruit. The sunshine yellow is a factor in trimming many things usually garnished with more sedate color, among them the pretty little caps of black lace which will be worn over the shoulders a little later in the season. These small capes will be of chantilly or some other rather thin black lace. Around the edge of the foundation, which is of plain net, there will be a full of the sunshine velvet. And it may be put in any other place that suits the designer.

A representative dress was made of striped poplin, and the stripes were blue, matching the stripe in the dress. This was in three shades, and there was a bolero of the poplin and a shirt waist of blue and white percale.

The new fashion in waists is that we must be bound up until we cannot move. The amount of confinement put in the seams passes belief. No waist is right unless it is stiffer than the traditional board. The corset might as well be entirely absent for that matter, since the waist is boned to such an extent.

The dressmakers are very clever to make women believe that the short corset is so very hygienic that we must pay $12 for one, and then they go and lace us in a coat of mail as far as our dress waists are concerned, and the outside of the waist gives no hint of the amount of featherbone on the inside.

Miss Gwendolen Keats, better known as "Zack," has already made a name for herself as a novelist. Her first volume, "Life Is Life," received much praise, but it was for her second, "On Trial," that the academy crowned her effort with honorable mention. Miss Keats has been writing only two years.

Mme. Jean Pommerol, who has explored all sorts of unfrequented places in the Balkans, Poland, Hungary, Asia Minor and Africa, says that the women of the Tonareg make the laws, while the men mind the babies and do the washing and cooking. The women receive all the education, while the husbands and sons are left in ignorance.

Leaders of New York's Four Hundred have decided to build a woman's athletic club which is to be modeled after the Chicago Woman's Athletic club. Plans for a building which will cost $1,500,000 have already been drawn and approved. One million dollars has already been subscribed and 5 per cent bonds will be issued for the rest. One of the chief attractions is to be an "old Roman bath" to take the place of the ordinary Turkish bath. The pool is to be 100 feet long and 40 feet wide.

Symbolism of Jewels—Items of the Bridal Costume.

The diamond is credited with power to preserve affection between husband and wife, and on that account is so much used for engagement rings. The ruby brings good fortune and symbolizes charity, loyalty and valor. The emerald gives fidelity and hope. The turquoise is the emblem of sincerity, confidence, friendship and tenderness. The sapphire betokens justice, beauty and nobility. The topaz signifies true love, also riches.

A bride no longer carries a bouquet, nor yet a lace handkerchief. The prayer book alone occupies the hand, and is bound in silver, the ivory ones having fallen into disfavor through being imitated in celluloid. The gloves worn may be either suede or glace kid, but the latter usually fit better and appear more elegant. The stockings are of plain silk, or have insertion of valenciennes or mechlin lace, and low slippers accompany them. These are of white satin, and it is considered better form not to have them ornamented with embroidery or buckles.

The illustration shows a costume of black satin. The redingote skirt is laid in large plaits and opens over a front of lattice green satin, the sides being bordered with an application of guipure. The close bodice has a plastron of lettuce green satin, with a collar and frill ruches of guipure, seeming a continuation of the lace on the skirt. A fringed drapery of lettuce green crepe de chine is fastened at the left side of the corsage by a shoe and buckle and folds to the waist. The tight sleeves are plain. The collar is of green satin, the bow of black velvet with a buckle. The hat of black spangled tulle is trimmed with green satin, a gold buckle and white feathers.

MODES AND FABRICS.

Gowns of Thin Cloth and Their Appropriate Decoration.

Cloth costumes of very light weights are among the most elegant of the season. The material called panta cloth has a finish resembling the powdery pigment for which it is named, and the surface is as delicate as the bloom on a plum.

This fabrics are ornamented, as they were last year, with painted garlands of flowers. These are mostly for ball gowns and are very delicate and expensive. Similar designs are painted on silk, cotton and linen muslins at a comparatively low price, and the effect is almost as good.

Cloth guipure, which is really cloth cut out in patterns and embroidered at the edges, is a novelty which is a costly and highly appropriate decoration for cloth gowns. It is worked upon the foundation of strong, plain net, which gives it greater firmness.

A picture is given which shows a costume of pastel blue cloth. The skirt has four plaits let in at the sides and back, but is otherwise plain. The corsage of blue velvet, which has its edges outlined with guipure and a guipure berthe, is placed over a lower bolero of cloth like the skirt, closed by ornamental buttons and tabs. The collar and draped chemisette are of white mousseline de soie. The cloth bolero has long, tight sleeves. The hat of white straw has a drapery of blue mousseline de soie confining the brim. The drapery is fastened at the left side by a large jewelled ornament.

DEMANDING HER RIGHTS.

But She Forgot to Ring Up the Main Office and Get No Satisfaction.

When a gentle-faced, mild-eyed and sweet-voiced woman gets angry the surprise of her family and friends is as great as that sepreditant to the savage hound when attacked by a hare.

One of the most charming of this class of women, who was entertaining a number of friends from out of the city, went to the telephone to get the receiver to her ear and in low, melodious tones called for a number. She waited patiently and called again. At the third request her voice showed a slight elevation and corresponding approach to sharpness. Then began the real entertainment.

"See here! If you don't care to take the time or don't know enough to get me that number, kindly explain what is the meaning of the receiver for. It's a nuisance and an imposition, that's what it is. If the line's busy, say so. I have a right to know whether there is any use of my standing here waiting. I'm not in the hello business as you are, nor yet deaf and dumb, or both? Give me a thousand. I've stood this neglect as long as I'm going to. Hurry up, now. If the company is paying salaries for impudence, inattention and impertinency, I want to know it. I never saw anything like it," and there was an edge on her voice that fairly sawed the air.

The husband and the company were holding their sides, suppressing the noise of laughter with handkerchiefs at their mouths and signaling each other to keep quiet.

"Mamma," said the little daughter, who had just stepped into the situation, "you forgot to ring up the main office. You're talkin' to the empty wires."

Mamma blushed, joined in the laugh and admitted that she was glad that her temper was not anything but pleasure.—Detroit Free Press.

BALLOONING FOR ASTHMA.

So Said Henry Coxwell, Who Made the Highest Ascent and Is Just Dead.

Henry Coxwell, whose death is announced, made the highest balloon ascent on record. Henry Glaisher accompanied him. This was in the early 60's. They reached an altitude of seven miles, where the atmosphere was so rarefied that Mr. Glaisher fainted and Mr. Coxwell's hand became so stiff that he was forced to open the valves with his teeth.

Mr. Coxwell had a thorough belief in balloons as adjuncts to military operations, and for 30 years advocated their use in this way. At the Crystal palace long ago he gave an exhibition of their signaling capabilities by day and night. In 1863 he sufficiently affirmed the military authorities to permit him to give experiments at Aldershot and at Woolwich arsenal with captive balloons. After a time a balloon corps was formed, but it was permitted to buy its experience by many failures, which, as Mr. Coxwell said, might have been averted if professional instruction had been engaged.

To the question: "Will ballooning ever become a fashionable pastime?" once put to him, Mr. Coxwell replied that he thought not. "Ballooning," he added, "is remarkably popular to-day to a certain extent, as it is now more used for acrobatic purposes and fancy acts. But a balloon is a costly affair. When I was a young man they used to be made of expensive silk, and a good balloon would cost £500; now you can make them of muslin at a cost of from £150 to £200. No, I don't think it will ever become fashionable." If Mr. Coxwell experienced the fact that ballooning is of great benefit to people who suffer from asthma. "You see," he said, "you get into such pure air, and I know I always feel better after an ascent."—N. Y. Journal.

FACTLESS SOCIETY PEOPLE.

Topics That Should Be Forbidden Are Often Persistently Dwelt Upon.

It is a well-known circumstance that the fact of knowing that there is some subject that must be avoided causes the conversation by some fatality to turn into that particular direction. At a recent luncheon the hostess were for the first time a set of new teeth, and, of course, dental appendages came up every now and again as a topic of conversation.

"Teeth," declared a young mother, who was all too occupied with her own nursery difficulties to notice the connection, "are a trouble from the nursery to the grave." A skating accident was mentioned where a pretty young debutante in her delight at finding out the advisability of replacing it with a false one was discussed. A new dentist who had effected wonderful improvements in the shape of the jaw was spoken of. In short, the topic cropped up again and again, and there seemed no way of suppressing it.

To a very fat person it is almost impossible to avoid talking of individuals similarly afflicted. To a thin man or woman, living as they do under the inevitable trend of conversation, and so on. Chief among social sins is to say that which ought not to be said and leave unsaid that which ought to have been said; and we really learn as important a function without deploring mistakes or regretting lost opportunities.—N. Y. Tribune.

SCIENCE AND INVENTION.

FILTRATION OF WATER.

Wherever It Has Been Introduced Death Rate from Typhoid Fever Has Decreased.

Although Chicago unquestionably has the best drinking water of any large city on the globe, there is no doubt that many impurities exist there so disease, especially to typhoid fever, find their way into the city's homes. While the quality of our lake water will be greatly improved by the passage of the city sewage through the drainage canal, there will still be enough of impurity left to be a menace to the public health. The use of sand filters is highly recommended by the best sanitary engineers of the country. These filters have already been constructed in 17 American towns and cities in the last decade. During the same period more than 100 others have installed mechanical filtration plants. No fact in sanitary engineering is more fully established than that the death rate from typhoid fever is materially lowered by filtration, and the present interest of the public gives hope that the time is not far distant when the cities of the United States will take rank with London, Berlin, Vienna and Amsterdam in freedom from that disease.

The system of slow filtration through sand beds is regarded by the highest authorities as preferable to the more rapid system of mechanical filters, though in many cases the latter may be installed at a less expense. Statistics of both systems show that the slow sand system is used in cities having an aggregate population of 21,400,0000, of which 10,200,000 are in Great Britain and 200,000 in the United States. The aggregate population using mechanical filters in the United States and Canada is but 1,800,000, while this system is practically unused in other countries. Only towns of the United States have filtered water supplies at the present time.—Chicago Chronicle.

POTATO BUG PICKER.

An Iowa Farmer Has Invented a Machine That May Perform Wonderful Deeds.

Most methods for the extermination of potato bugs remind one of the old recipe for making hare soup, which began, first catch your hare; so that about the only effective method of getting rid of this little pest is to first catch your bug, and then kill him. A western inventor, hailing from Lone Tree, Ia., very seriously offers a recently-patented device for assisting in catching the bugs. It consists, as pictured here, of a gas pipe frame, wheelbarrow, the handles of which are supported by straps passing around the shoulders of the user. At one side of the frame is a vertical arrangement, operated by a crank, the idea being, of course, to push the barrow alongside of the individual potato plants, and by turning the crank to beat the foliage with the paddles, thus dislodge any bugs that might be clinging to it. It is assumed that the force of the blow, which would be proportioned to the strength of the plant, will knock the bugs off the leaves and branches and into the pan that is in the bottom of the barrow, where they could be killed by a poison solution or by any other suitable method. —Chicago Daily News.

Largest Tree in the World.

At Mascall, near the foot of Mount Etna, is to be seen the largest tree in the world. It is known as the Chestnut of the Hundred Horses, on account of its enormous circumference. The largest tree in the United States is said to be the gigantic tree near Bear creek, on the north fork of the Tule river, in California. It measures 140 feet in circumference. The largest grove of trees in Nevada is 119 feet in circumference.

Four in Three Thousand.

Four persons out of every 3,000 men, women and children in the United States are either in jail, or out on bail, or are fugitives from justice. Their total number is 90,000, out of a population estimated at 70,000,000. Only 60 per cent. of all those who have fallen foul of the law are women.

NEW DRESS NOTES.

The Latest in Skirts for the Spring Season—Accordion Plaits Popular.

The new dress skirts are being made of every sort of fabric, from gingham to silk, from cashmere to French batiste and gingham; and no two styles seem alike, so varied are their outlines and effects, and so differently does each designer or dressmaker fashion and decorate them.

From Paris the Riviera and London come the following hints for the spring season: Double vests of contrasting color and fabric, set one beyond the other; garrick shoulder capes of graduated sizes, ending in points at the waist; revers superposed one above the other; and a series of Eton jacket fronts corded at the edges, silk-lined, graded in size, and lapping each other like the roof of a thatched cottage.

New effects in side, kilt, accordion, knife, box and double-box plaiting are constantly appearing. Handsome silk and satin petticoats are similarly finished, and so many gowns the plait, on one or more of its edges, at the waist, the side or box plaits reaching either from the shoulder seam to the belt, from the neck to below the bust, or from the bust to the waist line. If perfectly adjusted and fitted, a waist of this kind is becomingly worn by women of moderately full figure.

In making up the new plaited skirts they may be cut in one piece, the single seam made to come under the right fold of the box plait at the back, where narrow-width materials are in hand, such as summer silk, taffeta, and the like, the seams may without difficulty be brought to the under fold of any desired plait. Paper patterns show the skirt notched at the top and bottom for each plait, which is perforated its entire length with lines that mark the creasing of each fold. These perforations are followed and covered with chalk or soapstone, which leaves a clear mark upon the skirt material laid beneath the pattern.

To give the full expanding effect to the lower part of the dress skirt, are set forth some accordion-plaited silks sold by the yard, in different colors and in black and white; also deep flouncings of sheer lawn embroidered in deep patterns on the lower edge. The embroidered batistes in soft sorrel tints are pretty, and the cramé for supplying effects is recommended once more among imported robe dresses in pure white or in pale delicate shades, as well as among silk and other rather fabrics for both spring and summer wear. Petticoats are of the greatest importance in properly adjusting new dress skirts. The latest French models are mostly of frilled grace silks. It is the French decree that they shall fit very closely around the hips and widen to the feet to the extent at the foot, emphasized by a multiplicity of small frills nearly covering one very deep flounce or two narrower ruffles.—N. Y. Post.

HIS LIMITATION.

He Couldn't Find Some Things According to Supposed Orders and Wanted to Quit.

Some months ago one of the janitors of a certain school rang up a member of the school board.

"What do you want?" said the member.

"This is Smith, the janitor of the—street school, and I have made up my mind to quit my job."

"What's the trouble?"

"I am honest, and I won't stand being slurred. If I find a pencil or a handkerchief when I am sweeping I place it on the teacher's desk. Every little while, though, the teachers or some of the pupils, who are too cowardly to face me, give me a slur."

The members of the board thought that something was really wrong, and decided to find what it was and correct it.

"In what way are you slurred, Smith?" he asked.

"Why, a little while ago I saw written on the board: 'Find a common multiple.' Well, I don't know what it is like, but I have been down cellar in garret, and I can't find it."

The M. S. B. had to get away from the 'phone to laugh. When he had recovered his composure he came back.

"Well, what made you give up your job?" he said.

"Well, last night, in big writing, on the blackboard, I found this: 'Find the greatest common divisor,' and I said to myself: 'Both of them miserable things are lost, and I get the blame for swiping them. So I am going to quit. Good-by.'"—Memphis Scimitar.

Indiscriminate Savings.

Saving is not always economy. True economy consists as much in throwing out perfectly worthless articles which are of no use to the owner as in saving articles that are of value. The woman who hoards up old tin cans, with the idea that they may be utilized some time as receptacles for food, is an extravagant manager, because the cans take up room and befill thereby. The cans are made of inferior material, and it is not safe to use them to hold food or as cooking pans. Their usefulness is past after they have been used once or twice to pour out. It is economy to burn greasy, old twine, old dusty paper, or anything which represents matter out of place when it is hoarded up.—N. Y. Tribune.

Salted Bread Nuts.

Salted bread nuts are a rather heartier dainty than the salted almonds, but are valuable as an occasional variety. A cupful of them should be blanched and marinaded in a tablespoonful of olive oil. Let them stand about three-quarters of an hour before they are thoroughly salted and browned in the oven.—N. Y. Post.

A SEAMLESS PATCH.

How Our Grandmothers Did It—Fashion These Careful Directions.

Our grandmothers prided themselves upon their patching. To a time the art languished, but, fortunately, during the last few years fine sewing was introduced into the public schools, the children are all being taught the manifold uses of the needle, and many a mother has to confess that her little daughter can turn out as fair better patch than she can herself. Here is a lesson on how to insert invisibly a patch in serge, mousseline or any material easily frayed out:

First, cut away the torn or worn out part, so as to form either a square or rectangular opening. Second, to fit up exactly this hole, cut a corresponding piece from a material of the same texture and color, allowing on either side a margin which will be frayed out until it has a projecting tabs in the semblance of the arms of a cross. Third, apply the patch thus divided into five exact sections or squares in such a way as to have the solid center filling up the hole in the dress. Then fasten on to the foundation framing the hole. Fourth, thread a fine needle with the two ends of a thin strand of silk, doubled in two to form a loop; with this needle and silk draw, as straight over resisting fibre one of the edges of the patch. Before drawing the silk right through, slip into the loop one of the frayed out threads, which hold lightly in place with the thumb of the left hand. Repeat this last, and by this movement both the silk and the frayed out threads will be drawn into the material, the smaller or pearl stitches scarcely showing on the right side. Be careful to have the drawing started from the very edge of the patch to avoid any appearance of a break. Repeat this thread by thread. These frayed out threads, being about two inches long, cannot be threaded one by one without some slight management, hence their introduction into the loop silk to drag them through the running stitches.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SOME CANADIAN ENGLISH.

Funny Dialect of the Habitant of the Backwoods Coun-try.

Joe Place, who lives out on the Biddefurd Post road, supplies a fair amount of innocent amusement to the people of that section.

The other day he drove into the city with a load of cordwood. On the top of the load he had placed a rather heavy parcel in a short sack, and the contents of the parcel occasionally moved and writhed.

When some one came along and asked him what he had, he answered Joe lifted up the shorts sack and immediately there was a mighty squealing from within.

"Leetle pigs," quoth Joseph, smiling.

"Now I tal yo' w'at I do," he said, joco sely, "yo' tal me how many leetle peegs dere be in dat bag, and be gar, I geeve yo' de whole t'ree of dem."

"Well," said the other, "I guess there are three pigs there, Joseph."

"Dat's right," answered he.

"Oh, be gar," shouted he, "somebody gon' tol' yo' 'bout dat."

They undertook to run down the enpenties of Joseph's horse the other day, and Joseph's version of the case was told him that the critter couldn't trot in 4:30. Joseph shook his fists. His voice trembled with suppressed feeling. He pulled out his wallet and wanted to bet. And as he talked he grew madder.

At last he said:

"Now yo' look here, yo' don' know w'at yo' talk about. But hoss he all r-rat. He can go Jessie fas' as yo' want him trot. I tal yo' I pull heem on de barn and greve heem handful of oat and quart of hay. I tak' heem off de barn. Den he go better dan he'l pas' four or be gar, I greve yo' to heem."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Showing the Gratitude of Republics and the Power of the Machine.

Charles and William were partners in a Small Way in the Commission Business. When the War broke out William went to the front, and as Charles had an Uncle who was a Congressman he went to Washington and Did Important Work for Some Contractors.

After the War William came Home to Marry Her Clothes and was a Hero, although he was about Six Hundred Dollars in Debt. He found Charles not only Engaged to the Prettiest Girl in the Place, but with his Pockets Full of Ready Money.

It is Pleasant to Know that Republics are not Always Ungrateful.

David was a Fine old Merchant. He was a Deacon, a Solid Man and universally Respected. The Civic Reform Club urged upon him to Run for Mayor, and the Republicans informed him that he would be Pretty Near unanimously Elected. He Weakly consented, and the Respectable Element was De-lighted.

They rose Against him on Unknown grounds named Michael, a retired Saloon Keeper. He was an Ignorant man, but he knew a great Deal about Machines.

When they counted the Ballots it was Discovered that Michael had been elected by a Vote of Two Thousand Two Hundred and Ninety-three to One Hundred and Fifty-eight.

To Save the Birds.

The fact that Governor Roosevelt has signed the bill passed by the New York Legislature making it a misdemeanor to sell or possess for sale the plumage of wild birds or songsters, moves the Philadelphia Record to remark that "civilization moves on," and to add that at the constant this statute will bear with some hardship upon milliners; but there is no progress without some cost. The women who wear the plumage of songbirds in their hats are not only accessory to the savagery of the killing, but they are guilty of the further savagery of a form of adornment which is a weak imitation of the get up of Geronimo or Sitting Bull when on the war-path. The attempt at restraint in New York is wholesome and should be followed up in other States.

The Record also notes that the Lacey bill passed by the Federal House of Representatives last week, which proposes to so enlarge the powers of the Department of Agriculture as to provide for introduction and restoration of game song and insectivorous wild birds and to prohibit interstate commerce in game killed in violation of local laws, would, if it should receive the assent of the Senate, do much to facilitate the enforcement of the New York law, which might otherwise be evaded as an invasion of interstrading rights between the States.

Fowler's Benevolences.

Congressman Fowler's benevolences are attracting widespread attention, but in nearly all the newspapers that have noticed the "philanthropy" of Mr. Fowler the dominant idea seems to be that his charity and free use of cash for the benefit of the public is closely connected with his modus operandi of capturing a renomination as Congressman. In this view the Newark News makes these good natured observations:

If there is anything else that the city of Elizabeth wants in the way of public buildings, monuments, hospital, art galleries, etc., now is the time to let it be known. Congressman Fowler is in a generous mood and Frank Bergen's declaration that the Point Boo Judgeship is not calculated to make Mr. Fowler draw his purse strings together. Not content with the gift of a $100,000 public library, he has announced that he will pay all expenses connected with accepting the two Spanish cannon which the City Council had refused because of the cost of transportation and placing them in the veterans' plot at the cemetery. But is Elizabeth alone to benefit from Mr. Fowler's beneficence and his ambition to return to Congress? Elizabeth is not the whole district. Plainfield, Orange and Bayonne are all important and populous cities of the Eighth District, not to mention Hahway, Summit, Westfield, Cranford and Roselle. In showering his favors on Elizabeth Mr. Fowler should not lose sight of the danger of arousing local jealousies elsewhere. What will it profit him to capture the Elizabeth delegation if he shall lose all the others?

It is interesting to note the records by months of contributions to the Dewey arch fund. The contributions for the month of November last footed up $80,000. For December, when the Admiral's engagement to marry was announced, the amount was $10,000. For January, when the Dewey house was deeded to Mrs. Dewey, it was $11,000. For February it was $20,000; for March it was $24,000, and for April, when the Admiral's candidacy for a Presidential nomination was announced, the sum was $1,200.

The Port Jervis (N. Y.) Evening Gazette printed this remarkable advertisement the other day:

A setback has been given track elevation in New Brunswick, perhaps even a knockout blow. The Pennsylvania railroad has offered to pay all expenses of elevating the tracks, but has insisted that the city assume all responsibility for all damages to property on account of the change. This the city will not do, and at the last meeting of the Board of Aldermen it was unanimously voted to reject the company's proposal.

State Board Gives Notice That Plans for New School Buildings Must be Filed With Them.

No business of importance was taken up at last Monday's meeting of the Board of Education. The usual number of bills were ordered paid and the collector's report showed $7717 44 collected, which, with the interest, amounted to $7744.06.

A communication was read by Secretary Lounsbury from the Schlict Combustion Process Company asking for authority to equip the rest of the schools with their coal-saving device, as there are two schools already equipped with it. As the past winter was a very mild one, the members did not think it had had a thorough test, and the request was deferred until the device could be well tested. A letter was read from the State Board of Education calling attention to the new law on buildings requiring all plans to be submitted to the Board. It was referred to the building committee.

Superintendent Maxson moved that State Superintendent of Schools Baxter, of this city, be invited to make the address at the grammar school graduation exercises. The motion was granted. Mr. Maxson reported $330 60 collected for tuition fees, which had been placed to the credit of the Board. Bids for 500 tons of coal were ordered advertised, to be opened June 4th. The clerk was instructed to secure programmes for the graduation exercises, after which the Board went into executive session.

A FAMILIAR LANDMARK.

A Long Established Business House—Half a Century Before the People.

This spring of 1900 is an anniversary time for more than one enterprise, Amos H. VanHorn, L't'd., at 73 Market street, Newark, among others For over 40 years this aggressive firm has steadily and rapidly been growing, each twelve month seeing some notable advancement in its size and increase in its business. A floor space of over four acres is area is needed to accommodate this one business and the successful manner in which they cater to the wants of every home in supplying furniture, carpets, matting bedding, stoves, refrigerators, is well worthy of commendation. The Amos H. VanHorn, L't'd. people are famous for one thing above another, it is their extraordinary "low price-and easy-terms-way" of doing business, it being understood by the writer that whether cash or credit terms be wanted, the same low prices prevail.

There is also a free bus to the pleasure and profit in store for one in going through the large establishments, four fine buildings, from the immense carpet and furniture sales room through the complete storage warehouse and thence to their latest acquisition the new process carpet cleaning plant.

You start from No. 73 Market street, go through one entire block to Campbell street, then through another building and another block to Bank street, thence half way through to Academy street before you get through all the Amos H. VanHorn establishment.

A success such as this house enjoys is worthy of praise, for it has evidently come from serving the people as they want to be served, honorably, faithfully and well.

Current Dramatic Attractions That Please Soldiers Can Witness.

ROCHESTER LAMP was made there have been many "improvements" put on it, it pleases some people to call them so, but the only real improvement we know of is the "NEW ROCHESTER" and that is only one that makes it really perfect and safe, so

THE NEW ROCHESTER

Is to us nobody all that is really worth having in a lamp, both as to quality and style. Don't be put off with "just as good" talk, but insist on having the "NEW ROCHESTER."

We can fill every lamp trouble. No matter what you want a lamp for, or all your lamp troubles are ended if you get the "NEW ROCHESTER," when once made or lamp intended into a NEW ROCHESTER, we can do it. Let us send you illustrations on the subject.

PASS ROSES INSTEAD OF THISTLES TO MEN

Noble and Uplifting Sermon on Bridling the Tongue Preached by Dr. Richardson.

PLAIN DUTY TO FELLOW MEN

TERRIBLE THING TO REPEAT RECKLESS STORY IN CARELESS MANNER.

Publicity of That Which is Secret Takes Away the Most Powerful Motives to Reform in a Guilty Life.

Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the First Avenue Baptist church, preached a sermon Sunday on the subject "Bridle the Tongue." It was filled with many noble and practical thoughts directed to the professing Christian.

The text was James 1:26. "If any man among you seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain."

In part Rev. Mr. Richardson said: "The man whose piety is a mere pretense and not a reality is the man who does not bridle his tongue. However loud his professions of piety, or harsh his denunciations of sin, the talker's religion is an empty show. So indispensable is this bridling of the tongue that without it all claims to piety are notoriously barefaced and false.

"Friends, if you have any regard for the happiness of your fellow men, do not make any statement concerning their characters unless you know it to be true. He who passes a story with regardless of its truth or falsity, if it happens to be false, is more guilty than the one who first coined the story.

"Supposing we do know something true against some one. We may, by giving publicity to that which is secret, take away the most powerful motives to reform in that guilty life. We may humble with shame needlessly a soul who might, by a little encouragement from us, rise to nobleness and purity. Or, beloved, if we see some one stumbling, instead of tripping him up let us help him on to his feet. If we see some one on the down grade, instead of giving him an additional push let us reach out for his hand and pull him up to the top of the hill. Instead of thistles, let us pass roses to our fellow men. Instead of pouring ammonia on their wounds, let us apply the oil of grace and kindness and bind up with the balm of Gilead. Oh, I tell you it is meager satisfaction to have excited the wonder or gratified the curiosity of some one who seeked and have brought about an irretrievable loss to some soul. That individual is liable to be envied who can carelessly throw all these aside, and with heedless independence say, 'My tongue is my own, and I will say what I please.' There is a higher than an earthly tribunal where words are to be rehearsed and consequences examined. The hour is hasting on apace when not an idle word shall be forgotten, and miserable indeed will be the apologies which the vain talker will have to offer.

"I stood by the bedside of a dying man. Human objects were growing dim rapidly. It was an awful physical struggle, but gathering his family around his bed he said: 'You observe my fight with death and it makes you weep. But I am happy. I never put any thorns in another's pillow, and there's none in mine now. I have won loyal to Christ, and he is true to me. I am happy.' So I tell you, beloved, it will not be long before you will have this same struggle with death. All the events of the past will come up then, and, if you would avoid thorns in your own pillow, don't put them in another's. So bridle the tongue."

PARK GOLFERS ACTIVE.

PREPARING SCORES ON WHICH TO BASE OPENING HANDICAP.

Large Attendance at the Links Saturday Afternoon—Cold and Windy—Improvements to Course Considered.

Although there was no regular competition scheduled at the Park Golf Club links Saturday afternoon, the course was crowded all the afternoon. The announcement was made Friday that two handicap competitions, one for women and one for men, would be held Saturday afternoon, May 19th, and that three scores must be turned in by next Saturday to form a basis for handicapping. That gave the members something to do and a number of them made two rounds during the afternoon and turned in the scores to the greens committee.

It was cold and the red golf jackets and sweaters of the chilly season were largely in evidence. Most of the regular attendants were on hand with a sprinkling of new candidates for golf ing honors. Nobody was in anything like form to make so no score of particular excellence were turned in. As usual, Professional Andrew D. Blair turned in the best score. He made a round in 45, in company with W. de la B. Anderson and Morgan T. Townsend. Anderson has had little or no practice so far this season and so was his best. Townsend was off his usual form and finished in 58. The wind was stiff and was particularly felt on "Desperation," "Hill Top" and "Home." The course itself was in fine condition, the putting greens showing up particularly well.

Professional Blair is now in complete charge of the course and has done very well. The greens committee and Blair are considering the placing of artificial bankers on the first, second and fifth holes.

Watching Cragin's Wharf Scheme.

James B. Vredenburgh, counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, appeared before the New Jersey Riparian Commission yesterday afternoon and asked for an opportunity to be heard on the proposed grant to Edward F. Cragin of a large tract of land under water between Bedlow and Ellis islands for storehouses, wharves and basins. The Pennsylvania company contemplates similar improvements near by. Mr. Vredenburgh was informed that the board would notify him when Mr. Cragin's proposition was to be taken up for consideration. It is understood that the New Jersey Central Railroad Company also will have something to say about the matter.

Nearly Run Over.

The little daughter of Howard Cooper, blacksmith, of Sycamore street, had a narrow escape from being run over last Monday at the corner of Fourth street and Park avenue. She started to cross the street as several teams were passing and became frightened. She backed against the wheel to the carriage of I. N. VanSickel, of Madison avenue, and was thrown down. Her only injury was a bruise on the arm. Mr. VanSickel took the child into a neighboring drug store. She recovered shortly and went home.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS DECISIVELY DEFEATED

Plainfield Boys Lost to Hasbrouck Institute by Score of 29 to 10.

ON MARTINE'S COMMON.

ALLS A. A. WON EASILY FROM NORTH PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

Alls Boys Opened Season With Game on Washington Avenue Grounds —Neither High School Team Played up to the Standard.

The baseball teams of the High Schools of both city and borough met with defeat on local diamonds Saturday afternoon. On Martine common, the Hasbrouck Institute, of Jersey City, had no trouble in defeating the Plainfield High School by a score of 29 to 10. On the Washington avenue grounds, the Alls Athletic Association, of this city, opened the season by burying the North Plainfield High School with a score of 19 to 2

The game that attracted the largest crowd was on Martine common, between the city High School boys and the Hasbrouck team. A fact that made this game of special interest was that Claude Edwards, pitcher last year for the High School, now captains the Jersey City school nine. It was not expected that the Plainfield boys would win but they were expected to put up a better showing than at previous games.

Despite the fact that twenty-two errors were recorded against the home team, there was some improvements in their work. Very few of the errors happened to be serious but consisted largely of fumbled grounders and poor throws to first. Squires pitched a fair game but the opponents were batters and hit him safely fourteen times, three of which were good for two bases and three more for three. He was much steadier than at his first game. Herman caught well at times but was too anxious which proved expensive.

All but two of Plainfield's runs were scored in the first five innings. Some sad errors by the visiting team's infield and four timely hits netted eight runs. Stowell pitched the first five innings for the visitors. While he was never batted freely, his pitching was decidedly wild and he and Edwards, who had been sent in as a pinch hitter and the old pitcher went up against his old team. He was never hit safely. A base on balls and a wild throw home by Edwards gave Plainfield its two other runs in the eighth. The visitors made eleven errors.

The local team did good work on the bases. A terrible blunder was made in the fifth when, for lack of proper coaching, Schomp was allowed to run VanAuken off at third Bishop, the Hasbrouck catcher, had the ball and promptly lost his head. He threw the ball to second for no particular reason allowing both VanAuken and Schomp to score. The Mason brothers did the best work in base running. The visitors ran bases fairly well but not so speedily.

The teams batted as follows:

ALLS A. A.		HASBROUCK INSTITUTE.
Dumont	pitcher	DeCamp, Stephen
Squires	catcher	Conger
Herman	first base	Horwood
Phillips	second base	DeCamp, Reuben
Thompson	third base	Mason, Jr.
Cornelius	shortstop	Armstrong

SCORE BY INNINGS:

Alls	3	3	2	1	0	0	0	0	0—10
N. P. H. S.	0	0	1	1	0	0	0	0	0—2

Five innings were enough to effectually settle the fate of the North Plainfield High School team. It was the first game of the season for their opponents of the Alls Athletic Association but the latter played good ball and won easily.

The regular pitcher for the borough school boys, Orite, was unable to play on account of a sore arm. Surphen took his place for four innings and then DeCamp was substituted in an unsuccessful effort to stop the triumphal career of the Alls boys. Fifteen hits were made by the Alls team.

A hot pace of the Alls aggregation tended to demoralized the high school team. They made more errors than usual and failed to do anything at bat Blatz and McLoughlin, two of their surest batters, were absent. They only scored twice, once when Thompson threw the ball into the brook instead of the first base and the other time on a combination of small errors by the Alls field.

Dumont pitched a strong game for Alls, striking out seven. Only two hits were made off his delivery. He had good support from the infield. The prettiest play of the game was when Woolston picked up a hot liner, threw to Phillips at second who fielded it to Smith at first, making a double play.

The teams lined up as follows:

ALLS A. A.		N. P. H. S.
Dumont	pitcher	DeCamp, Stephen
Squires	catcher	Conger
Herman	first base	Horwood
Phillips	second base	DeCamp, Reuben
Thompson	third base	Mason, Jr.
Cornelius	shortstop	Armstrong
H. Smith	right field	Mosher

ROUTINE BUSINESS IN COMMON COUNCIL.

A Large Amount of Small Matters Came Before the Solons Monday Night.

ACCEPTING NEW STREET.

THOROUGH INSPECTION OF MILK DAIRIES ASKED FOR.

Corporation Counsel Marsh Reported That the Martin Act Was Working Finely—Office to Sprinkle the Streets.

Outside of the question of granting a wholesale license to John Mortimer, there was a large amount of routine business transacted by the Common Council Monday night.

The Eastern Bottling Association and F. W. Coleman petitioned the Council for wholesale liquor licenses, the latter for Hotel Netherwood. An invitation was received to attend the unveiling of the soldiers and sailors' monument at Easton, Pa., which takes place next Thursday. Residents of West Sixth street, near Monroe avenue, petitioned for a fire-alarm box in that vicinity. The property owners on West Fifth street, between Monroe and Grant avenues, petitioned the Council to macadamize that street and they agreed to pay their share for the work.

Communications were received from Mrs. G. H. Babcock and Wm. M. Stillman, in which they dedicated the private roadway between Front street and Green brook, which is an extension of Madison avenue, to the city. At the same time they asked the city to accept the same as a public street.

In connection with this, Mr. Tolles introduced an ordinance accepting the street, after it is macadamized and put in proper condition. He also offered a resolution which provides that the Board of Freeholders of Union and Somerset counties be petitioned to erect a suitable bridge over Greenbrook to connect the two streets when opened.

Residents of Prescott place asked that one or two electric lights be placed on their street. Mrs. Mary Stillman, of this city, through her counsel, Nelson & Wm. N. Runyon, asked that the 1899 taxes on her property be equitably adjusted in accordance with the tax for other years.

A. B Beers, of Watchung avenue, in a communication cited the recent scarlet fever epedemic and the dangers arising from the use of milk. He asked that the Board of Health compel proper inspection of dairies and cattle, and that milkmen be required to take out a license. The matter was referred to the license committee, they to confer with the Board of Health and Corporation Counsel.

The Town Improvement Association asked for the usual appropriation of $100 for use in the City Park, and it was granted. The Loyal Temperance Legion, in a communication, requested the Council to appropriate $200 toward the public drinking fountain, as they agreed, when the Legion raised a similar amount. It was stated that the Legion had raised the necessary $200.

Mr. van Herwerden moved that when the fountain is erected the sum of $200 be paid to the Legion.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. asked for the usual $100 appropriation toward observing Decoration Day, and the same was granted.

Mayor Bockfellow appointed R. Townley a call man in the fire department in place of W. B. Henderson, resigned.

F. A. Pope agreed to sprinkle the streets of the city from June to October for $475 per month, and during succeeding years for a proportionate amount per month.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported that thirty-six sewer permits were granted during April, making a total of 305 since January 1st.

Overseer of Poor Hansen reported fifteen applicants for aid during April, of which five were granted. There was one death and there are now twenty-seven beneficiaries.

Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of twenty-four building permits.

Corporation Counsel Marsh presented his report in which he stated that in the case of the city against Carbone, the latter had paid his fine and the case should be discontinued. He also reported that the Martin Act is working admirably and suggested that in the future all sales of property for taxes be transacted under the thirteenth and other sections of the Martin Act. Regarding the case of Mrs. Sara Milliken against the city, on account of alleged damages from the sewer leaks, he reported that an opinion is expected in June from the Supreme Court.

Mr. van Herwerden offered resolutions transferring $1,000 from the general to the fire fund, and that Collector James A. Martin be appointed delinquent tax collector.

Mr. Tolles reported that the Board of Freeholders had informed him that they would erect a bridge over Cedar brook on Johnston avenue. There was a dispute over this matter, as the Board was of the opinion that the city had no jurisdiction over this street and could not therefore do work on it as it was a county road. Mr. Tolles also reported on the petition to macadamize West Second street between Central avenue and Liberty street, and stated that when the property-owners and the Jersey Central Railroad Company shall have paid into the city treasury the sum of $400 the city will macadamize the street.

Mr. Buckie offered a resolution providing for an appropriation of $300 with which to purchase summer uniforms for the police and to purchase a bicycle for Patrolman Mathis.

Mr. Mellick reported favorably on the petition for an electric light at the corner of Sixth street and Central avenue, and the same was granted. Mr. Lee offered an ordinance regulating the City Industrial Home and providing that the inmates shall do as much work as possible about the home and thus save extra expense. Mr. van Herwerden moved that the Telephone Company be given instructions to move the city 'phone from the former Chief of Police's office to the City Clerk's office.

When Council adjourned it was to meet next Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

DEATH OF JOHN S. KING.

OLDEST INSURANCE AGENT LIVING IN PLAINFIELD.

Connected With Prudential Company for Twenty-Five Years—Always Lived Here.

After an illness of a few days, resulting from a paralytic stroke, John S. King, died at his home on West Second street last Tuesday. He has been very low and his death was expected since Monday.

He had never regained his full strength since a previous stroke two years ago and the second one proved fatal.

Mr. King was born in the vicinity of Plainfield, near what is now called Pumptown, in 1828, and was therefore 72 years old. When a young man he took up the trade of builder which he followed in Plainfield, Newark and Dunellen. A large number of houses now standing in Plainfield were erected and sold by him.

He was always identified with the Methodist church both in this city and Dunellen, being choir leader in the latter place for fourteen years.

In 1875 he entered the service of the Prudential Insurance Company and remained with them until his death. In recognition of his long service, the company presented him with a diamond medallion at the completion of his twenty-first year. Only one other man in the company has secured this gift.

He was married twice, his first wife being Miss Ellen V. Angleman, of Plainfield and the second, Mrs. Hattie Gibson, also of this city, who survives him. Besides his wife he leaves one brother, Henry King, of New York; one sister, Mrs. Morris, of Dunellen; and six children, George King, of Newark; Robert King, of Asbury Park; Mrs. Clark and Mrs Cannon, Newark, and Mrs. J. C. Pope and Mrs. A. D. Pope, of Plainfield. The funeral services will be held from the house Thursday at 3 p. m.

PLEAD FOR MORE TIME.

NOT READY TO BUILD THE SPRINGFIELD TROLLEY NOW.

The Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company Asks Another Year to Complete Line.

Colonel Edwin C. Hine, representing the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company, appeared before the Springfield Township Committee Saturday night and asked for an extension of one year on the company's franchise to construct a trolley line through the township. The franchise calls for the road to be in operation between Springfield and Westfield by July 1st next.

The extension was asked for because of the failure of the company to secure a franchise through Mountainside, midway between Springfield and Westfield. A new route between Westfield and Springfield had been mapped out, leaving out Mountainside, but the plan proved impractical. Mr. Colonel Hine said that if the time was extended a year there would be a line constructed to Springfield either on the county road or through fields. Although the company asked for a year's extension, he said, six months would be all it needed. The main division of the road from Plainfield to Elizabeth has just been completed and a span from Boynton Beach to Westfield will be finished in four weeks. Should the franchise through Mountainside be secured soon the line will be pushed through this summer. If not, it would be necessary to wait until next season.

Richard Trivett objected to the extension of time unless the company would give a bond to complete the road. Benjamin Baker objected to the extension unless the company would widen the road. He also asserted that as yet the trolley people had not obtained the consent of the Union County Board of Freeholders to build on the county road. Colonel Hine admitted this, but said that consent was never asked for from the county until the franchises were secured from the different municipalities on the route. He said that from his observations, however, the Freeholders would grant the privilege. No action was taken on the application.

Off to the Wooded Hills.

Several weeks since the Philadelphia Sunday Times presented its readers with a magnificent lithograph in twelve colors by Le Roy. The demand for the issue exceeded the supply by many thousand copies. The Times has secured another painting—a companion piece to the first—by the same artist, entitled "A Bicoming Chematis," which is now being lithographed in twelve colors, and which will be given away free with the great outing number of The Times, Sunday, May 13th.

Not Able to Act Regularly.

Owing to the fact that Ward Stephens will not be able to secure his entire release from his professional duties at Paterson at present, he will not be able to fill the position of organist at the Crescent Avenue church steadily for a few weeks. He played last Sunday morning, but in the evening he secured a substitute.

TROLLEY COMPANY IGNORES BOROUGH.

No Attention Paid to Requests to Sprinkle Tracks Before May 15th.

LETTER NOT ANSWERED.

SOMERSET STREET WIDENING TO BE PUSHED NOW.

Mayor Instructs Borough Council to Take Aggressive Action—Sidewalk Ordinance Passed—Other Routine Affairs.

There were two important matters that enraged the attention of the Mayor and Borough Council at the regular May meeting held Friday. One was the question of street sprinkling on Somerset street by the trolley company and the other referred to the widening of Somerset street. The first matter was introduced by Councilman Rogers, who asked what had been done in the matter. Mayor Smalley reported that as yet no agreement had been made with the trolley company to sprinkle before they are compelled to do so, which is May 15th. He said that it was an outrage the way the company's cars stir up the dust and thereby cause a nuisance, unless the borough, at its own expense, water the street. He had been informed by Superintendent Adelmann that a sprinkling car was to be put on the road and he thought this would remedy all trouble.

In response to this Mr. Doud stated that in conversation with Col. Hine, of the trolley company, he was informed that the company had made arrangements with persons to water the road with wagons, as the sprinkling car could not be secured inside of two months.

Counsel Reed informed the Council that there is no way by which the company can be compelled to do any more than that which their contract calls for, unless they ask for some additional privileges.

Mr. Clark said that he had, as instructed, written a letter to Superintendent Adelmann about the sprinkling of Somerset street, and never received a reply. Some time later he met the superintendent and asked him if he had received his letter. He replied, with a smile, that he had, and that some time in May the company would commence sprinkling. That was all the satisfaction he received. This state of affairs had a tendency to rile the members of the Council and it is likely that some stringent measures will soon be taken to bring the trolley company to their senses.

The question of widening Somerset street was introduced by the Mayor, who said that this summer would be the last that the shade trees would continue to shade the street, that before snow flies again the street will be widened. He said that it was found impossible to widen the street by the common consent of all the interested property-owners, therefore the work would have to be done by petition and commissioners would have to be appointed. His Honor instructed Counsel Reed to take such steps as are necessary to inaugurate the work.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Clark that the street committees from the Plainfield Common Council and the Borough Council hold a conference to ascertain whether the city body will agree to widen the street from Front street to the bridge, so that the street when widened will be uniformed. This meeting will be arranged by the Mayors of the borough and city and will be held at an early date. The regular routine business was then taken up.

The report of Collector Brown, including that of Clerk Rowley, is as follows: Taxes and interest, $1,015.43; special school, $262.34; Board of Health, $8.67; Watchung avenue assessment, $637.20; rent from property sold, $10; liquor licenses, $1,781.35; clerk, fines, $28; licenses, $52.50; bills payable by note, $3,000; balance, April 1st, $1,621.58; disbursements, $4,210.68; cash, May 1st, $4,201.02; borough fund, $1,992.68; Watchung avenue fund, $1,208.34.

A. E. Faber protested in writing against the adoption of the sidewalk ordinance, so far as it affects Greenbrook road. The usual communication was received from Winfield Scott Post, No. 72, G. A. R., asking that the Council appropriate $25 to be used for the proper observance of Decoration Day. The request was granted.

Borough Counsel Reed stated that the State Board of Taxation dismissed the appeal made to them by Charles Rock for an exemption of certain taxes, and the borough would therefore not be compelled to make any reduction or exemption in Mr. Rock's taxes.

Chairman Clark, of the street committee, reported that during April there was expended on the streets for labor $48.80; street sprinkling, $57.37. There were 335 tons of stone used, and the total expenditure for the month was $404.77.

Mr. Valliant offered a resolution that inasmuch as the German Reformed church has dedicated their property for the opening of Door street, the borough curb and flag the walk on the church side of the property, for the first time, at no expense to the church.

Another resolution by Mr. Valliant provided for the drawing of warrants to meet a Watchung avenue improvement certificate for $1,000 with interest. This was followed with a resolution by the same member allowing $20 on the property of Nathaniel Taylor in final settlement of the taxes on the same.

A resolution offered by Mr. Valliant provided that $80 be allowed Collector Brown to reimburse him partially for the amount, $171, which he has paid for surety bonds for 1899-1900. The Council was unanimous in its opinion that Mr. Brown should receive this amount and it was readily granted.

Chairman Lee, of the fire, water and lamps committee, reported thirteen arrests during April, of which number nine were drunks; three were for fighting and one for begging. This was followed with a resolution by Mr. Lee, providing for an expenditure of $75 for summer uniforms and hats for four regular marshals.

A petition was received asking that Watchung avenue between Grandview avenue and its intersection with Codrington avenue be macadamized. It was signed by the following persons who agreed to subscribe the sums opposite their names toward the work: A. I. and N. B. Smalley, $15; L. M. Codington, $5; Frank Mobus, $5; Augustus Mobus, $5; D. T. Keasey, $10; G. H. Rugg, $10; J. W. Mundy, $5. These amounts together with the amount, $10, subscribed by the Borough Board of Education, makes a total of $70.

In connection with the above Mr. Clark offered a resolution that when the sum of $100 be subscribed for this work and paid to Clerk Rowley, the borough will macadamize the street as petitioned for. Mr. Clark offered another resolution granting the petitions for crosswalks at the corner of Somerset street and Linden avenue, and on Brook avenue at its intersection with Franklin avenues.

In accordance with a petition presented at a previous meeting by property owners on Myrtle avenue, between Grand and West End avenues, asking that that avenue be accepted and properly lighted, Mr. Clark offered a resolution granting the petition. This will make it necessary to locate two electric lights on Myrtle avenue.

The much-talked-of new sidewalk ordinance was read for the last time and was unanimously adopted. Council then adjourned to May 18th, which was done for the benefit of the street laborers so that they can receive their money.

LIFE IN JAPAN.

Mrs. Harman Peeke, Missionary, Gave Interesting Sketch of Her Experiences in Southern Japan.

An interesting word picture of the life of a missionary in southern Japan occupied most of the meeting of the Young Ladies' Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church, held in the lecture room Friday evening. Mrs. Harman Peeke, now on a furlough from the mission field, was the speaker.

The meeting was presided over by Miss Lillian A. Force, president of the band, and was well attended. After the reports of the various officers and committees, Miss Mary Griffin read some items concerning the famine in India and the band decided to make a small contribution to aid the relief fund.

Mrs. Peeke was then introduced and gave a pleasing talk. She took her hearers on a trip over to the mission station in southern Japan, describing the life to be seen en route and how the trip would have to be taken. She sketched briefly something of the work in Japan.

While the seaports and northern Japan had been greatly influenced by foreign civilization, the south of that country had changed but little. She told of the idol worship and how the men had largely forsook their heathen gods but had taken nothing in their place. With the young man, she said, was the best field for work.

LAND FORMALLY ACCEPTED.

Property Say Door Street From Craig Place to Green Brook Formally Dedicated to the Borough.

That portion of land between Craig place and the brook which is to be an extension of Door street, was formally accepted last Friday at the meeting of the Borough Council. Those who owned this land dedicated it for that purpose. Those who signed the map were W. M. Stillman, W. N. Brokaw, and Rev. George Hauser, as president, and August Wolff, as secretary, of the consistory of the German Reformed church. Two maps were signed, one of which will be filed in the borough and the other at Somerville.

Prospectus of the Siegel-Cooper Co.

CO-OPERATIVE STORES, NEW YORK AND CHICAGO.

Profit-Sharing with our Patrons. Co-operation with our Employees.

THE great success attained since 1887 by Siegel, Cooper & Co., has induced and given warrant to the enterprising owners to further ingratiate themselves into public favor by consolidating their two mammoth establishments into a co-operative enterprise on a profit-sharing basis. They recognize the tendency of the present age to be in the direction of co-operation of employers with employees, as well as in profit-sharing with patrons. To accomplish this desired condition, a new Company, the Siegel-Cooper Co. (Co-operative Stores, New York and Chicago) has been incorporated under the laws of the State of New Jersey with a capital stock of $24,000,000.00, of which $14,250,000.00 is divided into 285,000 shares 6 per cent. cumulative Preferred Stock of $50.00 par value, and $9,750,000.00 into 195,000 shares Common Stock of $50.00 par value.

The charter of the Company provides that, after full dividends of 6 per cent. per annum have been paid on the Preferred Stock, and full dividends of 3 per cent. per annum have been paid on the Common Stock, all additional dividends shall be apportioned and paid on the basis of ⅓ in amount on the Preferred Stock and ⅔ in amount on the Common Stock.

To carry out the plan of Co-operation

with its employees, $2,000,000.00 of the Common Stock has been placed in trust, the annual dividends of which will be distributed among such employees as have been or may hereafter be with the New York or Chicago establishment for a period of three years during their satisfactory continuance in the service of the new Company; such dividends will also be continued and paid to employees for life who, after ten years of service with the new Company, become incapacitated for further employment, thereby practically providing a pension fund for faithful employees in their old age.

To carry out the plan Profit-Sharing

it is proposed by the present owners, who are the owners of all the stock of the new Company, to offer to the public through the undersigned, 200,000 shares (fully paid and non-assessable) of the 6 per cent. cumulative Preferred Stock at par, upon which the full 6 per cent. dividend must always be paid before the Common Stock receives any dividend whatever, the Preferred Stock also having a prior right to all the assets of the Company.

In order to give double assurance to the general public, whom it is desired to interest as Stockholders (instead of Speculators) and who may not be fully conversant with such investments, the money required to pay dividends on said 200,000 shares has been set aside and will remain on deposit with the Central Trust Company of New York, and the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, respectively, to secure the dividends of 6 per cent. per annum, payable 3 per cent. semi-annually, for a period of five years, i. e., until July 1st, 1905, on all such Preferred Stock as may be allotted in their respective territories, and each Certificate of Stock so allotted will have an endorsement by said Trust Companies, respectively, to that effect. We thereby offer, we believe, not only an absolutely safe 6 per cent. investment, but one which will without question yield considerably more.

Under no circumstances will any of the Preferred Stock not so allotted, nor any of the Common Stock, be sold, the present owners having no desire to sell out, but intending to remain with the business; they will therefore not part with any more stock than they believe necessary to fully carry out their plans for co-operation and profit-sharing, as previously stated.

The owners confidently believe that, by inaugurating the liberal policy above outlined towards their employees, they will in return be rewarded by more faithful service, and courteous attention to patrons, the result of which must be beneficial to the new Company as well as augment the continued good will of the public.

that with many thousands of new stockholders exerting their personal influence toward the success and welfare of the business, larger patronage and correspondingly greater earnings for the new Company will be assured. It is from the increased benefits and material advantages which these changed conditions are expected to bring about, that the present owners feel confident of better pro rata remuneration on the stock which they retain, and in a measure justifies them in parting with any portion of their interests in an established and exceptionally profitable business.

The SIEGEL-COOPER CO. Co-operative Stores will take possession Monday, July 3d, 1900, of the two great department stores of Siegel-Cooper Co., New York, and Siegel, Cooper & Co., Chicago, in their entirety, covering a floor space of over thirty acres, with their millions of dollars' worth of Merchandise, Store Fixtures, Delivery Plants (consisting of many hundreds of Horses, Wagons, etc.), Machinery, extensive Stable Properties, and all the appurtenances required for the complete operation of the two stores, and also its Palatial Fireproof Store Building and Real Estate in New York City, which alone represents an asset of many millions of dollars, free of all encumbrances or indebtedness whatsoever, so that the Siegel-Cooper Co. (Co-operative Stores, New York and Chicago) will start its career without owing a single dollar.

For the good and sufficient reason of not wishing to divulge the details of our business to our competitors, we present no balance sheet for publication. We do not however, desire to ask our patrons or the public to rely exclusively on our representations, and, therefore, the money required has been set aside and will remain on deposit with the above-named Trust Companies to absolutely secure the dividends on all the Preferred Stock to be allotted as stated. Moreover, we allude with pride to the fact that the Chicago establishment has since its inception paid millions of dollars in dividends to its stockholders, and that the New York establishment, while only in its fourth year, is not only doing a larger business than the Chicago store, but is also on a most profitable dividend-paying basis. We can also say for the benefit of subscribers, that the net earnings of our two establishments for the past year were largely in excess of the amount required to pay the dividends on all the Preferred Stock of the new Company.

There will be no change in management,

and the same men who thirteen years ago started the original Siegel, Cooper & Co. store in Chicago (and later its sister-store in New York) and who have achieved a success almost without parallel in modern retailing, have pledged themselves to continue in the management of the business of the new Company the same as in the past, and they will deposit with the Central Trust Company of New York, all of their stock holdings for a term of years to secure such pledge.

Subscriptions for the 200,000 shares of the Preferred Stock

will be received in person, or by mail, on blank forms provided for that purpose, by the Central Trust Company, 54 Wall Street, New York, and Siegel-Cooper Co., New York and Chicago, beginning at 10 a. m. Monday, May 7th, 1900, and will continue for a period of One Week; the right, however, is reserved to close subscriptions upon one day's notice in the New York and Chicago daily papers. The above Trust Company, for the convenience of our patrons and the public, will receive subscriptions at the Siegel-Cooper Co. store in New York, or at its own office, 54 Wall Street. All subscriptions must be accompanied by money, check, money order or draft, payable to the Central Trust Company of New York, to the amount of 20 per cent. of such subscription (equal to $10.00 per share), for which proper receipts will be given by said Trust Company. Notice will be given as soon as practicable of the number of shares allotted to each subscriber, and the balance due must be paid to said Trust Company on or before July 5th, 1900, upon the delivery by said Trust Company of the stock allotted.

In order to subscribe for shares cut out and use this Blank.

TEN PROPERTIES SOLD UNDER MARTIN ACT

Collector Martin Disposed of More Property to Cover Unpaid Taxes Due the City.

BIDDING WAS VERY LIVELY

GROUP OF LOTS ON RAYMOND AVENUE SOLD THE BEST.

The Usual Crowd Gathered in Collector's Office for the Sale Friday Afternoon—Several Lawyers Bought for Their Clients—No High Prices.

Under the provisions of the Martin Act the city of Plainfield disposed of a little more property of its citizens Friday afternoon to satisfy the claims of the Tax Collector. The city was not, this time, compelled to go into the real estate business on its own account, for there were enough buyers to take everything offered.

It will be remembered that the first sale of delinquent lands for unpaid taxes, as provided for by the Martin Act, was held early in April, when 39 properties were sold. There were 240 properties against which the city had a claim, but the others were either settled or adjourned. Ten of those adjourned at that day came up at Friday's sale.

About the same crowd that assembled for the first sale was present in the Tax Collector's office yesterday afternoon when Collector Martin opened the sale at 2:15 o'clock. The conditions of sale were read. They were the same as before, 2½ per cent. in cash when the amount was over $20 and the remainder to be paid May 11th, when the certificate of sale will be delivered.

The first group of properties to be sold were on Raymond avenue in the First ward. The city's lien against it amounted to $20 58. After the first had been sold to Walter L. Hetfield for $59 Collector Martin skipped over by request to four properties on Dunellen avenue, belonging to Mrs. Maria Swain, which were sold to W. A. Coddington for $71 16, the city's claim.

Then the Raymond avenue properties were considered again and the bidding grew decidedly lively. The second of the lot went to Mrs. Mary Lappin, of this city, for $70. John F. MacIntyre represented her. John K. VanNest bid in the next for Joel Coddington for $70. The last two went to Mrs. Lappin for $100 each. The former owners of these lots are unknown.

Miss Annie Collins was the purchaser for the property of Peter Collins on West Fourth street in the Third ward, which was sold for $116. The city's lien amounted to $98 97. J. B. Coward was the only bidder for the property of Ferdinand Fish, on Sherman avenue. The price was $277 58, the city's claim. W. L. Coddington bought in the Winfield S. Chase property on West Front street for $127 39; the Frey property on Plainfield avenue for $56; and part of the Phoebe Allen estate on Plainfield avenue for $116. The purchases were in the interests of his clients. The sale was then adjourned to June 1st.

HOME FOR THE SISTERS.

Old Catholic Clubhouse Will Not Be Used for an Orphanage for the Present.

When the Catholic Club decide to disband and give their clubhouse to the church some time ago, it was the general opinion that it would be remodeled for an orphanage. This is not the case at present, however, as it will be used as a home for the Sisters of the church, and is located on West Sixth street, near Plainfield avenue.

This will give them a home with accommodations, especially destined, for their use, and will also bring them nearer their work, both for church and school. It is the intention of the Sisters to have the building for an orphanage at some future time, but at present the plans are indefinite.

PIANO RECITAL.

E. Arthur Janke Gave a Fine Programme Thursday Night.

JED BASSETT'S CHOIR.

ITS QUAINT WAYS AND APPEARANCE WAS ENTERTAINING.

Seen in the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church Thursday—Those Who Took Part.

Although the rain beat down in sheets, dampening everything but the spirits of those who were to take part, a fair-sized audience was on hand Thursday at the Monroe Ave. church to witness "Ye Village Choir" go through their rehearsal under the direction of Jedediah Bassett. That the audience was well pleased with the different numbers was apparent from the peals of laughter and loud applause.

"Ye Village Choir" is a unique affair, which serves as a background for fun and music. It is a portrayal of the old time rustic choir, with its young ladies in old fashioned gowns high back combs and beauty patches; and boys in a yallow tail coats, knee breeches and lack o diars.

Mr. Bassett's impersonation of the country Postmaster, with its quaint humor, Yankee twang and the fine voice changing from pathos to humor, is enough to make one forget that they are living on the edge of the twentieth century. His impersonation of a silent prima donna and the reciting of the grapevine swing were applauded again and again.

The following members of the choir sang amusing solos under the direction of Mr. Bassett: Miss Edna Phillips, "Twinkle Twinkle Little Star;" Miss May Pound, "Ben Bolt;" Miss Addie Allen Forster, "The Miller's Song," and Sidney Gilbert, "The Tinsmaker Man."

The following are those who composed the choir:

Mr and Mrs. Smith, Miss Foster, Etta Randolph, Lulu Randolph, Sadie Brouwer, Carrie Brouwer, May Brouwer, Edna Phillips, Marjorie Phillips, Jessie Burt, Ada Hasselton, Beulah Kiyne, May Waldmer, Miss Pound, Miss May Pound, Miss Ada Wenzel, Miss Bertha Wenzel, Miss Annie Wenzel, Miss Dorlinger, Miss Gussie Kenyon, Mrs Walter Manning, Miss Minnie Gutzman, Miss Ollie Kiyns, Miss Daisy Bronard, Miss Avis Aldrich, Miss Maggie Williams, Miss Adams; Stephen Aldrich, Robert Leland, Charlie Leland, George Leland, George Whitesey, Sydney Gilbert and Eddie Ashworth.

Miss Lottie Aldrich presided at the piano.

This evening the choir will again rehearse for the benefit of those who were not fortunate enough to be present last night.

CYCLING DERBY TO BE HELD.

Irvington-Millburn Road Race Will Be Conducted Over Old Course.

Over the historic course at the foothills of the Oranges the Irvington-Milburn twenty-five-mile road race will be conducted this year, as in the past. There had been talk of the abandonment of the "Cycling Derby," as the race has come to be known, and of its removal to a new course.

Though neither the Associated Cycling Clubs of New York, or the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey will be identified with the contest this year, it will be held under the same management as last year, and the date, as usual, will be Memorial Day.

Judging from inquiries made by whelmen all over the country, it is believed the race will be as large, if not larger, in point of entries than ever before. The first actual entry was made by J. P. Jacobson, of Mayflower Cone., Natural amateur champion of fifty miles. Jacobson will make an effort to beat the course record.

POPULAR AND WISE.

Congressman Hitt as a Statesman and Friend of Statesmen.

Began Life as a Chicago Newspaper Reporter—How He Came to Congress—Authority on All Diplomatic Matters.

If Representative Robert Roberts Hitt, of Illinois, were to compile his reminiscences, the result would be a volume of extraordinary interest. Not only has he figured prominently in national and international affairs for nearly a generation, but he has enjoyed personal relations of a peculiarly close character with more men of eminence perhaps than any other man of the day.

Away back before the war, says the Washington Star, when a mere boy, he was attached to Abraham Lincoln in a way that gave him enviable facilities for studying the processes of Lincoln's mind. He was a stenographer and a newspaper reporter for the Chicago Tribune, and throughout the memorable debates between Lincoln and Douglas, preceding the latter's election to the United States senate, young Hitt followed Lincoln, taking down in shorthand every word of which the congressman still boasts among his literary treasures. Lincoln called him "Bob," and was fond of the boy.

After the war Mr. Hitt came to Washington as a clerk of a congressional committee and had an opportunity to become acquainted with the great statesmen of the reconstruction era.

His good luck sent him to Paris in 1874, just after the Franco-Prussian war, as secretary of legation and charge d'affaires ad interim. History was being made rapidly in the French capital in those days, and Mr. Hitt spent seven years in Paris, a period which was closely packed with important events. He returned to Washington in 1881 to become assistant secretary of state, and the next year was elected a member of the house of representatives. All through his career in congress he has been conspicuous in the discussion of international questions, and now, as chairman of the house committee on foreign affairs, he is regarded as a diplomatic authority without a peer.

ROBERT ROBERTS HITT.
(Chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs.)

Mr. Hitt has had the good fortune to cement friendship more firmly than almost any other man now in public life. He was Blaine's closest friend in Washington. In the concluding years of Blaine's life Hitt was the man in whom he confided most and was often to be found in the historic mansion on Lafayette square. At the same time that he enjoyed these affectionate relations with the great secretary of state he was the best friend of Speaker Reed, Blaine's bitterest enemy in public life. And the Illinois statesman has proved a delicate tact of the Illinois representative than that he should have continued for years such a relationship with two such men without losing the confidence of either.

In Mr. Hitt's house in K street is a room which is devoted to the memory of Blaine. The walls are covered with pictures of the Maine leader, with autograph letters and all sorts of relics which bring Blaine to life. Elsewhere in the house are Lincoln relics, and stored away somewhere in places where they will be found some time and brought to light are scores and hundreds of confidential letters from men whose names will figure in history.

Mr. Hitt is of medium height, of modest bearing and one of those in public life, not too numerous, who is a gentleman always. His voice is soft and cultivated and he is frank and friendly, although he never forgets the diplomatic proprieties; his conversation is stored with information and anecdote, and yet he has never been known to reveal a thing which was to be kept in confidence. He makes no pretensions to oratory and is not much of a politician.

Where Lafayette Is Buried.

"We visited the convent du Sacre-Coeur, in the Rue de Picpus, where La Fayette is buried," writes "Edith" from Paris to the Ladies' Home Journal. "Here birds of passage, like ourselves, seldom come. At the end of a rose-grown garden is a little cemetery, where bearers of some of the oldest names in France lie buried. Now only descendants of those who died on the guillotine are eligible to a grave there, and in one corner, in the shadow of the great wall, are the graves of La Fayette and his wife. Beyond the first cemetery is a second, where the bodies of 1,300 aristocratic victims of the revolution were buried."

CITIZENS' LEAGUE DECIDED AGAINST.

Walter F. Carroll Succeeded in Getting His License Saturday

LEE'S WAS ALSO GRANTED.

EMERY MUST WAIT TILL INDICTMENT IS SETTLED.

Lyons Walpole Withdrew His Application When an Illegal Liquor Was Discovered—Other Court Was on Hand.

The hotel keepers in Fanwood and Scotch Plains and the Citizens' League, headed by the aggressive and irrepressible Rev. Gideon M. Shoot, clashed in the County Court Saturday morning. Although the Citizens' League are not entirely routed, the decisions in the application before Judge Vail were a substantial victory for the hotel men.

There was a large attendance of interested people from Fanwood and Scotch Plains and the Citizens' League, headed by the aggressive and irrepressible Rev. Gideon M. Shoot, clashed in the County Court Saturday morning. Although the Citizens' League are not entirely routed, the decisions in the application before Judge Vail were a substantial victory for the hotel men.

There was a large attendance of interested people from Fanwood and Scotch Plains and the Citizens' League, headed by the aggressive and irrepressible Rev. Gideon M. Shoot, being the most conspicuous of the reform force. He sat at one of the tables inside the railing besides Irving L. Brady and William D. Murray, the lawyers engaged to look after the interests of the Citizens' League.

The first application taken up was that of Walter F. Carroll, who petitioned for the right to sell liquor in the roadhouse known as "The Maples," formerly conducted by Geo. Thatcher. When application was made last January for a license it was withdrawn, owing to a technical defect.

Lawyer Murray made the point that inasmuch as the application was practically a new one, the burden of proof to show that it was required in the community rested with the applicant. Judge Vail so decided. Mr. Carroll was called himself and explained the situation of the house and the things that convinced him that his application should be granted for the accommodation of the public. Several signers of the application were also called and testified to what they considered was the need of the license being granted.

They were John Brick, Collector William Sheelein, Assessor W. B. Stanbery, Edward Brick and Township Clerk E. L. Hand. After their testimony Mr. Murray said that the remonstrants would permit the case to rest there. Judge Vail decided that from the evidence offered that there was a necessity for the license, and he granted it.

The next case taken up was that of William H. Lee. Mr. Murray immediately made the contention that the applicant was not a fit person to conduct a licensed place. He referred to the fact that he had once been arrested for selling liquor in Plainfield, but as this occurred five or six years ago it was so remote that Judge Vail did not take it into consideration. Another instance that the Citizens' League's lawyer referred to was the arrest and conviction of Lee for assault and battery on a Central Railroad conductor. These were the only objections that Mr. Murray offered against the granting of the license, but they were not sufficient and the license was granted.

When the application of William H. Emery was taken up, it was expected that there would be a lively time Mr. Murray immediately made the point that Mr. Emery was under indictment for illegal liquor selling, and therefore should not be granted a license. The Judge also took this view, and decided to hold the application till the charge against the applicant had been decided in court.

Robert M. Clark appeared in behalf of Lyons Walpole, and admitted that he had been convicted of illegal selling of liquor, but said that since that time he had conducted a reputable and clean place and urged that the charge should not weigh against him in deciding the application. When the application was investigated it was found that one of the signers resided in Somerset county, and therefore that invalidated the application. It was withdrawn.

Borough Sweet Sprinkling Is a Success.

After a fair trial in street sprinkling by the borough it can be stated that the work is in every way satisfactory, and that the residents are more than pleased with the results. No complaints have been received of overwet streets. The work has and is being done in a systematic and scientific manner under the direction of Superintendent of Highways, Mr Dowd, who personally looks after it and sees that it is properly done.

GOING TO COLORADO.

For the Sole Purpose of Living in a Political Atmosphere.

At the Age of 71 Mrs. Catherine V. Waite, of Chicago, Has Formed a Law Partnership with Her Husband at Denver.

At the age of 71 Mrs. Catherine V. Waite is about to form a law partnership in Denver, Col., with her husband, former Judge Charles B. Waite. The firm will be C. B. & C. V. Waite, and friends will be disappointed if the aged couple do not make some of the leading waiters firms do their best to maintain prestige. Mrs. Waite, who is now in Detroit, has lived in Chicago at various times since 1855, and her home is at present with her daughter, Dr. Lucy Waite, 98 Loomis street, in that city. She has been a lifelong friend of Susan B. Anthony, and is one of the most remarkable women of the west.

Having lived in many states of the union, Mrs. Waite is going to Colorado because she believes it has the only atmosphere congenial to women of business ability and who desire a voice in the administration of public affairs. The versatility of this energetic woman is shown in the fact that she has been a farmer, a teacher, a lecturer, an author, a merchant, a builder, a real estate dealer, a lawyer, a contractor and a manager of large moneyed interests, and has attained eminent success in each of these callings. While attending to her law practice she carries large business affairs Mrs. Waite expects to find time to complete the gathering of data for the publication of a scientific work which is to be published in Berlin. In it she will attempt to demonstrate that a woman can be a successful wife, mother and business woman at the same time.

Mrs. Waite was born in Canada and educated in Galesburg, Ill., and at Oberlin college. In the early 60's she arrived in Utah and fought Brigham Young with relentless vigor, publishing a book entitled "Brigham Young and His Harem." President Lincoln appointed her husband United States Justice for Idaho. When they came to Chicago from Rock Island the Waites invested largely in Hyde Park property, and by careful management Mrs. Waite converted it into a small fortune. While her husband was practicing in Europe, from 1885 to 1887, Mrs. Waite took the course in the Union college of law and was admitted to the bar. For several years she edited the Law Times. After Judge Waite retired from the law firm of Cornell, Waite & Jamieson she became the active manager of their affairs. Realizing the possibilities of the world's fair, Mrs. Waite built the Waite block, which is now property. A few years ago she was considered quite wealthy, but she and her husband have for several years past been paying off a large indebtedness contracted in building for the world's fair. While her husband was yet completed, and which has very much depleted their estate.

Just now, says the Chicago Times-Herald, Mrs. Waite is enthusiastically interested in developing her mining possessions. She has built seven houses upon the property and is planning several more, attending to all the details herself. It is a novel sight to see this woman, who bears her seventy-one years lightly, directing workmen and contractors, giving orders and arranging details of building with the energy and enthusiasm which has characterized her long and remarkable career. Mrs. Waite's various interests will necessitate her to travel extensively, and there is but a detail of the business from Windsor to Colorado and Chicago with which she is not perfectly conversant. While Mrs. Waite has never been a politician, congress, she declares that she must spend the remainder of her life in a political atmosphere made for women as well as men. Such an atmosphere she finds alone in Colorado.

Taps to Last Four Years.

Payment of the bicycle tax in France is proved by a small plate affixed to the machine every year, but the government now proposes to issue plates good for four years. The holder must have his name and address engraved at his own expense, but he is supplied with new plates when necessary, on depositing the fragments of the old. Should he cease to own a bicycle he must at once deposit his plate, to have his name stricken off the list of persons liable to the tax.

THEY HELP MISSION WORK.

Twenty-fifth Anniversary of King's Foreign Missionary Circle of Warren Chapel.

The King's Foreign Missionary Circle of Warren chapel celebrated its twelfth anniversary last Thursday in an appropriate manner. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of the chapel, presided and read appropriate Scripture selections, sent from Africa by Miss Rachael G. Maier, who is president of the Circle. After a vocal solo by Charles L. Lewis, Mr. McKelvey gave a brief report of the work done during the past year by the Circle.

There are fourteen active and thirty-one honorary members. The receipts during the year amount to $68.71, and $77 46 of this has been contributed to foreign missions. There is a balance of $8.45 in the treasury. Mr. McKelvey also read two very interesting letters from Miss Maier, who is doing mission work in Africa. The letters gave the members an excellent idea of the work being done by the writer.

An interesting part of the programme was the address given by Miss Todd, whose home is in the west, but who for many years has been doing mission work in what is known as the West China Mission, where there is a population of forty-five million people.

After a piano solo was given by Miss Carrie Dewey, refreshments were served by a committee in charge, and a social time enjoyed. Miss Mary Maier was in charge of the arrangements for this anniversary, and Mrs. Mary Maier was in charge of the refreshments. Miss Mirex was chairman of the committee on refreshments, and Mrs. Thompson was chairman of the flower committee.

Money Presented to the Poet.

Russell Johnson, son of Andrew Johnson, of the borough, who resides in Newark, and is employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as one of their piers in New York, is suffering with a badly crushed foot. The accident occurred a few weeks ago while Mr. Johnson was at work. A heavy case, weighing nearly 600 pounds, slipped and fell on the foot fracturing two bones. This necessitates that he give up his work for the present. The bones are knitting nicely, and the physician does not believe that Mr. Johnson will have any trouble with the foot after the break knits.

FIRST MAY DAY WEDDING

GALLAGHER-STEVENS NUPTIALS WERE HAPPILY CELEBRATED.

Ceremony Performed at the Home of Bride's Parents—Will Reside on Richmond Street.

A large assemblage of relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Stevens, 133 Watching avenue, May 2d, to witness the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ella May Stevens and Thomas P. Gallagher, of Raritan, which took place at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, performed the ceremony.

The parlor, where the marriage took place, was decorated in green and white. The bow window was filled with palms and lilies, while overhead was an arrangement of southern smilax and white satin ribbon, beneath which the bridal party stood. Sophus Lassen, of this city, was at the piano, and as the familiar Lohengrin wedding march was being played the party entered the parlor and formed a semi-circle.

The bride's dress was white corded silk, en train, with real point lace and pearl trimmings. She carried a bouquet of bride roses. She also wore a veil and orange blossoms which were held by a diamond ornament, the gift of the groom. She was attended by Miss Clara A. Delaney, of Columbia Heights, N. J., as maid-of-honor, and Miss Edna A. Palmer and Miss Alice M. Runyon, of Newark, as bridesmaids.

Miss Delaney wore a gown of pearl color silk, trimmed with white lace, and she carried pink roses. Miss Runyon wore a lemon color mousseline de soie, while Miss Palmer wore a dress of light blue silk, trimmed with point de sprit. The bridesmaids also carried bouquets of pink roses with lilies of the valley. The best man was S. Rosecrans Murphy, of New York city.

After the ceremony congratulations were showered on the popular couple. After congratulations the guests adjourned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Moore, on Second street, where the wedding supper was enjoyed. The guests returned to the home of the bride's parents after the supper and enjoyed a social time until nearly 10 o'clock, when Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher left on their wedding trip, which will be spent in the sunny south. While away they will visit Old Point Comfort.

On their return they will take up their residence at 115 Richmond street, which property has recently been purchased by the couple and is completely furnished awaiting their occupancy. Mr. Gallagher holds the responsible position of cashier with one of the largest brokerage firms on Wall street. He and his wife were handsomely remembered by costly gifts. The bride presented her maid-of-honor and bridesmaids with opal pins, while the groom gave his best man an opal and pearl pin.

In addition to the Plainfield people present there were guests from Newark, New York, Brooklyn, Tarrytown, N. Y., Elizabeth, Somerville, Raritan and many other places.

FIVE MONTHS IN JAIL FOR HUGH O'DONNELL

A Wild Time Caused by the Illicit Rum Sold By Him in the West End.

CITY JUDGE WAS SEVERE.

PRISONERS TOLD OF BUYING BEER OF O'DONNELL.

He Has Been Convicted of Illegal Liquor Selling Several Times—Boundsman Flynn Made the Bold.

There were stirring times at Hughie O'Donnell's on South Second street Sunday afternoon. Wm. J. Sanderson had his cheek cut open with a beer glass wielded by the proprietor. Then Robert Donnelly, just over from Scotland, was hammered with beer bottles and thrown out. He promptly retaliated by breaking in all the front windows with his fists. Hughie and his friends fled when the police came, but Boundsman Flynn captured Hughie ere he got away. The rest escaped. This morning Hughie O'Donnell was sent to the county jail for five months, the heaviest sentence Judge Runyon has yet imposed.

Sanderson says that O'Donnell accused him of insulting Mrs. O'Donnell and that the blow with the glass followed the accusation. Sanderson told the court how he and others were buying beer. O'Donnell, it will be remembered, has been convicted several times of illegal liquor selling.

Donnelly told the court that he, too, was buying beer. His story was that O'Donnell tried to beat him and refused to let him out.

Boundsman Flynn arrived on the scene when Donnelly had begun operations on the front windows and took him away a prisoner. Donnelly's hands were badly cut. He turned Donnelly over to Special Officer Aaron Mattox and went back to the O'Donnell establishment. The house was locked and the inmates had fled.

Flynn pursued Hughie on his wheel and arrested him on South Second street, en route to the Grant Avenue station.

Saturday O'Donnell was found guilty of running a disorderly establishment. The Judge sentenced him to pay a fine of $100 and go to jail for 60 days, which is practically five months in jail.

HICKEYS IN COURT.

Tim Murphy Said They Swore at Him and Proved His Case to Judge's Satisfaction.

The troubles between the Hickeys and their neighbors were renewed in the City Court Saturday. William Hickey and his wife were both before the Judge, charged by Tim Murphy with calling him a variety of improper and indecent names. The Hickeys were represented in court by Lawyer William G. DeMeza, while Francis J. Blatz, of the firm of Murphy & Blatz, appeared as attorney for the complainant.

Murphy said the Hickeys swore at him in chorus and individually. He had another neighbor to prove what he said was true. The Hickeys denied it all and said that Murphy was the one that swore.

The trial was rather exciting as DeMeza had difficulty in controlling the tongues of his clients and then objected seriously to Attorney Blatz's method of summing up. DeMeza was staunch for a disclosal and explained to the Judge that he was going to get it. Judge Runyon thought otherwise and fined the prisoners $5 each.

PNEUMONIA WAS FATAL.

Mrs. Tillie Biker Unable Survive Severe Illness She Was Subjected To.

Mrs. Tillie Biker, aged thirty-nine years, of Central avenue, died Sunday morning at Muhlenberg Hospital, where she was taken a few days ago to be treated for a severe attack of pneumonia. Prior to that time Mrs. Biker was being cared for at her home, Dr. Clawson, the physician, did all that was possible to break the attack, but all treatment failed. Mrs. Biker was the widow of the late Ira Biker, who was engaged in the undertaking business on Central avenue, and after the death of her husband she continued the business. She leaves several children. She was a member of several local lodges, including the Odd Ladies, Daughters of America and Woman's Relief Corps, and was also a member of the State Council, Daughters of America, holding the office of associate vice-councilor.

Many New Church Members.

Sunday morning at the communion service held at the First Presbyterian church two persons were received by letter into membership. At the Grace M. E. church Sunday morning two were received into membership on probation and one by letter. Communion service was also held at the First M. E. church when eight were received into membership.

WAS ILL FOR A LONG TIME.

KILLED HIMSELF IN WOODSHED IN REAR OF HIS HOUSE.

Engaged in the Beer Bottling Business With His Son-in-law Supposed to Have Been Cause of Despondency.

Adolph Bohren, aged 61 years, residing at 11 Greenbrook road, committed suicide about 6 o'clock Monday evening by shooting himself in the head with a revolver, 32 calibre. Despondency is assigned for the deed. Mr. Bohren had been ill for a long time, and was under treatment at the Elizabeth General Hospital. He was discharged Monday from the hospital and returned home during the morning.

Soon after his return he complained of not feeling very well and said that his head pained him. His actions aroused suspicion and he was watched as closely as possible by the members of the family. He walked about the place constantly and felt very uneasy. About 6 o'clock he walked to the rear of the yard and went to the woodshed, where the deed was committed. The family heard the report of the pistol and rushed to the woodshed, where they found Mr. Bohren lying on the floor.

A persistent effort was made to get Bohren to speak, but he could not be aroused. An examination showed that the bullet passed through the left temple and death must have been instant. The family then summoned Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan in the absence of Dr. Zeglio, the family physician. As Bohren was dead there was nothing that he could do. He then sent for Chief Campbell, who in turn summoned Coroner DeMott. The latter took charge and had the body removed from the woodshed to the house. After pronouncing him dead, he sent word to County Physician Wagoner, of Somerville, who came down later in the evening and granted a burial permit.

Mr. Bohren was a native of Switzerland, coming to this country when a young man. He engaged in the bottling business and finally located in Elizabeth, where he lived for some time. While there he acquired a large amount of property of much value. About a year ago he moved to Plainfield and bought out Setzertine's bottling business on Greenbrook road. His son, Adolph Bohren, Jr., conducted the place, and the elder Bohren lived in retirement. Sometime ago an abscess developed in his side and despite repeated operations he could not get permanent relief. He was considered greatly improved and so was discharged from the hospital yesterday. It is believed that his illness worried him and affected his mind, which is given as the cause for his committing suicide.

The funeral services were held from the residence, 11 Greenbrook road, yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment was in Hillside.

M'CARDELL SHOWS HIS HAND IN THE FIGHT

Fourth Ward Republican Boss Pleads for Favorable Action for Mortimer.

THE LICENSE IS LAID OVER.

QUESTION AS TO WHETHER APPLICANT IS A CITIZEN.

Serious Objection to Granting the License With Mortimer's Citizenship Undecided, But Gloak Asks Delay.

The all-important thing that engaged the attention of the Common Council at the regular meeting Monday evening was the application of John Mortimer for a wholesale liquor license for the place on Park avenue owned by Sigmund Frucht. This application has been hanging fire for sometime, and from time to time it has been laid over and referred until it was believed that it would not be granted.

There was a change of base last evening when Chairman Gloak, of the license committee, reported the application and moved that before action was taken a recess of ten minutes be taken. The recess was taking, but instead of it being ten minutes it was over a half-hour. During the recess Lawyer Wm. Newcorn and Andrew McCardell, representing the applicant, and Lawyer W. A. Coddington, representing the opposition to it, were invited to the ante-room to give their opinions in the matter. There was likewise argument pro and con in which the Councilmen took a hand. If the walls were not quite so thick the conversation could have been heard plainly outside. At all events it was agreed that the license should be granted.

When the Councilmen resumed their seats and Mr. Gloak moved that Mr. Mortimer's application be granted, Mr. van Herwerden threw a bombshell into camp by asking whether Mr. Mortimer was a naturalized citizen. He had heard that he was not, but was not sure whether such a person would be entitled to a license.

Mr. Newcorn was asked about the matter and replied that he did not know, but he knew that Mr. Mortimer paid a poll tax. To this Mr. van Herwerden replied that a poll tax was collected from anyone who would pay it.

W. A. Coddington stated that he understood that the applicant is not a citizen and that he has only lived in this country two years.

Mr. Lee took exception to this, and stated that he knew that Mr. Mortimer had lived here four years.

Mr. Buckle arose and made a few remarks, in which he said that there were many unpleasant features about the case. He was not in favor of grocery men coming into the liquor business, and at first he heard that Scheuer & Co. were behind Mr. Mortimer. He investigated this and found to his satisfaction that they were not. He had heard that the applicant was a straightforward and honorable man and he could see no reason why there should not be another wholesale place in the city, inasmuch as one person has a monopoly of the wholesale business.

By this time things were becoming mixed and President Smith thought that there ought to be someone present who could tell whether the applicant is a citizen, so he asked those in the lobby to speak up if they knew anything about the matter.

Mr. McCardell replied and said that he had known Mr. Mortimer ten years, but still he could not swear that he was a naturalized citizen. He stated further that when Mr. van Herwerden ran for office there was a question as to whether he was a citizen, but he believed that he was. He could not swear the question in Mr. Mortimer's case, but he would almost gamble that he was a citizen and pays his tax.

Mr. Mellick thought that in such a case where there seemed to be so much doubt the matter ought to go over. He therefore moved that the matter be laid on the table until the next meeting, and that in the meantime the Council ascertain positively whether Mr. Mortimer is a citizen. This was concurred in by all the members except Mr. Gloak, who voted in the negative. The Council will meet again in one week when the question of granting or refusing will be decided. The routine business was then taken up.

Gas at Woodhull & Martin.

Ever since the handsome pulpit desk was placed in the Marcoonier chapel by Trinity Reformed church, the bare floor of the raised platform on which it stands was not in keeping with the pulpit, but thanks to the generosity of Woodhull & Martin a handsome carpet has been laid and presented to the chapel, which is greatly appreciated by the worshippers and the little chapel very much beautified.

DEATH OF MAYOR KYTE WAS NOT EXPECIED

Illness With Grip Turned Into Pneumonia and End Came Saturday Night.

WAS SICK ONLY A FEW DAYS.

PROMINENT IN PUBLIC AFFAIRS FOR MANY YEARS.

Had Served as a Public Official for Many Committee—Through His Efforts Fanwood Was Built Up—Popular With All Who Knew Him.

Mayor George Kyte, of Fanwood, who for a number of years has been a leading and influential resident of Union county, holding many offices at the hands of the Republican party, died unexpectedly at his home Saturday night. Many of Mr. Kyte's most intimate friends did not know that he had been ill, and the announcement of his death came as a great shock. For the past week Mr. Kyte had been confined to his home with an attack of the grip. Last Thursday he had improved so that he felt that he was well enough to go to business in New York. He got up and dressed and was just about to start for the station to take a train when Dr. Westcott, his physician, called at the house. The physician found that Mr. Kyte was taking a dangerous move and he insisted that he remain at home. Mr. Kyte accepted the advice of the doctor.

That evening a relapse occurred and pneumonia set in, but he was not considered in a critical condition until Saturday morning, when his heart commenced to weaken. Heroic measures were resorted to to strengthen the organ, but without avail. At 6 o'clock that evening he died.

Mr. Kyte, who might be called the "Father of Fanwood," was fifty-four years of age, having been born at Berlice, British Guiana, S. A., in 1844. While yet a child he removed with his parents to Brooklyn, where he grew to manhood. During the Civil War he enlisted and went to the front, being one of the youngest members of his regiment. After the war he returned to Brooklyn and entered the shipping business of his father, Charles Kyte, who still survives him.

About 1870 the family removed from Brooklyn to Fanwood—at that time only a farming section. He soon saw the future of Fanwood and a number of years ago he left the shipping business and became identified with the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company, being elected treasurer of the company. Through his untiring efforts and booming of Fanwood as a suburban place of residence, the company's venture of build the case. He was not in favor of the town grew to a thriving borough, having separated from the township nearly ten years ago.

During the past three years Mr. Kyte has devoted nearly his entire time to the future of the place he so dearly loved. But before this he had held a number of important township, borough and county offices, being Township Treasurer and Township Committeeman for several years. Here his worth was recognized by his constituents and he was sent to represent Fanwood on the Board of Freeholders, from there he was advanced to Assemblyman from this district, serving two terms. During 1894 he was elected to the office of Sheriff and served until 1897.

He was twice elected and once appointed as Mayor of the borough, holding this office when he died.

In politics Mr. Kyte was an ardent Republican, but his party connection never interfered with his friendships and he was honored by Democrats and Republicans alike. No one ever said to Mr. Kyte with trouble but what he was always ready to give what assistance laid in his power.

Mr. Kyte belonged to a number of secret and social organizations, being a charter member and past regent of Fanwood Council. At the time of his death he was treasurer. He was a past chancellor of Goodwill lodge, K. of P., and was for a number of years an active member of Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company. He was also a member of Atlas Lodge, F. and A. M., of Brooklyn.

Mr. Kyte is survived by a wife and five children, three sons and two daughters.

The funeral services were held at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the Baptist church at Scotch Plains. Mr. Kyte was an Episcopalian and the services were in accordance with that denomination. Owing the desire of the large numbers to attend the services, it was decided to hold them in the Baptist church, the largest edifice in the town.

TONS OF ROCK BLASTED.

350 POUNDS OF DYNAMITE USED IT IN A SECOND.

Biggest Blast Ever Made by Smalley Brothers—Enough Material to Last Six Weeks.

Upon the invitation of Mayor Newton B. Smalley several Plainfielders visited his stone crusher Saturday afternoon for the purpose of witnessing the largest blast that Smalley Bros. have made since they engaged in the stone business. For a month past workmen have been busily engaged in digging a tunnel through the solid rock and preparing for the great blast. The tunnel was thirty feet in length and a person could walk through it in an upright position. After the tunnel was completed 350 pounds of dynamite were packed in the farthermost end of the opening. Then tons of dirt were thrown in around it and packed as solid as possible. Extending from the explosives were two wires running from the dangerous spot to a point a hundred yards away from the top of the high cliff.

At this point an electric battery was attached and at the proper time the current passed through the wires and there was a heavy, deep report, followed by a blinding cloud of dust and stone. Instantly the heavy rocks came tumbling down and it was all over. The hole left in the side of the mountain of rocks is fully fifty feet wide and a hundred feet deep. The rocks did not fly upward very much owing to the fact that the dynamite was buried unusually low. The amount of stone removed will be entirely used up in six weeks, and then another blast will be made. Saturday's blast was very successful and all who visited it enjoyed by those present from Johnston's drive, where a fine view was obtainable.

CONTINUOUS CHEAP SALE

WORK OF THE RELIEF ASSOCIATION IS EXPLAINED.

Veritable Rummage Sale Going on Every Day in the Rooms of the Association.

The Rummage Sale, just brought to a successful close, calls attention to the fact that there is held continuously in the relief rooms a rummage sale on a smaller scale. In the work-rooms connected with this association employment is given to those temporarily out of work. Articles of clothing, hats, jackets, children's dresses, etc., are made from the materials received and then sold in the relief store, the money thus obtained helping to pay for the remaining expenses of the work-rooms. Not only clothing, but ribbons, hat trimmings, stray pieces, odds and ends of all sorts are made use of. Bits of material of no value alone, when put together with skill are made into useful and salable articles.

The money received by the Relief Association from the recent Rummage Sale is to be used to enlarge the work-rooms in order to give employment to a greater number of persons. The association earnestly hopes that the people of Plainfield will bear this enterprise in mind and will help it by sending to the rooms, 141 West Front street, from time to time, such articles as they have no further use for, but which can be remodeled in the work-rooms. Anything from clothing to carpet rags will be most gratefully received.

A BOOK SOCIABLE.

Interesting and Instructive Affair Given at First Baptist Church Friday Night.

The social committee of the First Baptist church gave an interesting book sociable last Friday, which was both entertaining and instructive. A card having a design on it representing a well-known book, which the holder is supposed to guess, was given to each one present. After guessing their own card each one passed it on taking another in return, the object being to guess the greatest number of books. Some of the designs were very unique and showed great ingenuity. Guida's "Under Two Flags" was represented by a young lady with two flags on her hat. "A Commentator on China" was a potato on a china plate. "A Rose in Bloom" was a full-grown rose and the "Pickwick Papers" were a toothpick, a lamp wick and some paper scraps. Miss Bessie Wilson guessed 34 out of a total of 54. Miss Ten Eyck was second and Miss Everitt was third. At the conclusion of the guessing refreshments were served. The committee was Dr. Browning, chairman; Miss Bertha Needham, John MacLaughlin, Miss Susie Woodland, Miss Margaret Harold and Clifford Braider.

New Railroad Superintendent.

Harry Dankel, who for several years has had charge of the interests of the Central Railroad of New Jersey at Roselle, has been appointed superintendent of the New York and New Orange Railroad, which runs from Aldene, on the Central, to New Orange. He succeeds William Millard, who has been compelled to resign to attend to business in the west.

NEWARK GUESTS CAME.

FORMAL OPENING OF THE PARK AVENUE HOTEL.

The Interior of the House Prettily Decorated for the Occasion—Dancing the Feature.

The formal summer opening at the Park Avenue Hotel took place Saturday night when a hop was given under the direction of James Bailey, the manager of this popular place. The large double parlors and dining room presented a bright and attractive appearance. The decorations consisted of southern smilax chiefly. No pains were spared to make the occasion of great enjoyment to all and Mr. Bailey personally looked after the comfort of his guests.

An attractive feature of the decorations were the numerous Japanese lanterns that were suspended over the front porch, making a brilliant illumination that could be seen from a great distance. It gave passers-by an idea of old times, when there was so much life about this favorite hotel.

Included among the guests was a party of Newarkers, who made the trip to and from Plainfield by a special trolley car. They met at the home of Mrs. O. B. Stoutenberg, 1038 Broad street, Newark, and left there at 7:15 o'clock. It was just 8:45 o'clock when the party arrived at the hotel. It was a jolly crowd and there was so much merriment on the part of all that the trip did not seem nearly so long. They left the city on the return trip at 11:30 o'clock and arrived home about 12:45 o'clock, thoroughly delighted with their visit. The trip was arranged by William Coats, of Newark, and those who were in the party are as follows:

Mrs. C. B. Stoutenberg, Miss Ida Dodd, Mrs. Frank Stoutenberg, Mrs. James Bailey, Theodore Staats, Miss Emma Staats, Amos Holbrook, Miss Pauline Stoutenberg, Miss Marion Bailey, Ray Whitehead, Robert Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. William Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Gleason, Miss Mabel Frances, Mr. and Mrs. David Rutan, Miss Molly Webb, Mrs. J. H. Richardr, Miss Ethel Whitehead, Clarence Smith, Mr. and Mrs. William Coats, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ingram and Miss Clara Curtis.

The other guests present were Miss Nettie Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Bainbridge Hinckley, of Brooklyn; Philip Stokes, of Elizabeth; Thornton Earl, Tom Brooke Terhune, of New York; Dr. and Mrs. T. S. Davis, Miss Davis, Miss Clara Long, Mrs. Beard, Miss Pound, Miss Catherine McClure, Miss Hebert, Miss Elizabeth Hebert, Martin Hebert, Ned Simpson, Dr. Emerson, T. O. Doane, Jr., Ray Carroll, Dr. H. V. Merrell, Walter Long, George Procter Smith, Alex. VanOne, Godwin Beard and Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Miller, of Plainfield.

The feature of the evening was the dancing. Interspersing the dances the guests enjoyed a social chat and at 10:30 o'clock all were invited to the dining room, where refreshments were served. Dancing was then continued until it was time for the Newark guests to leave for home. All were loud in their praise of the pleasant evening given, and they wished the management an abundance of success in the future.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

AN IDEAL SERVICE FOR THE COMMUTERS

A Correspondent Suggests a New Schedule for the Central Railroad.

AN ACCOMMODATION TO ALL

SEVERAL EXPRESS TRAINS TO AND FROM NEW YORK WANTED.

A Way in Which the Fierce Competition Plainfield is to be Subjected to May be Overcome by the Railroad.

In view of the recent agitation for lower fares and improved train service from our city a few remarks from a commuter may be interesting and I therefore venture to state my ideas on this important subject, first qualifying them by saying that although the writer is a former railroad man of experience and knows many of the difficulties of the question from the railroad point of view he has ignored them in order that as a commuter he may give the fullest play to his wishes for an ideal train service without being trammelled by requirements which are necessarily involved in the operation of a large railroad.

By far the larger number of people who do business in New York are employed in a subordinate capacity and are required to be at their place of employment promptly at stated hours. Of these hours probably the most important, in point of numbers, is 7 a.m. Next in importance is 8 a. m., for wholesale, dry goods, department stores, etc. At 8:30 a. m. is a period of minor importance but at 9 a. m. is an hour when probably the greatest number of commuters to New York have to be in their places of business. At 9:30 for active brokers or 9:45 for others are important hours for commuters, but to men who arrive at their office at this time of day there is probably not the need of being there to the minute that occurs in the case of the mechanic at 7 a. m., the salesman at 8 a. m., or the bank clerk at 9 a. m. In these latter cases the commuter who arrives 5 minutes after his fellows who live in New York city and who are sharp on time may receive a black mark or discredit for being late, which will work against him when the opportunity for promotion occurs, which will not be in the slightest degree his own fault but possibly, if not probably, from some fault or trouble of the railway company. I do not know how this can be obviated but it might be lessened and although the first cost to the railway company may be considerable yet in the end it should be very profitable.

In these times which threaten fierce competition for Plainfield, with the rapid transit road well under way in New York city; with the proposed tunnel of the Pennsylvania Railroad to New York and Brooklyn; with the States Island section of the city of New York clamoring for a free ferry because the Brooklynites have a free bridge, and with the new bridges over the East river, it seems to me that in about three years' time even the attractive commuters' train service suggested below will hardly succeed in keeping Plainfield in her present relative position.

First, to be of use to the few Plainfielders who may have to commence work at 7 a. m., a train should leave Plainfield at 6, reaching New York at 6:45. Similarly a train should leave at 7, arriving 7:45; 7:30, arriving 8:15; 7:55, arriving 8:40; 8:10, arriving 8:55; 8:30, arriving 9:15; 8:45, arriving 9:30. Returning 4:15 p. m. (for brokers), arriving 5 p. m.; 4:45 p. m. (for busier brokers), arriving 5:30; 5:15 p. m., 5:30 p. m., 5:45 p. m. and 6:15 p. m., respectfully arriving at 6, 6:15, 6:30 and 7 p. m. All these trains with no stop between Plainfield and Jersey City.

Second, that going into New York everything should be done to have a boat leave just about three minutes after the train has reached the station so there may be no unnecessary delay.

Third, that the cost of commutation tickets should be $7 50 per month and the present change in scale of rates abolished.

Fourth, that if it can be done without danger, and by agreement with the other railroad companies interested in such trains, a car for Plainfield should be slipped from the 4 p. m., 5 p. m., and 6 p. m. Philadelphia trains.

Apologizing to you for the length of this letter and to the railway company for the seeming impertinence of these suggestions, I remain,

A Sincere Well Wisher to Plainfield.

May 12th, 1900.

Mrs. Harry Autea, of Perth Amboy, has returned home after a visit with her parents on Central avenue.

MASONS WERE IN CHARGE

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL SERVICE OVER REMAINS OF E. C. MULFORD.

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass Conducted Services at the House—Beautiful Floral Tributes.

There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, including about forty members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., that attended the funeral services of the late Edward C. Mulford, held from the home, 403 East Fifth street, Tuesday afternoon, at 3 o'clock.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, where the deceased was a member, conducted the services at the house. He read appropriate Scripture selections, after which he spoke at some length, touching the life and character of the departed. He spoke of his devotion to his home, his church and his country. He dwelt upon his uprightness of character and how he was esteemed by his fellow-townsmen, with whom he had been associated for many years in both a public and private way. At the close of his remarks, Dr. Snodgrass offered a fervent prayer in which he remembered the bereaved members of the family and prayed that they might be sustained in their hour of grief by their Heavenly Father, who alone can give that health and strength needed.

There was a very beautiful display of floral tributes, including a pillow of white flowers with the square and compass in purple flowers, presented by Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F and A. M. There were also two wreaths, a harp, two pillows and a number of cut flowers and lilies, all of which were arranged about and upon the casket.

At the close of the service an opportunity was given those present to view the remains. They were then taken to Hillside cemetery. The members of Jerusalem Lodge formed on either side of the hearse, accompanying the remains to their last resting place. When the grave was reached the members of the lodge took charge of the services. The Lord's Prayer was recited by the chaplain of the lodge, Rev. George Hauser, which was followed by the impressive burial service of the fraternity, recited from memory by Past Master B. Frank Coriell. Rev. Mr. Hauser again offered prayer, after which Dr. Snodgrass pronounced the benediction.

The bearers were from Jerusalem Lodge, as follows: Calvin H. Rugg, Wm. J. Ford, Garret T. Dunham, Dr. H. H. Lowrie, Captain J. F. Hubbard and A. L. Force. The first four are Past Masters of the lodge.

PETITION IN BANKRUPTCY.

Dr. Rushmore Sets Forth That His Debts are $99,724.21 and the Assets $130,362.92.

Trenton, May 16.—Edward Rushmore, of Plainfield, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday in the United States District Court, setting forth debts amounting to $99,724.21, and assets of $130,362 92. Of the latter $32,385 is claimed to be exempt under the law, being trust funds of the estates of Stephen and Edmund P. Rushmore, held by the petitioner. The petitioner is a practising physician of Plainfield, and engaged in the coal and lumber business, trading as Rushmore & Co. The debts are chiefly mortgages and amounts owing dealers.

Hasn't Been Here in Twenty-four Years.

John Heyser, of Danville, Ohio, spent Sunday at the home of Gus. Warden, Dunellen. It is his first visit to this part of New Jersey in over twenty-four years, at which time he lived with his parents at the Short Hills, near Dog Corners. Mr. Heyser has been railroading for several years and lost an arm during his service. He sees wonderful changes in Dunellen and Plainfield during the past twenty-four years.

Trolley Waiting Room.

Trolley passengers will soon have a place where they can sit down while waiting for cars at the Watchung avenue switch. Through the efforts of the Board of Trade a waiting room is being placed in the store formerly occupied by Suhr, the barber. Comfortable seats are being put in the store and it will probably be ready by next week.

On Its New Foundation.

The Dyer house will be placed on its new foundation next Friday. It was successfully moved around the corner from Craig place into Grove street, and the men are now getting it into position to place on the foundation.

Mrs. William Chamberlain and family, of Westfield, who have been visiting Plainfield relatives for several days, have returned home.

Mrs. William Hamilton, of Johnstown, Pa., is visiting her cousin, Mrs. E. D. Moffett, of Orchard place. Mrs. Hamilton formerly lived in Westfield.

MUST PAY HIS BOARD.

Bound Brook Landlady Was Bound to Have Money From a Derelict Guest.

Edward W. Wire, an employe of the Bound Brook Electric Light Company, was brought before Justice Storms of New Market Tuesday on complaint of Mrs. Willis, of Greenbrook, for obtaining money under false pretenses. Mrs. Willis, who is a boarding-house keeper, and with whom Wire boarded, says that he did not pay her any board for four weeks, giving as an excuse that he had not received his money from the company. Becoming suspicious she inquired and found that he had gotten his money and accordingly had him brought before Justice Storms, who made him agree to pay future and back board.

A humorous side of the case was that Wire was arrested at Greenbrook by Constable Polhemus, of Lincoln, confined over night in the Dunellen jail and tried at New Market.

CLOSING OF BOYS' CLUB.

EXHIBITION OF WORK OF MEMBERS FOR THE YEAR.

Clubrooms Have Been Open 190 Nights and the Total Attendance Has Been 4,866.

The sixth annual exhibition of the Boys' Club was held last Tuesday and was well attended by the friends and parents of the boys. Around the sides and in the center of the gymnasium and in the gallery were arranged the exhibits of the different classes, consisting of pattern-making, moulding, carpentering and mechanical drawings. Some of the models shown were worthy of older and more experienced hands and showed that a great deal of care had been taken in their make-up. Next season bookbinding will be taken up, and the carpentering class has made a number of well-constructed tools for the purpose.

During the season of 1899-1900 the club has been open 190 nights with an aggregate attendance of 4,866.

The club will close Saturday and will reopen in September with the present superintendent, Olaf Baugstadt, in charge.

GOODBYS TO GOVERNOR.

Many Persons Wish Him a Pleasant Voyage—No Acting Governor Probable.

Trenton, May 16.—The absence of Governor Voorhees from the country is going to be so brief that it is hardly likely that there will be an acting Governor in the interval. The Governor suggested to President Johnson of the Senate that he be sworn in as acting Governor, but Senator Johnson said it was unnecessary. Instead, probably at his own suggestion, he has been armed with a letter from Governor Voorhees formally announcing the latter's departure for Europe, etc. This is to pave the way for appointment as acting Governor should any emergency arise requiring his services in that capacity. A great many persons called upon the Governor yesterday to bid him goodby and wish him a safe journey and a good time.

Suit in Ejectment Begun.

Elizabeth, May 16.—An ejectment suit has been brought in the Union county Circuit Court by Nellie C. Sayre, of Springfield, against Susan Allen, of that township, to secure possession of a tract of land containing 60-100 of an acre, which is situated along the Shunpike road on the side of Springfield Mountain and near the Baltusrol Golf Club grounds. The plaintiff claims that her right to the possession of this property accrued on November 7th, 1896, and that the defendant since then has wrongfully deprived her of the possession of the same and she claims besides $500 damages. The defendant has put a counter-plea, in which she claims to the real owner of the disputed tract.

Head of a Truant Officer.

At the next regular meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education it is quite likely that the question of appointing a truant officer, to comply with the new State School Law, will be considered and made. There is a feeling among the members that this should be done, as almost every year the Board has trouble along this line which would be removed if such an officer is appointed.

Using an Old Switch.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company has taken up the switch on Grant avenue, and will place it on East Fifth street. The switch was of little use on Grant avenue, and will be far more important where it is destined to go.

Elliott T. Barrows, of West Eighth street, who has been detained at home by illness, has recovered.

WARM WAVE WANES; ONE VICTIM FOUND

Miss Bridget Landrigan Overcome by Heat on West Second Street Tuesday.

TAKEN HOME BY POLICE.

THERMOMETOR AT ITS HIGHEST TUESDAY, REACHING 94°.

Three Days of Hot Weather Culminated Tuesday — Thunder Storms That Night —Cooler Yesterday—A Warm Wave Coming.

The apex of the warm wave was reached in Plainfield Tuesday and today the worst of it is over. Before the period of unusually hot weather it secured one victim. Miss Bridget Landrigan, who lives in the Rogers building, West Second street, was overcome by the heat Tuesday afternoon and was taken home by the police.

Miss Landrigan was about to enter the yard of Patrick Lynch, of West Second street, Tuesday afternoon when she staggered and fell to the ground unconscious. Some men were passing at the time and they carried her to the piazza where she was shortly revived. Police headquarters were notified. Chief Grant and Patrolman Mattox hurried to the place and took Miss Landrigan home in a hack. She had recovered sufficiently to be able to walk to her room. While she is weak today, it is believed that she will recover from the effects.

This warm wave has been quite unprecedented in the records of the weather bureau. It made its appearance here Sunday, when the thermometer registered 91 degrees. There was a accordingly hot breeze that swept over the city and made the heat seem worse than it really was.

The warm wave began to get in its good work Monday when the thermometer hovered about 91 degrees for several hours during the afternoon. Tuesday it was hotter than ever and the despensers of cooling drinks found plenty of perspiring customers. According to Weather Observer Engle's record the mercury temperature was 94 degrees. In the sun, however, it was still hotter.

Late in the afternoon threatening clouds gathered over the mountain and promised thunder storms. During the evening thunder and lightning were apparent signs that the storm was close at hand. It did not come until late at night, and then did not amount to much.

There was a marked improvement in the feeling of the air yesterday but it grew warmer as the sun rose well above the horizon. Clouds soon covered the sun, however, and those who had dressed for another day like Tuesday began to feel chilly. The warm wave is evidently over, but the weather bureau tells of another that is on its way here from the west promising a return of the high temperature.

HOTEL BURNED.

"Pin Oaks Springs" in Ashes—Total Loss is $5,000.

Somerville, May 16.—The summer hotel known as "Pin Oaks Springs," situated near Somerville, was totally destroyed by fire at 7 o'clock this morning. There were ten guests at the hotel, and they lost nearly all their baggage. The fire started in the kitchen. The building was owned by Mrs. J. H. Miller, of New York, and was managed by F. T. Galusha. The total loss is $5,000, partly covered by insurance.

Just Missed Him.

Michael Winn, who boards at Mosley's, had a narrow escape last evening from a pro bable fractured skull. He was sitting in front of the hotel when some object whizzed past him and smashed with a loud report on the sidewalk, which could be heard for a block. It proved to be a large wine bottle which had been accidentally pushed off the sill of an upper window. Had it struck Mr. Winn it would undoubtedly have severely injured him.

Must Use Typewriters in Register Hours.

Officers of the Plainfield Water Supply Company are keeping their eyes on persons who use lawn sprinklers. There are regular hours for the use of them and if people persist in violating the rule, they may have occasion to remember it.

May Queen Tableaux.

A May Queen tableaux entertainment will be given in the Calvary Baptist church Thursday evening, May 24th, for the benefit of the church. Miss A. Howard is in charge of the entertainment.

Miss Anna Fenner, of Elmwood place, has returned from a visit with relatives at Dunellen.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Italian Arrested and Arraigned for Fourth Finder Accused of Criminal Assault.

Dominico Volerdo, an Italian living in the Italian colony at the corner of North avenue and Terrill road, was arrested Tuesday and taken before Justice Schiek at Scotch Plains, charged with criminal assault upon Patti Pastori, the eight-year-old niece of Dominic Nagle, of Netherwood. The alleged offense was committed yesterday. The warrant was given to Constable Allen to serve. When he arrived at the Italian colony there was intense excitement and an effort was made to prevent the arrest of Volendo, but after displaying a little diplomacy the constable was able to induce his prisoner to accompany him to Justice Schiek's court without overpowering him. The Justice issued the prisoner to the lockup to await an examination to be held later.

AFTER CHANCERY CLERK

COMPLAINT AGAINST HIM TO BE FILED WITH CHANCELLOR.

It is Alleged That Carelessness Has Been Shown in Drawing Decrees.

Complaint is to be filed with Chancellor Magie against Clerk in Chancery Thompson and his subordinates. Judge Parker, of Jersey City, at the suggestion of Vice-Chancellor Pitney, is consulting lawyers with grievances and will prepare the formal complaint. It is alleged that carelessness has been shown in drawing decrees.

This course was decided on at the session in the Chancery Chambers in Jersey City Tuesday. Counsel for the holder of a third mortgage protested against his client being overlooked in a decree in a foreclosure proceeding. During a discussion it was charged that this is a frequent occurrence, and Vice-Chancellor Pitney joined in the criticism and said that decrees had been altered. He cited an instance where $75 had been allowed to counsel for special reasons and when the decree came back it showed the amount had been reduced to $25, the usual fee. He expressed the wish that members of the bar would present a formal complaint to the Chancellor for investigation, and requested Judge Parker to consult the leading lawyers. Judge Parker accepted the task and has secured many signatures.

THOMAS G. RYDER DEAD

A Popular Young Man—Remains Sent to Home of Relatives in Canada.

Thomas G. Ryder, who has been seriously ill with pneumonia at the City Hotel for the past ten days, died Tuesday. He was twenty-six years of age, and had lived in Plainfield for the past three years, during which time he has been employed in the dry-goods stores of Lederer, Crosby & Hill and Boehm, having been connected with the latter for the past year.

Mr. Ryder has made many friends since his residence in Plainfield. He was quiet and unassuming in manner, and by steady and industrious application had made himself a valuable assistant for his employers.

He came from Acton, Canada, where his relatives reside. The remains were sent to Acton yesterday, where they will be interred. They are accompanied by his mother and brother, who arrived in Plainfield Sunday.

THE SCHOOL OF METHODS

W. C. T. U. WORKERS MET IN SCOTCH PLAINS YESTERDAY.

Interesting Points on Temperance Work Made by the Delegates Who Attended.

Scotch Plains, May 16.—The annual meeting of the Union County W. C. T. U. School of Methods, held in the Baptist church yesterday, was a very successful and profitable gathering. The day was an ideal one for such a gathering and the attendance was one of the largest in the history of the school. The business of the day was divided into three sessions.

The morning session was opened at 10 a. m. with devotional exercises led by Mrs. C. M. Anderson, of Westfield. Then came the report of the secretary, which was followed by the appointment of committees. At 10:30 a very interesting address upon the "Responsibility of Motherhood," by Mrs. T. W. Powell, of Plainfield, was listened to. At 11:30 a Bible reading by Miss Anna Ramsey, of Plainfield, was held. At 12 o'clock a noontide prayer was offered, after which the ladies adjourned to the cooler parts of the shady lawn to enjoy their box lunches.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock with devotional exercises led by Mrs. W. Vigelius, of Cranford. "W. C. T. U. Gleanings" was the interesting subject assigned to Miss E. L. Starr, of Westfield. This was followed by an interesting address by Rev G. M. Shott, pastor of the church. Mr. Shott confined his remarks to the recent work which has been inaugurated in the town, and of the result. At 3 o'clock special children's exercises were held, being led by Miss S. J. Kerns, of Elizabeth. Miss Emma Bourne followed with the annual question box, and a great deal of interesting information was derived from this pleasant way of uniting speaker and audience. After benediction the ladies adjourned to the parlors of the church, where the ladies of South Plains had arranged a repast for their guests. The evening session was opened with singing, followed by devotions led by Rev. C. C. Woodruff, of the Methodist church. Rev. C. M. Anderson, of Westfield, the speaker of the evening, was then introduced and gave an interesting address on "The Christian View of the Liquor Traffic." A resolution condemning the use of the canteen in the army was passed unanimously. The school had for their guest during the day the State president of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Emma Bourne, of Newark.

NEW TELEPHONE COMPANY.

Capitalized at $15,000, and Will Connect Plainfield With Suburban Towns.

Elizabeth, May 16.—The Plainfield Telephone Company filed articles of incorporation yesterday with the Clerk of Union county. The company is capitalized at $15,000, and will begin business with $5,000. Andrew Dingler, of Jersey City, controls 400 shares; Robert J. Emery, of Jersey City, fifty shares, and Henry F. Atkinson, of Red Bank, fifty shares. The shares are $100 each. The company is incorporated for twenty years. It intends to connect Plainfield, Fanwood, Netherwood, Dunellen, South Plainfield, North Plainfield and Piscataway township.

New Houses to be Built.

The large and handsome stone house corner of Hillside and Prospect avenues, owned by the estate of Alfred Sturdi, is soon to be torn down and in its place will be erected two handsome houses of modern style and architecture. The house that now stands on the property was built twenty-five years ago by Wm. Flagg and has always been considered one of the finest residences in the city.

Fixing Up Putnam Avenue.

The residents along Putnam avenue are greatly rejoiced over the final arrival of the steam roller and Street Commissioner Gavett's men to repair that thoroughfare. It has been a long time since that street had any attention and it was in very bad condition since the street railway tracks have been laid there.

Complimentary Honoring Mr. Cox.

In the Equity Division of the United States Circuit Court Monday appropriate resolutions in regard to the death of Rowland Cox were entered upon the minutes after eulogistic remarks by several members and Judge Lacombe.

Miss May McCann, of West Third street, is quite sick at her home.

Miss Dayton, of West Fifth street, is the guest of Brooklyn relatives.

The Misses Phillips, of West Front street, are entertaining relatives from Newark.

COMING EVENTS AT PARK GOLF CLUB.

Schedule for this Season is Announced By the Green Committee.

WILL BEGIN SATURDAY NEXT

SEVERAL IMPORTANT CONTESTS TO LAST THROUGH THE SEASON.

The Green Committee Challenge Medal Will Decide Best Play in Club-President's and Medley Cups Competed for Saturdays.

A very successful season is in prospect for the Park Golf Club this year. There is a remarkable increase of interest among the members in the golf and royal game, while the green committee now announces a schedule of events for the season that promises lots of enjoyable sport. The chief features of the schedule are three competitions that will continue throughout the summer and autumn. While the links of the Park Golf Club were opened several weeks ago, and a "kickers'" handicap was held on the opening day, the active season at that club does not really begin until Saturday.

The special events scheduled for Saturday afternoon are a men's handicap competition, eighteen holes, medal play, and a ladies' handicap competition, nine holes, medal play. Suitable prizes will be offered. Fifteen entries in the former and eight entries in the latter will be required. Incidental to these events will be the play for the Green Committee Challenge Medal, a scratch competition designed to show the best play in the club. The trophy will go to the player making the lowest gross score for eighteen holes during the afternoon and will thereafter be open to challenge for any Saturday until the close of the season.

Challenges are to be played in the order of filing with the club expert or the green committee and the match may be played concurrently with any other competition, the scores counting in both events. Only those are eligible to challenge who have within one week of the time of challenging made, in competition, a score within ten strokes of the score made by the holder of the medal. A record will be kept of the number of wins for the trophy and the member credited with the most at the close of the season will become permanent owner of the medal. This event will probably be a regular feature of the Saturday afternoon play at the club links and promises to be of much interest.

The first preliminary round for the Charles Hyde Holiday Cup will be the attraction May 30th, Decoration Day, beginning at 9 o'clock. Preliminary rounds, handicap, eighteen holes, medal play, will be held Decoration Day, Labor Day and Election Day. The players making the four lowest average net scores in at least two of the preliminary rounds will be eligible to play in the semi-final round, match play, Thanksgiving Day morning. The winners of the semi-finals will meet on the afternoon of that day for the final round, match play, the cup to become the property of the winner.

Decoration Day afternoon there will be a mixed foursome handicap, nine holes, medal play, entries for which must be made a week in advance. Similar mixed foursome handicaps will be held on the afternoons of Labor Day, Election Day and Thanksgiving Day.

To begin play for the President's Cup, offered by Charles W. McCutchen, a men's handicap competition, eighteen holes, medal play, will be held Saturday afternoon, June 2d. The regular competitions for that trophy will then be held every Saturday afternoon until November 3d, inclusive. In each week's competition, including that of June 2d, the players making the three lowest net scores will be credited with points for the cup as follows: First, 3 points; second, 2 points; third, 1 point. The player having scored the greatest number of points during the season will become the holder of the cup for a year. The cup is to become the permanent property of any member winning it two consecutive years. The competitions will be similar to those for the McCutchen cup last year.

On the same day, June 2d, a ladies' handicap competition, nine holes, medal play, will be held to begin play for the Hockey cup, offered by E. S. Hockey. The weekly competitions for this trophy will be continued until July 14th, when play will be discontinued until Saturday, September 1st, when it will be resumed to end November 3d, inclusive. The conditions will be the same as those for the

Hand Ball as a Game and as a Means for Training Muscles

ATHLETES are making a great mistake in gradually working away from handball as a game and as a means of training muscles. That such a state of affairs is true, some critics will deny. There are plenty of courts in the United States—nearly every fire company in a big city has a court for a man to practice in—but the courts are not frequented by the old-time experts. Some recruits who know but the first principles of the ancient game, bat the ball about until their hands become tender and then they give way to other recruits. Time was when thousands of handball contests were decided in Chicago, New York, Brooklyn and some other cities every Sunday afternoon.

Now Phillip Casey, the man who voluntarily relinquished the championship after holding it against all comers for a quarter of a century, says that the interest in the game is dying in the east and that Chicago is the greatest handball center in the world. There is nothing to handball from the point of view of the athlete who is always trying to make money out of a sport. Perhaps that is why there is less play in the match line. But there is health, longevity, robust constitutions, hearty appetites, etc., in a handball game—it is better than almost any other form of exercise for the human body.

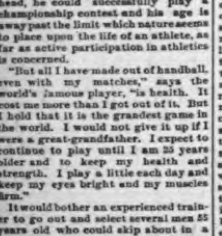
Mr. Casey owes all of his health to handball. Thirty-five years ago he came to America. He had been a great handball player in Mountrath, Queen's county, Ireland, for five years before he landed on American soil. He was in 1897 that he gave up championship honors simply because he had become weary of the monotony of winning against all challengers and wished to give some of the younger players a chance. He is confident that even now, with the snows of age showing on his head, he could successfully play a championship contest and his age is away past the limit which nature seems to place upon the life of an athlete, as far as active participation in athletics is concerned.

"But all I have made out of handball, even with my matches," says the world's famous player, "is health. It cost me more than I got out of it. But I hold that it is the grandest game in the world. I would not give it up if I were a great-grandfather. I expect to continue to play until I am 35 years older and to keep my health and strength. I play a little each day and keep my eyes bright and my muscles firm."

It would bother an experienced trainer to go out and select several men 35 years old who could skip about in a handball court, following the ball as Casey does, and weathering a hard game without wilting. Casey says that he knows of no men of his age except handball players who can stand that violent exercise.

"Ireland has produced the best handball players, as everyone that follows the game should know. I take it that the men of my race have been playing the game in some form for a thousand years. The last game that I played in that amounted to something was the $2,000 match at Chicago, when Jim Dunne and I played William Carney and Louis Keegan, and won.

"There were courts in New York, Hoboken, Jersey City and Brooklyn when I came to America, but the game has made its greatest strides in the last few years as far as the spread of enthusiasm and the building of courts is concerned. There are nearly 30 first-class courts in Chicago, where the present champion, William Carney, lives.



EUGENIO CASSELLI.

I think that the game is on the increase. There may not be as many Irishmen playing it as there used to be, and there may be a scarcity of old-timers, but the game is a high one and the best form of training are not overlooking handball. The colleges and varsities are taking to the sport. The Young Men's Christian association gymnasiums are equipped with facilities for handball. The schools for young men and for women, that pay attention to the physical as well as the mental development, regard handball as an exercise. The girls should not be afraid to play it, for it does them as much good as it does the boys. They can get red checks and a graceful carriage from a half hour a day in hard work in a court. The game is faster than tennis and requires more physical effort for a woman than tennis, but I choose handball for the athlete girl every time.

"What can be better than an hour at handball in a cool court? The Turkish bath is not in it with handball to bring out a healthy perspiration. The trouble with the vapor baths is that they produce perspiration without affording the participant any exercise. The luxurious steaming does not bring out the healthy glow that handball gives to the skin. You have to think quickly and act quickly in handball, and no one can tell me that the sport does not better a man. Then think of the tonic to the system in the healthy rub-down and shower bath that you get after say three hard games each day."

Casey's picture of the athlete glowing with ruddy health after a hard game reveals to me the sight I saw at McGurn's famous court one spring day several years ago. I was ordered to follow the Chicago baseball team of the national league about the circuit and Capt. Anson and some of his players were taking daily exercise at the court, playing handball. It was cold enough for an ulster without—a fire would have felt good in the handball court. I was shivering when I made one of my daily trips to the court and saw Your Uncle Anson stripped almost naked, his big red hand working like a windmill paddle in the effort to keep the little ball flying against the wall of the court. There was a stove in a remote corner of a dressing room, but not a bit of heat was permitted to get out into the handball court. As soon as he had finished his stint of play, Capt. Anson went into the dressing room and took his cold shower bath. Then he had a rub-down, and putting on his winter clothing he was soon walking out on Dearborn street faster than I could go. To say that his big body glowed with health is putting it mildly—he looked to be bursting with health. To-day the veteran baseball player is as strong as a football player. He continues his handball exercise when he can find time to desert billiards and bowling. His athletic condition at the time he was in the harness as a baseball player was enough to prove the value of handball as a means of conditioning an athlete.

Jimmy Barry, the retired bantam weight pugilist, was for years one of the fastest little handball players in the country. He and Willie McGurn were able to beat almost any team. Once Barry and McGurn consented to a match with Casselli, the South American, who uses a little paddle to bat with instead of the palm of the hand, and the Spanish-American won. "To think that an Irishman should be beaten at his own game by a Spaniard," remarked Barry, "is rather poor, I must say. But the Irishman would scorn to use a bit of a paddle in playing handball. The game beats any gymnasium work—even boxing—for getting a man into perfect condition for an athletic contest requiring wind and stamina. I never would have been the champion of my class for the world had it not been for my handball training at the court where I fought my first fight and where I played handball at least an hour a day for years."

Phil Casey thinks that the day will come when every school in the land will have a court for the scholars to play at recess. The high schools in many parts of the country have tried this scheme, Jim Dunne is a grandfather, but he continues to play. He has two sons who are quite expert in the game. Carney, who occasionally plays a game, was the only player that could defeat this man Casselli. By the way, Casey says that the claim of the Spaniards that they introduced handball into Ireland may have some foundation in fact. But he says that he does not care if they did. The Spanish method is to use a little bat. Something like the games of rackets, in the Spanish isles, but the true game of handball will always have the naked hand for a bat.

"In Spain they have hundreds of handball courts," continued the veteran player, "and I'll warrant you that there are 300 games of handball there to one bullfight, and yet the critics say that bullfighting is the national sport of the sons of Castile and Aragon.

"When John L. Sullivan was training for his battle with Corbett I tried to get the big fellow to play handball. But he was too big, he said, and I could not do anything with him. But I have noticed that Corbett, Ryan, McCoy, Sharkey, Jeffries, etc., the successful fighters, use handball for the great benefit it affords in training."

THE STUDY OF BUGS

Pursued for the Benefit of Farmers as Well as Consumers.

Our Washington Correspondent Describes a Visit to the Most Interesting Branch of the Agricultural Department.

[Special Washington Letter.]

WHILE the insecticides, vermicides, germicides and microbe killers are diligently engaged in efforts to destroy certain forms of life, there are scientists in government employment who are making strenuous efforts to hatch obnoxious insects and their parasites.

Under the direction of the department of agriculture, in a building erected specifically for that purpose, insects are bred and reared in a large glass conservatory which serves as a hothouse for the propagation of bugs of scores of species. They are as carefully reared for as the eggs in chicken incubators, and are given plenty of light and warm, moist air all through the winter and during the damp or chilly days and nights of spring and autumn.

Although it is conceded that the greatest study of man is man, there are scientists who seem to have accomplished all that they desire in that direction, and they devote their waking hours to the study of bugs, beetles and all of the forms of minute animal life. In all sorts of jars, from a small jelly glass to a large glass globe of kettle form, they have insects in various stages of development. The daily history of each insect is carefully noted, and all of its transformations are historically treated for several generations.

In one of these jars there are two sunflower heads infested with the larvae of beetles. These larvae have buried themselves in the sand with which the vessel is partly filled, and there they have been hibernating for four months. Very soon they will be set out in the sunlight. They will then emerge as perfect beetles, will lay eggs in the sunflowers and a new generation will be watched with solicitude and interest.

The careful study of these things has been fostered by the department of agriculture in order that ultimately the best methods of destroying the pests, and preventing their propagation, may be discovered by those who make specific study of these subjects. Some time this spring the department will issue bulletins for farmers, giving all of the information which has been acquired during the past 12 months in these studies.

One of the officials, upon being complimented upon the value of the work which is being done, said: "We are doing some good, but of course it is very little. You must understand that there are about 10,000,000 species of insects, and we are treating them by scores instead of by millions. Human knowledge is exceedingly small, and our investigations are circumscribed. But if we can help our agriculturists even a little bit we are doing a good work. Men who give their lives to scientific inquiry naturally become moral philosophers. We realize the vastness of the forms and qualities of creation and are lost in awe. Many generations of mankind must elapse before we have anything like a comprehensive scientific cyclopedia of these things.

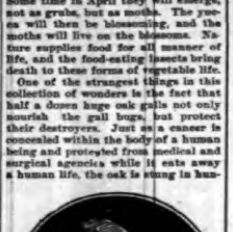
"We see death and life here together. We see insects die, and out of their death we see new life arise. The ordinary illustration of the butterfly emerging from the death form of its predecessor we see multiplied indefinitely in these studies. Here in this jar is a twig infested with little worms. They will live very soon, and out of their decayed forms will come full-fledged beetles. In this jar are several immature grasshoppers, buried in the earth. They have been there six years. Three or more will elapse, when they will come forth in the shape of full-fledged locusts of the 17-year variety.

"Naturally, we who see and study these phenomena of nature are not staggered with the statements of theologians that out of them and of man beings there will arise new forms of life. There is a very slight border line of demarkation between science and philosophy. Science ascertains facts. Philosophy asks: 'Why?' and tries to give the reason. Theology goes a little farther. But all students, all scientists, philosophers and theologians are striving for the advancement of human knowledge. And sometimes our bitter differences and controversies result in bringing forth truths which might never be developed but for the earnestness and increased energy which are let loose by violent controversy."

But to return to the jars: In one of them, which is half full of beans, there are hundreds of bean-eating bugs which will continue to live and reproduce their kind as long as the food supply is continued. In one small jelly glass there is a large Irish potato, where a lot of little flies have laid their larvae, and the potato is fairly riddled with the holes which have been made by the larvae. Another larger glass jar contains a few yucca pods. In the sand beneath them are a number of grubs which have deserted the yucca pods. Some time in April they will emerge, not as grubs, but as moths. The yucca will then be blossoming, and the moths will live on the blossoms. Nature supplies food for all manner of life, and the food-eating insects bring death to these forms of vegetable life.

One of the strangest things in this collection of wonders is the fact that half a dozen huge oak galls not only furnish the gall bugs, but protect their destroyers. Just as a cancer is concealed within the body of a human being and protected from medical and surgical agencies while it eats away a human life, the oak is stung in hundreds of places by gnat-like insects; forms over the injured parts, where eggs are deposited, odd-looking growths which protect the offspring of the gall bug until they are able to come forth, lay other eggs, and perhaps sting the very stem which fostered them.



PARASITES UNDER THE GLASS.

A microscope is required to see the wood-boring larvae. In one jar, which is partially filled with sawdust instead of sand, several pieces of bark are to be seen, completely riddled and honeycombed by wood-borers. They bury themselves in the sawdust during the winter, just as others bury themselves in the sand. When they come forth and are large enough to be seen with the naked eye, they are removed, killed and stuck on pins in boxes, according to their species, numbered and described in the scientific library of reference books. Each insect has its name on the label, and the evidences here give the full history of its development.

Dealers in large quantities of wheat and flour have lost on their investments, sometimes heavily, because flour beetles and wheat moths have destroyed their property. Here in a jelly glass containing a little wheat flour are some of the beetles at work. They are watched in their progress from egg to larvae and from larvae to beetle. The wheat moths and their larvae are seen feeding upon the stems of the wheat plant. There are also jars showing the work of root-devouring bugs. When they have eaten up the roots in their jars they come to the surface, but cannot get out. Instead they bore and cover them. They do not burrow through the ground. They eat roots destroying plant life. Then they come to the surface and travel to the nearest contiguous plant, burrow to its roots, and begin their deadly work.

Most singular of all to an uneducated observer of these singular things is the fact that upon all of these insects the microscope discloses parasites, which devour the insects themselves. Long years ago Dr. Johnson said: "Great fleas have little fleas upon their backs to bite 'em; while they, in turn, have lesser ones, and so ad infinitum."

The writer was not a great scientist, but he had some idea of what these learned students of insect life have disclosed so plainly. Cyrano de Bergerac, in the sixteenth century, wrote of some discoveries of the same kind, made by himself, in which the writers were only able to imagine that what they saw with the naked eye must be going on in the lower forms of life. There is no imagination, however, in the things which are now to be seen in the agricultural department, and in the scientific institutions of some of the great universities.

This study of parasites is distinct from the study of the insects. When it is known that certain parasites speedily destroy the insects, the parasites are cultivated and encouraged to increase and multiply. The oranges of California which have been destroyed by the fluted scale insect are now saved by the dissemination of the Australian ladybug, which preys upon the scale, but does not injure the oranges. The dark bugs of Kansas are being destroyed by the fungus which eats the chinch bug.

This is the practical part of the story. These bug students have learned which parasites will kill the bugs, and then they have sent the parasites forth on their mission in various sections of the country. Vegetation is destroyed by the insects, and the insects are destroyed by the parasites. By putting into the field big armies of parasites the insects are eaten up, and vegetation is saved from its almost invisible enemies.

These pale-faced young men and these bald-headed veterans in the science of bugology are quietly doing a whole lot of good for all of us; for the orchards and the fields, and for the dwellers in cities who depend upon the farmers for the food which sustains their lives.

THIN MATERIALS.

White and Colored Goods of the Washing Variety.

An immense quantity of wash goods will be worn during warm weather. These materials, formerly considered the acme of cool simplicity, are now made into extremely elaborate costumes, so arranged and trimmed that to really launder them is practically impossible. White is still to the fore, and gowns of the sheerest muslin are enriched with insertions and edges of motifs of lace of various kinds—white, yellow or black—or are finely embroidered. Muslin of the dotted variety is also well represented, the dots being often replaced by little bowknots or geometrical designs of some sort. Among the prettiest of the less expensive sheer goods is always the finely corded dimity, which comes in white, solid colors and figured styles.

In sephyrs and ginghams stripes are more seen than plaids, although there are many attractive designs in the latter. Embroidered galatea cloth is among the novelties, the embroidered motif being small and dotted, sometimes open.

A picture is given of a gown of cream foulard with a pompadour design. The skirt has stitched plaits at the top and is gathered at the back. A little band of galloon simulates a tunic. The back of the bodice is stretched, the front being gathered at the neck and waist. A band of galloon outlines a yoke, and galloon also decorates the top of the tight sleeves and the wrists. The collar and belt are of red satin.

PARASOLS.

Curious Designs Among the Newest Importations.

This year's parasols are, as a class, characterized by oddity rather than beauty. For example, in one variety the ribs, which in umbrellas and parasols are usually eight in number, are alternately long and short, which makes the parasol square in shape when it is open. Then there are six ribbed parasols, the ribs being so wide apart that a star shaped effect is secured.

Among parasols of the ordinary form are some which are entirely covered with little pointed tabs of silk, each tab being bound around the edge with its own or another color. These are not at all pretty, but a novelty. More attractive are parasols of white silk, large figured motifs of silk embroidery or insets of lace.

As regards handles, a great deal of jeweler's work is seen in gold, colored silver, enamel and gems of the less precious order. Nothing is pretty, however, than a natural wood handle of the finer class.

The evening gown illustrated has a tonic of plaited gauze painted with orchids and cut in points around the edge, the points being bordered with a band of pink satin. This tunic folds over a skirt of white taffeta with gauze ruffles around the foot. The bodice of plaited pointed gauze has a band of pink satin outlining the decolletage and fastening in a bow, with a buckle in the middle of the front. From this bow two other bands pass under the arms, designing a bolero. The transparent gauze sleeves are plaited and have caps bordered with pink satin.

Elevated Railway in Germany.

The railway interests of Europe, and, in fact, of all the civilized world, are interested in the electric suspension railway now in course of erection in Barmen, Prussia.

As double-railed line, 8.3 miles in length, with 18 stations, has been partly constructed in Barmen according to the single overhead railway system of the Langen patent. This is, I understand, the first suspension railway for the conveyance of passengers that has been built.

The road commences at Barmen-Rittershausen and follows the river Kupper through the thickly populated cities of Barmen and Elberfeld. Beyond Elberfeld the line extends to ward the west as far as Vohwinkel, crossing the river at Sonnborn and running over the public highway to Vohwinkel.

The marginal gradient is 4.5 per cent. All gradients and curves are so arranged as to avoid a decrease of speed in the main lines. The iron framework over the river is supported by buttress piers of ironwork inclined toward each other; but in the public highways the structure is supported by vertical iron columns, which reduce no more space than lantern posts.

The cars are suspended on two rotary bogies, 26.2 feet in length. Each truck, or bogie, has two axles, between which an electromotor of 90 horse power at 500 volts is arranged. The frame surrounds the rail carrier in such a manner that the wheels cannot rise from the rails and the cars cannot slip off in case a jetting breaks or there is some other mishap. The current is fed by a contact shoe from a rail.

The speed will be regulated in the same manner as in electric street cars.

MECHANISM OF THE ELECTRICAL SUSPENSION RAILWAY.

The traveling speed is supposed to be 25 miles per hour. It takes only from ten to fifteen seconds to start; so that, in spite of the 18 stations of the road, an average speed of 18½ miles per hour will be maintained. Each car holds 30 passengers and is divided into first and second-class and smoking compartments. The number of cars in the make-up of a train is not limited; but at first each train will consist of one or two cars only, although the station platforms are so arranged that a four-car train can receive and unload passengers. The speed of the trains is not dependent on the number of cars, as each car has its own motor.

The employment of an automatic block system, by which the car itself regulates the signals, allows the trains to start in either direction at intervals of two minutes. Braking is effected in four different ways: 1. By a Westinghouse pneumatic brake, operated by the motorman. 2. By a hand brake, working on the fittings of the Westinghouse brake, operated by motorman and guard. 3. By an electrical brake. 4. By an electrical return-current brake, serving as a distress brake.

The rails are of the Haarmann system, installed on iron-plate slippers with a layer of felt to the rail supporters. These are made in 2' section and have a curved bottom with a slight play, which allows the cars to swing easily without running off the rails.

The stations are built on the same plan as those of the American elevated railroads, with separate entrances for each platform.

The spans of the piers are very wide, owing to the difficulty of finding solid foundation on the river banks and to avoid interrupting traffic on the public road. Although the spans averages 98.4 feet, the total weight of the double-railed line over the river, including the piers, is only about 838 pounds to the foot; over the highway, 783 pounds. This makes the cost of construction from $300,000 to $325,000 per mile, including the foundations and stations. Counting the rolling stock (it is intended to start a train of one or two cars at intervals of three minutes), the cost would be about $360,000 per mile. The underground railways of London involved an expense of about $1,800,000 per mile.

The car station at the terminus in Vohwinkel has eight sets of tracks, which are connected by return switches in order to facilitate the arrangement of the cars.

The railway is about half finished, and part of it is expected to be in operation in a year.

New Railways Opened in China.

With the entire world interested in China as the present time the following information regarding the opening of new railways in the vast empire will not be out of place:

The Tientsin-Shanhaikwan-Niuchwang branch of the Chinese Imperial railway is now completed and will soon be opened to general traffic. The distance from Tientsin to Niuchwang is 348.63 English miles. The line from Tientsin to Chinchow, 296.63 English miles, over which trains have been running for some months, is said to pay 14 per cent. on the whole capital invested. It is expected that when the entire line is open the road will pay a return of 20 per cent.

The Chinese Eastern railway (Russian), which is now completed from Port Arthur as far north as Moukden, connects with Niuchwang at Ta-shi-chiao, thence to Port Arthur—distance 180 miles. Owing to the danger of running trains in China during the night, the time between Port Arthur and Peking will be about three days.

The Russians are working with feverish activity to finish the road from Moukden to Vladivostock, and it is thought that Kuropatkin's two great strategic points in the far east—Port Arthur and Vladivostock—where she is said to have garrisons variously estimated at from 120,000 to 200,000 men, will be connected by rail not later than August of this year.

Trains are now running over the Siberian railway as far east as Stretensk, on the river Shilka, a tributary of the Amur, from which place the river route must be used to arrive at Khabarovsk, at the junction of the Usuri section of the railway runs to Vladivostock, thus completing for the present the great enterprise begun in 1891 and establishing uninterrupted steam communication between western Europe and Petersburg and the extreme eastern limits of the Russian empire on the Pacific coast.

At present the schedule running time is: St. Petersburg to Lake Baikal, nine days; Lake Baikal to Stretensk, three days; by river to Khabarovsk, six days, and to Vladivostock, one day; total, 19 days.

The section of line between Stretensk and Vladivostock is now partly completed, and it is expected that the whole line will be open in about 18 months.

SCIENCE AND INVENTION.

GERMS IN OYSTERS.

Scientific Investigation Demonstrates That Sewage from Cities Poisons the Bivalves.

A scare was caused in England some years ago by the statement that oysters were active disseminators of typhoid fever. The consumption in London of what are invariably referred to in the country papers as "succulent bivalves" thereupon fell off 50 per cent. The cockney, alive to his opportunities, refused to buy oysters for his sweetheart, on the ground that they were dangerous. As oysters are very expensive in Great Britain anyhow, people were easily convinced of their unwholesomeness. The reduction in consumption caused a rapid fall in prices. It also injured the American exportation of blue points to England.

Profs. Herdman and Boyce went to live among the oysters of Lancashire, to find out if they are really so dangerous. They looked into the cause of the color of green oysters. "The green hue," they picturesquely say in their report, "is equally familiar to the man who raises them for the market, to the one who raises them from their bed with a pair of rakes, and also to him who raises them out of their own juices from the half shell by means of a silver trident. This coloring has been attributed variously to metals, vegetable coloring matter, bile pigment and the pigment of diatoms."

The investigations of the learned oyster sharps, however, yield the fact that the green color is not always due to the same cause. One variety is caused by copper. This appears true of the American green oysters. In other varieties iron is found, while a diatom, or moss, is suspected as a cause in still others. The American green oysters are frequently thin and have shrunken livers.

The contamination of oyster beds by sewage and the results of experimental feeding of oysters with matter laden with typhoid fever germs are taken up. Oysters from the vicinity of sewers contain bacteria. Those that have imbibed typhoid bacilli have in their germs which can be cultivated from them 14 days after infection.—N. Y. World.

SAFE FIRE ESCAPE.

Descent to Ground Can Be Made Comfortably, Without Exertion and Without Danger.

In the fire escape here shown the descent to the ground from a window or other egress opening can be made comfortably and without exertion. All that is necessary is to seat one's self on the bench shown, which has previously been hooked to the window ledge or other convenient point, and to grasp the two handles at the sides. Mechanism concealed in the box underneath pays out the rope from two reels or drums, which are so arranged that the rope on each side will be paid out at a uniform rate to prevent the tilting of the boxing or casing. The gripping tubes at the sides of the box, through which the ropes pass, permit the control of the rate of descent, as any pressure on them acts as a brake to prevent the ropes from being rapidly unwound from the reels or drums. The same object is also accomplished by means of the brake strap, shown as coming out of the front of the casing, and designed to be operated by the foot, which is slipped into the stirrup provided for that purpose. This interesting device is the invention of Louis N. Duquette, of Southbridge, Mass.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

How Climate Affects Brains.

In an article in the Westminster Mr. Dollar collects examples illustrating the effect of climate on the mind. Goethe could always work better during a high barometer. In July and August the secretary of the Academie des Sciences is deluged by writers of absurd projects by post, and the hotter the summer the more foolish they are. Dr. Mercier, of Zurich, finds from statistics of Swiss asylums that morbid psychical conditions or mental derangements are at a maximum in high summer, in fact which explains why most suicides occur in summer, when the curve for suicides rises to about double the height it has in December. Mr. Charles Lloyd, of the weather bureau, Illinois, recently showed that crime also attains its maximum in the hot season. Another observation of Mr. Dexter, of New York, is that a low hygrometric state of the atmosphere increases mental trouble and suicide.

CLARK OF MISSOURI.

He Would Ever Designate Him a Commonplace Man.

Even His Political Opponents Describe Him as a Man Imbued with the Earmarks of a Statesman—A Bible Student.

There are those who class Champ Clark, of Missouri, among the humorists of congress. There are others who say he combines with a sense of humor certain statesmanlike qualities which ought to give him a high position as a leader in the house. Clark himself is a good deal of a philosopher, and aspires to neither distinction as a leader nor fame as a wit. He is contented, apparently, to remain one of the most entertaining and interesting members of the lower branch of congress. When Clark first entered the house, in the Fifty-third congress, he was a great deal in evidence. He attracted attention by his originality and a flamboyant style of oratory that kept the older men in a smiles or gasping with astonishment. He was one of those of whom it was useless to make predictions, and he thrust himself upon the notice of the house on all sorts of occasions until it began to be a question whether he was to be taken at all seriously or not. Then he was defeated for reelection, and this seemed to have a sobering effect upon him. He has said that if he were to live a hundred years he would never recover from the disappointment of that defeat, the disconfiture was so severe. The man who beat him was a music-teacher, who was nominated in a tidal-wave year with no expectation of election, and who, after he got through congress, never rose above mediocrity.

When Champ Clark came back to the Fifty-fifth congress he was a different sort of a fellow, says the Washington Star. He had broadened and mellowed and had ideas on a good many subjects that commanded respect both from political friends and opponents.

For one thing he was a great admirer of Tom Reed, and never hesitated to express admiration for him, even in companies and under conditions where it was not to his personal advantage to do so. He was fascinated with Reed's force, originality and wit, and especially by the classic facility of his speech. Champ Clark professes to be a judge of congressional oratory, and he has said more than once that in his judgment Tom Reed is the best short speechmaker in the United States. At times Clark tries to pattern his own style of oartory on that of the former speaker. He is one of the men who make a practice of studying the Bible purely for literary purposes, and because he knows that nothing is more effective with a popular audience than Scripture quotations or language which carries the Biblical mark. When in the heat of debate he never spares language or hesitates for an epithet.

Champ Clark tells an interesting way how it happened that he came to be such a student of the Bible. His father was a deeply religious man, but Champ, as a boy, would have nothing to do with that sort of thing. One day, however, he happened to run across Patrick Henry's oration in the house of burgesses, beginning: "It is natural for man to indulge in the illusions of hope." One sentense in the speech especially struck the youthful fancy: "The race is not always to the swift, nor the battle to the strong." He told his father how much he liked the speech and how much he was impressed with that sentence. His father took him down by remarking: "King Solomon wrote that sentence, and if you will read the Bible you will find a great many others equally good." So just from curiosity, Champ began to read the Bible, and has kept it up ever since.

Champ Clark is 50 years of age. He was born March 7, 1850, and he looks younger than his years. He has a smoothly shaven face beaming with good humor. He is one of the most companionable men in the house.

"Pickaninny" from "Pequenos Ninos."

The etymology of the word "pickaninny" is discussed by a writer in the current number of the American Anthropologist, who says that its possible derivation was pointed out by Sir Hans Sloane in 1707 in his "History of Jamaica." "Piganinnee," said Sir Hans, "is a corruption of pequenos ninos, applied to the black or slave babies of Jamaica."

MODERN ARMY BALLOONS.

Sacks of the Intestines of Oxen Which Will Hold Gas Far Better Than Oiled Silk.

At the ballooning school of the British army at Aldershot no less than a hundred women are at times put to work making balloons. Every one of them is either the wife or daughter of a soldier. The material used for balloons is not oil silk, as was formerly the case. Instead the big intestines of oxen are employed on account of their lightness, toughness and other qualities. The pieces are not more than a foot square, and these are patched together neatly. Three or four thicknesses of "skin" are combined. To make a full sized balloon in this manner it is said that no less than 75,000 head of cattle are needed. The balloon costs about $5,000.

One great advantage of this material is that it holds the gas better than oil silk does. Heretofore the aeronaut has been greatly bothered by the leakage of his gas to such an extent that a charge could be relied upon only a day or two, or at best only two or three days, without a considerable addition to it. But it is said that a well-made balloon of the modern style will keep its charge for a month or more without sensitive diminution. Moreover, if an enemy's shot should puncture the balloon while aloft the wounds will close and the leakage will be small. A severe fire is necessary to disable the thing.

The gas for inflating an army balloon is compressed into cans or tanks, and thus carried ready made by wagons to the field. When one of these cans, or cylinders, has been carefully tested and then filled it will hold its contents for years. A wagon load of cylinders may then be hauled to the scene of action and the empty bag filled on short notice. When employed in scouting service a balloon is captive by a wire rope that is wound and unwound from a windlass. There is a separate wire from the basket to the ground for telephonic or telegraphic purposes, so that the signal officers in the balloon can communicate their observations to headquarters promptly.

turned to Indiana to devote himself for a few years to teaching. In 1869 he went to Indianapolis, engaged as bookkeeper to a wholesale dry goods house, and rapidly rose to the position of manager. Upon his removal to Anderson Mr. Durbin entered the banking business and the arena of politics at the same time, and has been very successful in both. In 1889 he became a member of the state committee and in 1896 a member of the national committee. During the war with Spain he was appointed colonel of the One Hundred and Sixty-first Indiana infantry. In the civil war he served with two different regiments of volunteers. His wife was formerly Miss Bertha McCullough, of Anderson.

THE MODE.

Fashion In Gown Skirts and Silk Petticoats.

Skirts are decidedly long, touching the ground in front and at the sides, while at the back they drag more or less. The consequence is that every woman carries her skirt in her hand in the street, which necessitates pretty and well cared for shoes. The only short skirts worn are those which are uncompromisingly short, escaping the ground by several inches.

Petticoats follow the fashions of gowns in form, but do not trail at all, even when intended for wear with a trained skirt. They are still much trimmed below the knee, but are quite plain above it and at the back of the waist are laid in a few plaits. Petticoats of the more elaborate order have insets of black or white lace, ruffles of chiffon edged with ribbon or velvet, tiny gauze ruches or ruches of finely pinked silk. Bounces of lace, and, in fact, are as richly adorned as gowns. The plainer kinds have various arrangements of plaitings and ruffles of the same material as the body of the petticoat, which is usually taffeta or a kind of silk alpaca, which is more durable.

The girl's costume pictured is of beige satin cloth, the skirt being plaited and stitched at the sides and back. It closes at the right side, the edge being scalloped and bordered with a band of brown velvet, with appliques of blue silk. The bolero and sleeves of the cloth are trimmed in the same way. The chemisette is of plaited blue silk, and the wide, plaited belt is also of blue silk. The color hat of fancy straw is decorated with beige ribbon, a beige plume and a gold buckle.

THE FASHIONS.

Skirts Show No Particularly Novel Departure.

The general shape of the skirt for the coming season is very much like that of the skirts of some time past. It is plain in front and over the hips and is laid in one or two plaits at the back. The perfectly smooth back is already out of favor, and not any of the new models show it. Below the knee the skirt expands more or less and is not stiffened. Trimming soft, clinging fabrics or folds. This effect is obtained either by having the skirt entirely plaited, with plaits left free below the knee; by adding a circular flounce or by cutting the breadths of the skirt so that they flare at the foot.

Plaited and gathered skirts are made quite separate from the bodice, which is always plain and is attached to the outside only at the waistband. To sustain the flaring edge of the outside skirt a plaited flounce or gathered ruffle of the same is placed at the foot of the lining skirt, which is preferably of silk, taffle or taffeta of the same color as the dress goods.

The cut shows two vests, to be worn under an open front bodice. The first is of electric blue peau de soie, which is fastened by pearl straps of black velvet, secured by jeweled buttons, across a plastron of finely plaited white mousseline de soie. The collar and revers are of white peau de soie, plaited and embroidered with orchids. The second vest is of plaited and stitched pink taffeta. The plaitings are arranged en tablier gulpure. Around the collar is a full ruff of white mousseline de soie, bordered with a ruche, and this is continued down each side of the plastron in points.

FLANNEL WAISTS.

Colors and Styles For the Newest Woolen Shirt Waists.

French flannels now come in every variety of color and shade, instead of being confined to a few tones of red, pink and blue, as was formerly the case. They are greatly used for shirt waists, and this is true for warm as well as cold weather, since at the seaside and mountains it is always necessary to be prepared for changes of temperature.

Embroidered flannels show a dot or a fleur-de-lis in white or black on a colored ground.

The genuine shirt waist of flannel is made without a lining and in such free full then such waists have heretofore been. Sometimes there is hardly any fullness at all at the collar, and the back is now quite plain. The sleeves also are scant, and are not always of the regulation shirt style, with a cuff perfectly plain, tight sleeves being now often preferred. The advantage of an unlined shirt waist is that it can be washed, and as some of the prettiest are of white or cream flannel this is important.

The costume illustrated is of navy blue serge. The skirt is plain in front, but stitched plaits at the side and a wattean plait at the back. The triple bolero is ornamented with cords of white cloth, and the triple pelerine is adorned in the same manner. The tight sleeves have lines of stitching. The sailor hat of white straw is trimmed with white quills and a large chou of pale blue tulle.

ORNAMENTS.

Jewelry a Fashionable Accessory to the Street Costume.

An immense amount of jewelry is now worn in the street, which is quite contrary to what has formerly been considered the best usage. The ornaments must have some apparent use, however, in order to be admirable. Brooches, clasps, buttons, belt buckles, long chains to hold the purse or lorgnette, chains for the watch and chatelaine accessories are all used, and even the buckle of the parasol or umbrella has come under the heading of jewelry. It is hardly necessary to say that large and valuable gems are not worn in the street.

Antique earrings may often be made into buttons, stickpins or hatpins and are exceedingly effective. Large, old fashioned brooches are also sometimes available, by their shape and size, for belt buckles.

A novel idea is to make buckles or brooches from antique or curious foreign coins, the plain part of the metal being cut out or else the figures alone left, inclosed in the circle of the rim.

A picture is given of a long, straight sack, exemplifying the reigning idea of plaits. The back is laid in stitched folds back and front, which are left free toward the lower edge. There is a triple yoke, or, rather, a yoke and two gulpure rims, with a single revere. The tight sleeves have two scant circular ruffles at the wrist and a stitched strap, and there is a flaring cuff. Bows tied to the ends of the collar and yoke are ornament the wrists, and all edges are stitched. The material employed is this cloth, and the lining is of satin.

ruffles and is used to outline floral designs on delicate materials and such lace has a sort of cord of satin—a small satin tube which is kept cylindrical by being made over a cord of cotton. It is very fine for ruffles of mousseline de soie and tulle and is a decided novelty among trifles.

Rather decorations of cord are much used on foulard, silk and even cotton goods.

Chenille fringes appear in many forms, groups of ten or a dozen strands falling from rosettes or bands placed at the belt or on the corsage. The strands are often very long.

The newest jacket is an absolutely tight bodice with an apology for a basque.

The illustration shows a little girl's dress of pastel blue serge. Both skirt and bodice are plaited, and the bodice has a square yoke, which, with the collar, is ornamented by vertical ruches of white satin. The bodice is bordered by a ruffle of gulpure headed by a white satin ruche. The plain sleeves have two gulpure ruffles at the wrist. The sash of white satin is tied at the back. The tulle hat of blue straw is trimmed with blue and white ribbon and a chou of blue panne with an ornamental buckle. Two black quills pass behind the chou.

FOR MATURE WOMEN.

Possibilities In the Domain of Full Evening Toilet.

To improve an effective evening toilet for a woman of years so mature that she has commenced to grow stout is always difficult, especially as many women of that age prefer to appear in such colors as black, violet, plum, green and bottle green. The great resource is extreme richness of material. Fine old lace and jewels give an impression of full dress, somewhat. An elderly woman should not select a heavy material nor heavy trimmings—they suit only youth. There is no need, however, for her to confine herself to dark colors, although for street figured silks are much finer. A woman who retains slender, or moderately slender, proportions may well wear grey or will fight color—beige, mode, tan, lavender and even white, as well as some of those soft, indefinite blues and greens which are accordingly veiled by silk or chiffon. Rose or lace over rich colors may also be worn.

The illustration depicts a costume of mauve voile. The skirt has a deep plaited flounce, which shows very high at the back and is trimmed by two wide bands of venetian guipure. The bodice is arranged at the back and front in plaits, stitched at the waist in front, applications of guipure de venise encircling the yoke and forming epaulets and plaitings. The yoke itself is plaited, and the sleeves are trimmed at the wrists with plaitings and applications of guipure. The belt is of guipure over velvet, and the toque of mauve tulle is trimmed with a wreath of tea roses.

SHIRT WAISTS.

This Bodice to Be More Worn Than Ever.

All sorts of waist materials are now made into shirt waists, although, after all, there are many thin bodices to be worn with different skirts, which are and at all the shirt waists in general appearance. For the severe regulation style plaque, plain or printed, is much used and is extremely serviceable. Then there is the white range of French nainsooks and printed percales, which are thinner, but yet substantial. Next come madras and linsley, with corded goods of various kinds, and, last, sheer batiste like lawn, muslin and nainsook.

Among the newest white waists—and white waists are legion—are those made of all over tucking, the tucking being hemstitched. Then there are the more familiar ones of material in which bands of lace alternate with bands of tucking or embroidery. The sleeves of these more elaborate bodices are usually different from the ordinary shirt style and are made rather tight, like a gown sleeve, with a flaring ruff of some sort to fall over the hand. These bodices are all tucked. They are made with a plain, full front, are mounted on a yoke or have a yoke simulated by arrangements of tucks, etc.

The last depicts a jacket of red cloth. It has a tight back and a short basque cut in square tabs. The tight sleeves have stitched darts at the shoulders and stitching ornaments the wrists and outlines the basque. The coat collar and large revers are faced with black velvet and bordered with stitching. A shirt waist is worn with a linen collar and black satin cravat. The hat of fancy straw is trimmed with straw and roses.

ACCESSORIES.

Pleasing Additions to the Fashionable Woman's Wardrobe.

Voluminous scarfs of net, mousseline de soie, crepe de chine or liberty silk are worn and are a becoming addition to almost any dress. The last, in soft, rich colors, but white or cream is usually most satisfactory.

The capuchon, like the scarf, plays an important part in summer toilets with mantel wraps. These little garments, of silk, lace and net, spangled, jetted or plain, have long scarf ends in front, shorter or plaited, terminating in ruffles, lace or fringe, while about the shoulders is some variety of the capuchon, devised with an eye to novelty and attractiveness.

The separate skirt still holds its own unassailable place in the wardrobe, because of its economy and utility. It is not appropriate for full dress occasions, but for the theater, small social functions, luncheons, etc., it is much worn. The bodice effect has entirely disappeared. The old crush of silk or taffeta is well drawn in at the waist and do not hang over the belt.

The bodice illustrated is of mauve satin. It is tight at the back and gathered at the waist in front, opening over a plastron and plaitings of cream silk covered with a latticework of narrow black velvet ribbon. The top of the mauve taffeta sleeves has a cap of white satin elaborately adorned, and there are cuffs to match. The skirt may be bordered with a fine ruche of silk, and the revers, sleeve caps and cuffs are edged in the same way. A knot of black velvet adorns the front.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms--$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

An Important Decision.

The question of constitutional law which was decided in favor of the city in the Milliken damage case is of great interest. The city had filed a special plea setting up, in substance, that the sewage beds were part of a sewage system maintained by the city under an act of the Legislature for the public good, and if Mrs. Milliken's property suffered in consequence, it was a loss that she was required to bear as a member of the community sharing in the benefits of the public improvement. Mrs. Milliken insisted on the other hand that the Legislature never meant to authorize the city to put in a sewerage system that would injure private property without compensating the injured parties; and she further insisted that the Legislature would not have the power to pass an act having the effect claimed by the city because the constitution prohibited the taking of private property for public uses without compensation, and to injure property was a taking of property within the meaning of the constitution.

The city replied that the Legislature had plainly authorized this construction of the sewerage system and that as the demurrer admitted that the system had been constructed and maintained with due care and skill, the injuries complained of were mere incidental or consequential injuries unavoidably resulting from the lawful acts of the city, and the Court of Errors and Appeals had over and over again decided that injuring property in that manner was not a taking of property, in the constitutional sense, for the public rise.

This constitutional question was decided in favor of the city.

Another constitutional question of equal importance was presented and decided. After the city had filed its plea setting up the act of 1890, under which the sewage system was constructed, the Legislature of 1899 amended the act by expressly declaring that any municipality exercising powers under the sewage act of 1890 should "be and remain liable for injuries to persons and to property in the same manner and to the same extent as if such municipality were a private corporation."

The city argued that this amendment of 1899 could not affect an alleged cause of action which accrued before the act was passed, and if the Legislature intended to give the act any such effect, the act would be unconstitutional because it would be an attempt by the Legislature of 1899 to construe a statute passed nine years before by another Legislature, and that was a judicial question, and the New Jersey Constitution after distributing the powers of government among the three departments, legislative, executive and judicial, prohibited any department from exercising any of the powers belonging to to either of the others.

This question also was decided in favor of the city, the Court holding that the amendment to the sewer act, passed after the suit was begun, could not affect the case in any way.

Clarportion Counsel Marsh regards the victory for the city on the constitutional questions as the most important one which the city has won during his term of office, with the exception of the Fire Department case and the Hatfield tax case.

Is it the Right Way?

It is creditable to New Jersey that an effort is to be made by her citizens to raise a sufficient sum of money to provide the battleship christened in honor of the name of this commonwealth with a silver service. But the manner in which the money is to be raised, as has been proposed, is causing some criticism of a severe nature. An example of it is found in the following editorial in the New York Tribune:

It is a good thing to have a new battleship. It is a good thing to call it the New Jersey. It is a good thing to present to it a fine silver service. It is a good thing to have the children of the public schools contribute spirited an appreciation of the worth and necessity of the Navy. But it is not a good thing to compel the pennies of the school children into a vast canvassing, begging and collecting agency to raise money for a present to the battleship or for any other purpose. That is the way to destroy the healthful and legitimate functions, and to the setting of a precedent which may lead to almost infinite abuse. It is complained on the one hand that subscriptions are being overdrawn, and on the other that they are being unfortunately. It is little less than criminal to make further demands upon their generosity and further reduce from their scanty pocket-money to learn by

If not, drink Grain-O--made from pure grains. A lady writes: "The first time I made Grain-O I did not like it but after using it for a few weeks I like it better than tea or coffee. It nourishes and does not injure the nerves. The children can drink it freely with great benefit. In fact we all prefer it instead of pure coffee. Cost a quarter as much." Try Grain-O. Ask for it. opposing them at work at securing which has no relation to their studies.

In the list of official papers made up by the Board of Freeholders to publish the proceedings of the county legislature during the year it is noticed that the Cranford Chronicle is omitted. There is an interesting story behind the cause for this omission, which appears to be an attempt to pay off a political grudge at the expense of the Chronicle. The Chronicle has been severely critical of the record of former Freeholder George Littell during the past year, and it is alleged that the latter determined to get even with Editor Potter. Of course, Mr. Littell's time hasn't has not been easy in the open, but it is noticed that he wears a serene and knowing smile nowadays. The inference is plain.

A quaint old proverb says: "Diligence is the mother of good success." The Philadelphia Record says: That this factually redundant apothegm is true is proven every day in the experience of leading merchants. They are and have been diligent, enterprising, persistent. All these qualities are discernible in their advertising. They advertise always, and in consequence they are blessed with "good success."

The Rochester Union and Advertiser sarcastically says: "There have been heavy frosts in New Jersey this week, but it is confidently believed that the cotopus crop, one of the great staples of that State, will be as large as usual."

CHRISTIAN AMUSEMENTS.

Dr. Yerkes Gives His Ideas in a Sermon Preached Sunday Morning.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes preached an interesting sermon Sunday morning in the First Baptist church on "Amusements," his text being "They that use the world as not abusing it." The proposed rescinding at the next conference of a disciplinary article in the creed of the Methodist church, suggested the topic, as the principle involved applies to other churches as well as the Methodist. The beneficial effects of many amusements were discussed by Rev. Dr. Yerkes who claimed that innocent recreation tended to relaxation of the tired system, invigoration of the mind and stimulus to the spiritual nerves. He claimed, however, that innocent amusements became harmful when their abuse led to injury of the powers, physical, mental or spiritual and when their excess absorbed the interest so that higher duties were neglected. Golf playing and bicycling were innocent amusements until they interfered with legitimate business and became so absorbing as to lead to violation of the sanctity of God's holy day. Dr. Yerkes said if he were a member of the Methodist Conference he would vote for the cancellation of the article in dispute on the principle that grace and not law is the controlling power of the church.

PERMANENT PAVEMENT TALK IN THE COUNCIL

Proposition to Put Down Asphalt on Park Avenue for Two Blocks.

THE MATTER NOT ACTED ON COMPLAINT AGAINST TROLLEY WORK ON ARLINGTON AVENUE.

The Plainfield Telephone Company Wants a Franchise—Will Furnish Cheap Service—Invitation From G. A. R.

Outside of the business attendant upon the granting of a wholesale liquor license to John Mortimer, at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last Monday, there were several other matters that were considered.

Mrs. Buckalew, of Fifth street, near Arlington avenue, protested against the way the trolley tracks were laid on Arlington avenue near her property, and the way the street was blocked. She protested against the laying of the tracks more to her side than on the side occupied by the schools. She also complained of the irregular way the tracks are being laid near Fifth street and Arlington avenue.

The Council received an invitation from Post No 73, G.A.R., asking them to attend the exercises in Music Hall on Memorial Day. The invitation was accepted with thanks.

The Plainfield Telephone Company, an organization incorporated under the laws of the State, and a part of the State Telephone Company, made application for the right to lay conduit, string wires, and do business in this city. They offered to lease house 'phones for $24 a year and $36 for business houses, unlimited. The application stated to what extent the company is doing business in this State, and an ordinance, together with maps, and other necessary papers were offered with the application. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Mayor Rockfellow appointed William O'Connor as special policeman, and the appointment was confirmed. The city physician made his regular report, stating that the city poor had been furnished medicine and proper treatment.

Mr. Coriell recommended that two fire-alarm boxes be located. One at the corner of West Sixth street and Lee place, and the other at the corner of Berckman and East Third streets. He said that later on the committee would recommend another box to be located at the corner of Eighth and Liberty streets.

At this time Mr. van Herwerden offered a resolution providing for the laying of a permanent pavement on Park avenue from Front street to the railroad bridge. As he did so he said that he did not want to show any discourtesy to the street committee or Mayor Rockfellow, but it was a matter that had been hanging fire for some time and he desired to bring it up so as to secure some action. The resolution provided for the laying of asphalt block pavement.

Mr. Dumont thought that in such an important matter the street committee should have an opportunity to consider the matter before action was taken. Mr. Buckle favored permanent pavement, but thought the street committee should consider the question first. Mr. Coriell opposed the resolution until after the street committee had a chance to discuss the subject. Mr. Tolles thought that inasmuch as no one had been able to agree as to what is best in permanent pavement it would be just as well to go slow and discuss the matter fully. The matter was then referred to the street committee.

After the Council gave J. Fred McDonald permission to make a few repairs about his property and add a little extension to the rear of his store, the meeting adjourned.

Eastern Honor for Mr. Bowen.

Herbert W. Bowen, United States Minister and Consul General of Teheran, Persia, has had conferred upon him by the Shah of Persia the decoration of "The Grand Cordon of the Lion and the Sun." The decoration is one of the first class and came as a surprise to Mr. Bowen. Before he can accept it, permission must be granted by Congress. Mr. Bowen is a brother of Henry E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue.

MUST ATTEND SCHOOL.

CHIEF CAMPBELL TO LOOK AFTER TRUANTS IN THE BOROUGH.

Appointment Made By Board of Education—Other Roles for Government of Schools.

A special meeting of the Borough Board of Education was held Monday night, when considerable business of importance was considered. Five bids were received from firms in Newark, New York and Boston for installing a heating and ventilating apparatus in the Somerset Street School. They were referred to the building and grounds committee, Messrs. Waring, Cooley and McGee. This committee will visit several places where these firms have installed similar apparatus and will then report at a meeting to be called by the president, when some action will be taken.

At a previous meeting Mr. Honeyman was appointed a committee of one to examine the records of the Board and formulate rules and regulations for the government of the schools. Last evening Mr. Honeyman presented his report consisting of sixty-four rules that will govern the Board of Education, principal, teachers, books and supplies, pupils, committees, medical inspectors, truant officer, census enumerator, commencement, etc. This is the first time a complete set of rules have been provided for the government of the schools.

One of the most important rules is that governing compulsory attendance at school, and which provide for the truant officer. The rules, which agree with the State law, provide that children between the ages of 7 and 15 years, in good health, must attend school unless some good and sufficient reason is presented to the Board of Education. It shall be the duty of the truant officer to hunt children and take them to the school teacher or parents, and the latter are to be warned regularly as to the law. The law also provides that children may be taken before a Justice of the Peace or the Board of Education.

Chief Marshall Campbell, of the borough, was appointed truant officer by the Board and his duties will commence at once. It will be to the advantage of both parent and the school, as well as the children, if the parents co-operate with the truant officer and the Board in enforcing this law.

Grain-O.

Westfield, Mass., Nov. 27, 1899.
The Genesee Pure Food Co.,
LeRoy, N. Y.:

Gentlemen — Having used your Grain-O for the past three months I thought I would write and let you know how much good it has done me. When I was away on my vacation last summer the people I visited asked me to try some Grain-O, and I drank some, but I didn't like it at all, but the more I drank it the better I liked it, and now I wouldn't drink anything else. I never weighed over 100 pounds and last winter I was down to 103 pounds, and now I weigh just 130, and I never felt better in my life. It gives me an awful appetite, and makes me strong. It is doing me more good than anything I ever took, and I would recommend it to everybody.

Yours truly,
Mrs. Geo. R. Brown.

Wants Service to End by 9 o'Clock.

Rev. E. E. Jackson, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, makes an appeal to the citizens and friends who employ colored help, and members of his church, to allow them to arrange their work and be able to attend services Sunday at 7:45 o'clock. The church has adopted a rule not to continue the services later than 9 o'clock Sunday evenings. This is an advantage to the employer, employe and the church, as the employer desires his help in at 10 o'clock sharp.

MORTIMER GRANTED WHOLESALE LICENSE

Seven Councilmen Voted in Favor of the Application on Final Action.

REASON FOR DOING SO.

COUNCILMAN STRONGLY OPPOSED TO FAVORABLE ACTION.

Messrs. Dumont, VanHerwerden, Mellick and Craig Voted Against Re-Applicant Does Not Need to be a Citizen.

As was to be expected John Mortimer would be granted a wholesale liquor license by the Common Council at the adjourned meeting held last Monday. But the license was not granted without a strong remonstrance on the part of the opposition. All the members were present except Mr. Clifton. Messrs. Dumont, Mellick, VanHerwerden and Craig voted against the application, while Messrs. Buckle, Tolles, Gloak, Lee, Smith and Coriell voted for it.

Mr. Gloak introduced the application, and said by way of explanation that he had interviewed Corporation Counsel Marsh and he could find no law that compelled a man to be a citizen of the United States to secure a license. He therefore moved that the application be granted.

Mr. Dumont asked Mr. Gloak if the purpose for which the license had been laid over, that of learning whether Mr. Mortimer was a citizen, had been accomplished. Mr. Gloak replied that he could not say as he did not make any effort to find out. President Smith replied in the same manner, saying that he did not know, but that Mr. Marsh told him it made no difference.

Mr. Dumont then took a stand against the granting of the license. He did not like the general appearance of things in connection with the request for it. He said that the same signers were on this application that appeared on the one offered by Scheuer & Son, and the same parties represent both parties. He felt sure there was a man behind the license that the Council did not know about. He also referred to the protests from the many business men and property-owners against the granting of the license, all of whom claim that a liquor business on Park avenue will depreciate the value of property. He said there are other parties in the wholesale business, and he always understood that saloons did more or less wholesale business. Mr. Dumont refered to a general understanding among the members that no new licenses would be granted during the year, and he thought the Council could very well afford to stop and not grant any new licenses.

Mr. Coriell said that he opposed the application of Scheuer & Son, because a grocery was mixed with it, and he was against that. He was sure that Scheuer & Son and Schloss are not interested in the application made by Mr. Mortimer, and therefore favored it.

Regarding the question of signers to an application Mr. Coriell stated that it is never possible to get a good class of people to sign an application, and the petitioners were obliged practically to buy signers before the Council did away with that part of it. He said that the better class of people will not sign an application unless it is for the Netherwood Hotel, but still he saw no good reason why this application should not be granted. A wholesale place is not as bad as a saloon, and Mr. Mortimer comes highly recommended.

Mr. Buckle said that in many respects he agreed with Mr. Dumont, but he thought it well to establish a precedent to grant all licenses at a stated time, and then refuse all others for the year. He was sure that Scheuer & Co. were not behind this application, else he would oppose. He said that a majority of the inns and taverns are run on other people's capital, and as there is only one wholesale place in the city he felt constrained to vote for Mortimer's application.

Mr. Gloak said he wouldn't vote for Mortimer's application if he thought Scheuer & Co. were behind it, but he believed they were not and he would vote for it.

The Council then gave W. A. Coddington, counsel for the objectors, an opportunity to state his legal objections to the application. The first was that Mortimer is not a citizen, and the second objection was that Marcus Feibert, one of the signers to the application, is not a citizen of the United States, nor a voter when he signed the application; neither was he a resident of the Fourth ward at that time. In the third place Mr. Coddington objected because several of the signers to this application had signed other applications similar. He gave great force to his arguments and under most circumstances would have gained his point.

The vote was then taken and resulted as above stated. After the vote Mr. Dumont requested that the City Clerk secure the full fee from Mr. Mortimer from March 1st.

DEATH OF E. C. MULFORD

OLDEST REAL ESTATE BROKER IN THIS CITY.

Also Oldest Past Master in Free Masonry in Plainfield—Born Near Somerville.

Edward C. Mulford, the oldest real estate broker in this city, and the oldest Past Master in Free Masonry in Plainfield, died Sunday morning at 2 o'clock at his home on East Fifth street, after an illness covering a period of four years, two of which were passed at home unable to attend to business. Occasionally he would gain sufficient strength to take a short drive, but improvement was only temporary. The best of medical skill was employed and everything possible was done to restore him to health and strength. Mr. Mulford's death was due to a general complication of disease and his age, 66 years, was against recovery.

Mr. Mulford was born near Somerville, and early in life engaged with his father in the building business. Before the Civil War the family moved to this city, and then Mr. Mulford succeeded his father in the business which he continued for about twenty-five years, assisted by his father, whose advanced age would not permit him to take the management of it. Mr. Mulford lived in Plainfield about forty years, and after giving up the building business he engaged in the real estate and insurance business. His first office was located in the north end of the North Avenue Station, where he remained for six years. He then occupied a small building on North Avenue for a short time. Soon afterward he erected the building on North avenue which he has been occupying for many years. He was associated in business during the past seventeen years with his son, Armstrong Mulford, who is now in charge of it.

Mr. Mulford was a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No 26, F. and A. M., of which he was a Past Master. For several terms he was a member of the Common Council and for number of years was a Commissioner of Appeal. When the war broke out he enlisted in Co [illegible]th N. J. Vols., which was formed at Flemington, and served full time, nine months, being honorably discharged. He never associated himself with the Grand Army of the Republic. When a young man he joined the First M. E. church, and was a faithful member, being regular in attendance up to two years ago.

Although his family was prepared for the worst his death was sudden. He had been sitting on the edge of his bed, and soon after lying down he expired. Members of the family called to him, but there was no response.

A wife, four daughters, Mrs. John M. Lewis, Mrs. F. S. Cutter, Miss May Mulford and Miss Carrie Mulford and one son, Armstrong Mulford, survive Mr. Mulford.

IT WAS SLOW BUT SURE

REMARKABLE WAY OF SENDING IN ALARM OF FIRE.

Discovered the Blaze and Then Wrote a Note and Sent it to Chief by Little Girl.

The bathroom in the residence of Mrs. C. R. Hope, corner of East Fifth street and Franklin place, caught fire Monday afternoon shortly before 4 o'clock from a defective flue. Mrs. Hope sat down and wrote a note to Chief Doane of the fire department, notifying him of the trouble. The note was taken to fire headquarters by Mrs. Hope's little daughter.

When the note arrived Chief Doane had gone home to dinner. Driver James Bailey said that he would give the note to the Chief or would telephone if it was important. The messenger said it was very important and wanted Bailey to read the letter himself.

It was only after the little girl said that it was of the utmost importance that the contents of the letter should be read that Bailey consented to open it. As soon as he discovered the nature of the contents, the Chief was notified and the chemical engine and No. 2 hose wagon were dispatched.

The fire was rapidly getting another headway when the firemen arrived and soon had the flames extinguished. The damage is slight and is covered by insurance. Mrs. Hope had just moved in to the house yesterday and an iron pipe flue had rusted away so that the flames from the kitchen range set fire to the lathing in the bath room.

It Will Be Given at the Hotel Kensington Next Saturday Evening.

PROMINENT MEN AS GUESTS

CONGRESSMAN SULZER AND STATE CHAIRMAN GOURLEY COMING.

The Aim Will be to Provide Pleasant Social Time for Guests and to Promote Party Ideas and Candidates.

For several days past there has been a movement on foot among a number of local Democrats to arrange for a big Democratic dinner to be given at the Hotel Kensington, and Thursday a meeting of several of those interested was held and the consummation of the idea undertaken.

The date of dinner has been fixed for Saturday evening, May 19th. It will be held in the dining halls of the Hotel Kensington, and will be the best function of its kind ever held in the city. The purpose of the affair will be to provide a pleasant social time for the local Democrats and their guests and to incidentally aid in the promotion of Democratic principles and Democratic candidates in the approaching campaign.

Several prominent Democrats will be present as guests of honor and to respond to appropriate toasts. Congressman Sulzer, of New York, Congressman Daly, of Hudson county, William B. Gourley, chairman of the Democratic State committee, Former Congressman Johnson, Sheriff Warren county, Charles T. Atkinson, of Camden, Mayor James Seymour, of Newark, Assemblyman Allan Benny, of Bayonne, Mayor Hoos, of Jersey City, and several other well-known Democratic leaders will be present. Congressmen Sulzer and Daly and State Chairman Gourley have already positively promised to be in attendance at the banquet.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Charles W. Smith Waived Examination on Charge of Stealing Brass.

Charles W. Smith, of West Fourth street, who was arrested Friday noon on the charge of stealing brass from the Scott Press Works, was brought before Justice Nash and waived examination. He was held in $100 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Smith, who is a foreman in Scotts, is accused of taking the brass and selling it to Krystal Sacher, a junkman, who became suspicious that it was stolen property and made investigations.

It was identified by Fred Viewig, of the Scott works, who made the complaint before Justice Nash. Smith sold 106 pounds of it for 10 cents a pound. The brass is valued at $30.

Played Progressive Euchre.

A pleasant affair of last Friday was the progressive euchre party given at the Park Avenue Hotel under the direction of Manager John D. Bailey. There were six tables and the contestants thoroughly enjoyed themselves contesting for honors. The first prize for the women, a handsome painting, was won by Mrs. A. M. Schofield, and the second ladies' prize, a manicure set, was presented to Mrs. S. B. Carson. For the gentlemen F. A. Whitlock won first prize, a silver-headed umbrella, and the second prize for the men, a set of military brushes, was given to Ned Simpson. Mrs. F. A. Whitlock and John D. Bailey, who played together, were the for the consolation prize, a sofa pillow, and Mr. Bailey withdrew in favor of his partner.

After Pedestrs.

The police about the city are after the many peddlers who come to town and sell without a license. The storekeepers have complained about the practice and they believe that they are entitled to some protection from this class of people, who go about disposing of their wares without paying anything for the privilege.

Only a Joke.

A man living near Warrenville complained Thursday night to the borough marshals that his wheel had been stolen from Nelson's Hotel at Washingtonville. A search was made for the missing bike, but as it was returned to the owner Friday, no further efforts were necessary. The wheel was taken for a joke.

Seventh Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Moses Schloss, of West Front street, celebrated the seventh anniversary of their marriage Thursday evening. A number of out-of-town relatives and friends were present to join in the festivities of the occasion.

RIFLES FOR THE CADETS.

BOARD OF EDUCATION HAS PURCHASED SOME LIGHT ARMS.

Some Boys to Carry Battalion of the High School Are Too Small to Carry Regulation Arms.

The cadet battalion of the Plainfield High School is fast rounding into shape under the instruction of A. B. Meredith, of the faculty. The boys have been drilling regularly every Friday afternoon and have now learned the ordinary movements and are able to go through them with precision. Most of the boys are uniformed. All that is now needed to prepare them for the exhibition drill next month is instruction in the manual of arms.

The obstacle in the way of instruction in the manual of arms has heretofore been the lack of arms. The High School possesses forty Springfield rifles that were used by the old cadet company. There are ninety boys in the battalion at present and some of them are entirely too small to carry a regulation rifle.

The matter was brought up during the executive session of the Board of Education meeting and discussed. The Board finally decided to appropriate the amount necessary to purchase thirty light rifles for the smaller boys. The new rifles will weigh about four pounds each. Then it is intended to secure if possible twenty more of the regulation rifles from the State which supplied the first lot. It will then be possible to arm and equip the entire corps.

The new rifles will be purchased at once and requisition made on the State authorities as soon as possible. It is hoped that the arms will be on hand ready for use before the month is up so that there will be time for some practice with them before the exhibition drill.

WORK OF THE WOMEN.

Annual Missionary Sociable Held in the Congregational Church Friday Night.

A summary of the work for the year of the Women's Association of the Congregational church was presented by Mrs. W. B. Wadsworth, president of the association, at the annual missionary sociable of the association held in the church last Friday. There was a large attendance.

The meeting opened with a violin solo by P. Ludwig Conde. A quartette, composed of Miss Katherine Dwight, Miss M. G. Morse, Mrs. Charles Steiner and Miss Julia M. Belknap, sang "Something for Thee." The report of the association's work was presented by Mrs. Wadsworth. It showed an increase in membership. The receipts for the year were $289.54, and the disbursements $221.09. She told of the successful work of the association and of many satisfactory meetings held during the year.

Miss Emerson, one of the secretaries of the American Missionary Association, gave an address on the work of the A. M. A. Schools established in Porto Rico since the war. She gave some interesting facts concerning the schools and missions and the success with which they had been established. After a collection and another solo by Mr. Conde the audience was invited into the parlors where refreshments were served by a committee from the association and a social hour enjoyed.

CROPS IN NEW JERSEY.

Weather Conditions During the Past Week Were Very Favorable.

The Department of Agriculture in New Jersey reports for the week ending May 7th, that the weather conditions have been favorable for farming operations. Plowing for corn is nearing the finish and much ground is now ready for planting.

The gentle showers which fell on the 3d, 4th and 5th were of much benefit to all vegetation, but generally insufficient for present needs, especially in the southern section, where early vegetables have been somewhat retarded for the want of it.

During the week wheat, rye and young grass have improved. In some field in the southern and central sections, rye is beginning to head. Orchard fruits, except apples in scattered places, are full of bloom; peaches are very promising.

The temperature was above the average during the first four, and below it during the last three days. Heavy frost occurred in the central and northern sections on the mornings of the 5th and 6th, but no serious injury was reported. The rainfall was generally sufficient, especially in the southern section.

Entered Twenty-seven Derbies.

Messrs. Krueger, sons of Gottfreid Krueger, the Newark brewer, accompanied by fourteen men, employes at the brewery, came to Plainfield Friday and were the guests in the afternoon and evening of Henry Windham, proprietor of the Waldorf Hotel, East Front street. What might be termed "hazing" was indulged in and as a result twenty-seven new derby hats had to be purchased before the guests returned home. Some had the crowns torn and cut out, others were jumped on, while others were soaked with glitter water.

STRUGGLE FOR PERSIA.

Russia Is Said to Plan the Annexation of the Shah's Dominion at an Early Date.

While England is busy in South Africa Russia, it is reported, is getting ready to annex Persia, for the control of which, in one way or another, the great nations of Europe have been struggling for years. Whether the shah, who is the most absolute monarch now reigning, would peacefully consent to annexation is extremely doubtful. He has an army of more than 100,000 men, who have been drilled for years by officers of different European nationalities. And even if the question of India were not involved, it is certain that Great Britain would resist to the utmost the consummation of the plan ascribed to the czar. Including the Imperial Persian bank, which is an English corporation, the English investments in Persia, which include all the iron, copper, coal, lead and other mines in the country, amount to many millions of pounds sterling. The oil, steamboat line in Persia and the principal telegraph lines are also under English control. The shah, who has absolute control over the lives and property of his subjects, has a private fortune of $30,000,000, much of which is invested in diamonds and other precious stones. At present he enjoys a revenue from the state of nearly $1,000,000 a year, though, as his wives number several hundred, this allowance is not so extravagant as it might seem.

WASHINGTON STATUE.

To Be Erected in the Place d'Iena, at Paris, by a Number of American Women.

Paris will receive in a few months, as a gift from a society of American women, a beautiful statue of Washington, for which a prominent site has already been selected. The statue is the work of Daniel C. French and E. C. Potter, and was ordered by the Association of American Women for the Presentation of a Statue of Washington to France. The work of the sculptors has been completed, and the casting is now being done by the Henry-Bonnard Bronze company, New York. When completed the statue will be 15 feet high from the top of the base to the top of the head, but the arm and the uplifted sword extend six feet higher, making the work from the lowerline of the base to the sword top about 22 feet.

It shows Washington in full dress uniform, mounted on a fine charger.

(Head and Torso of Monument to Be Erected at Paris.)

He holds his sword high over his head in his right hand, dedicating it to the service of his country, while the left hand grasps the bridle of the horse, which is impatient and anxious to move, but stands obedient to the master rider. The face was modeled after the bust by Houdon and other recognized portraits of Gen. Washington.

When the statue is completed it will be erected in the Place d'Iena on a pedestal which has been designed by McKim, Mead & White.

A Suggestion to Farmers.

Director of the Census Merriam suggests to the agriculturists of the country that they use some of their spare time between now and June next in thoroughly preparing themselves to answer intelligently the various questions relative to the acreage, quantity and value of crops; the quantity and value of all farm products, animal and vegetable; the cost of fertilizers and farm labor, and, in fact, all the items of farm operations for the calendar year 1899, which the census enumerators are by law compelled to ascertain. This, he says, will result in a full and accurate census.

Sponges Made to Order.

Artificial sponges are now made in Germany from a mixture of pure collodion with zinc chloride and sodium chloride. These sponges will absorb water in the same way as the genuine article, and when allowed to dry they become just as firm in substance.

A Common Excuse for Neglect of Household Responsibilities That Is Reprehensible.

Lack of time has become an almost universal excuse. The world suffers from duties left undone because time to do them could not be found, or we thought it could not. There is not one among us who does not know of many things which we wanted to do—which we know we ought to have been done—but which were neglected because of lack of time. We dash through life without a blush, not stopping to think that we have all the time God meant we should have, and that it is quite sufficient, if properly employed, for all He meant we should do.

It would be impossible to estimate the good that would result if all the wasted moments could be gathered up and devoted to some useful purpose. If compelled to give an accurate account of our time, how much of it do you suppose we should each be obliged to enter under the head "Wasted"?

"Not one moment," we hastily reply, driven almost to desperation by the torturing pains of our overworked bodies; "we are killing ourselves by inches in the vain attempt to do the work that has been set before us."

We believe what we say, and do not see that a large part of the work that is killing us consists of self-imposed tasks that are of no consequence, because they do not add to the comfort or happiness of ourselves or anyone else. We are suffering needlessly from wasted energy and wasted time, and although we crave pity, we deserve censure.

It is not lack of time that renders our lives either comparatively useless or a maddening round of important duties, so much as a lack of knowledge of the proper use of time. It is usually considered commendable to have work at hand which may be picked up and done in the odd minutes, but it is quite as likely to be reprehensible. It depends upon the work, and the necessity there is for that particular woman to do it at all, and whether something of greater importance might not be done instead. The woman does wrong who overworks herself to complete a task not absolutely essential to the welfare of someone dependent upon her. She does wrong when she takes up work that her children could and should do. She does wrong when she does work she is abundantly able to hire done, and that many poorer women need and could do as well. She does wrong when, at a risk to her life and health, she insists upon accomplishing any task, no matter how important it may be, except to save the life of another.

A woman is very foolish who draws too heavily upon her reserve force. She is not excusable because ignorant, for in these days any woman of average intelligence can learn the laws of her own physical condition, and know just how much she can do with safety. She will then plan her work according to her strength, discarding all that her good judgment tells her is not worth doing. She will remember that unless her life is lived to some purpose, someone must suffer the consequences; that there is a certain amount of the world's work belonging to her, and that someone else must do what she neglects.—Housekeeper.

HOMEMADE DRESSING TABLE.

A Dainty and Useful Piece of Furniture Constructed Out of a Packing Box.

A young student, having a slender purse and some ingenuity, constructed a pretty dressing table out of a large packing box. She lined the box with pink cambric, pink being her favorite color, tacking it smoothly on the four sides and the bottom. The outside was covered in the same way, creeping the side that was intended to rest upon the floor.

At the height of the box from the floor a square of pink cambric the same size as the length of the box was fastened neatly on the wall. In the middle of the square a mirror was hung, whose shabby frame was concealed by a binding of the cambric. White Swiss muslin, four times the square in length, was then tacked around the square, and the fullness of the under drawn to make a puffing over the mirror frame. A bunching of narrow pink ribbon gave a tasteful finish to the plain edge of the muslin.

A plaited ruffle of the muslin, reaching to the floor, was tacked around the ends of the box, whose uncovered top had become the front, the bottom being placed against the wall. A separate curtain of muslin over pink cambric was arranged across the front, thus leaving the box freely accessible to hold many small articles. The top was covered smoothly, and a narrow ribbon reaching fastened around the edge, with tiny tacks hidden in the fullness.

A shelf which had been the student procured four strips of pink enameled molding, four feet long, two strips each the length of the table and two as long as the width. The four-foot strips she tacked upright on the four corners of the box, and connected them at the top by the other pieces, thus making a light but sufficiently firm frame, on which she fastened a "roof" of muslin-covered cambric, arranged as both ends far enough to reach the floor. These long ends were taken softly back to the back corners of the table, and there caught under large pink bows. Narrow pink ribbon ruching edged the top of the little canopy, and the bottom was sewed to cover the unexamelled side of the molding, which was turned outward.

If one did not wish to hang the mirror flatly against the wall, the muslin's fullness might be drawn to a central point and fastened under a rosette of ribbon or cambric. The mirror then could be draped and hung separately.—N. Y. Tribune.

GERHART HAUPTMANN.

Famous German Dramatist and His Work Discredited by Emperor William's Veto.

Gerhart Haptmann, the German dramatist, has just experienced a combination of good and bad fortune that is likely to deepen his pessimism. His play, "The Sunken Bell," has been awarded the Schiller prize at Berlin, the great literary distinction bestowed every three years upon the author of the best drama produced in that period. Unfortunately for the dramatist, Emperor William has refused to sanction the award, and the prize is expected to go to some less gifted author who has put more patriotism and less art into his work. Three years ago the emperor also withheld his sanction from the verdict of the jurors and gave the Schiller prize to a mediocre poet, who had won the royal favor by dramatizing Prussian and Hohenzollern history.

Whether the emperor's judgment will be regarded as better than that of the jurors is likely to depend upon one's taste for Hauptmann's style of drama. "The Sunken Bell" is an excellent piece of symbolism, with much genuine poetry in its lines, but as once mystical and pessimistic Heinrich, the bellmaker, casts a bell which he considers so perfect that it is worthy to stand upon the highest mountain top. When he attempts to take it thither the wood sprites throw it down, and it nearly crushes him as it rolls down the mountain side into a lake and disappears forever.

The rest of Heinrich's life is spent in the vain attempt to cast in another more perfect bell. He breaks with the creeds, theories and superstitions of society to pursue his ideal. He ignores love and all the ties of human nature. His life is a protest against the conventions of the church and the home. Yet in breaking with these he misses the good of life as well as the bad, and finally ends his quest for the ideal in suicide.

As many meanings may be put upon the play as there are persons to interpret it, but its mysticism and essential gloominess are no more to be decried than its literary and dramatic merit. As a drama its sequence of action is perfect, Hauptmann's skill and artistic power are beyond question. He is the most famous German dramatist of the day. His experience in being denied the high honor of the Schiller prize after seeing it so nearly within his grasp is not likely to make him any less pessimistic. Heinrich's lost bell, sunk in the dark mountain lake, becomes symbolic in a new sense for the dramatist.

GRAVE-FILLING DEVICE.

It Conceals as Far as Possible the Actual Throwing of Dirt Upon the Coffin.

A device for use in constructing graves, the invention of Henry D. Cameron, of Burlington, Ia., described in the Cincinnati Commercial, is designed to fill the grave with earth after the coffin has been lowered, and to conceal as far as possible the actual throwing of the dirt upon the coffin, the most trying termination of the grave ceremony to the bereaved mourners. It consists of a receptacle, with detachable sides and ends, which is placed in the latter so arranged as to be capable of being opened to allow the contents to fall. The front is a flexible curtain, extending from the top to the grave, and designed to prevent the earth within from being seen. This receptacle is filled with earth previous to the ceremony and carried to a convenient point. When all is over and the grave is to be filled, the receptacle is placed over it, and the gates opened, thus greatly closing the last and scene in a much more fitting manner than the seemingly cold-blooded return of the earth with a spade.

UNIQUE WAY OF INTRODUCING MARCONNIER MEMBERS TO TRINITY.

Reception Held in the Church and a Most Pleasant Time was Enjoyed.

A pleasant event was held at Trinity Reformed church last Friday when the Senior Christian Endeavor Society of the church gave a reception to the members of Marconnier chapel, recently adopted as a branch of Trinity church. The affair was arranged for the purpose of making it possible for all to become better acquainted.

There were about thirty-five members from Marconnier chapel present, including a bright little tot, six months old, who was the centre of much attraction. Superintendent E. W. Marshall, who has charge of the mission at the chapel, and Miss Martin, assisted by E. E. Anthony, looked after the visitors and made them heartily welcome. The evening was passed pleasantly in playing games and having a genuine social time.

A novel means of introduction was introduced. Red and white tags were provided. On each tag was written the name of the holder. The home members wore the white tags and the visitors the red ones. Instead of persons going about and introducing each other, the tags answered that purpose. In this way everyone became acquainted with very little effort, and the company formed themselves into one large family. Toward the latter part of the evening refreshments were served by the committee, and while this part was being enjoyed a greater opportunity for sociability was afforded.

The members from Marconnier were delighted with the cordial reception extended and expressed many thanks for the enjoyable time given. The social committee who had the affair in charge and who deserve the credit for its arrangement consisted of Miss Edith DuBois, chairman; Mrs. E. E. Anthony, Mrs. Bertha Richards, Miss Ella Fenner, Miss Viola Huff, Miss Bessie Martin.

THE OLD THE NEW.

As a Result of the Annual Meeting of the Jersey Central the Officers Are Chosen.

Shareholders of the Central Railroad of New Jersey held their annual meeting in Jersey City Friday also. There was a full representation of the stock and no opposition was raised to the re-election of the old board of directors as follows: George F. Baker, Harris C. Fahnestock, James A. Garland, Henry Graves, Charles Lanier, Henry W. Maxwell, J. Rogers Maxwell, Samuel Sloan, Frederick G. Bourne. Executive officers will remain unchanged with George F. Baker as chairman of the board, J. Rogers Maxwell, president; C. H. Warren, first vice-president, and S. M. Williams, second vice-president. The annual report, which was published early in the year, was submitted by President Maxwell and approved.

Arranging for Bicycle Runs.

The bicycling division of the Y. M. C. A. met last evening and arranged for the summer runs. They will be conducted very much the same as last year, one being held every second Thursday to some other association or point of interest. Berry Eagan was elected captain and the office of secretary and treasurer held by Lewis Van Alstyne was left the same.

TO LOSE "HELLO" GIRLS.

Men Are Now Taking the Places of Young Women at Paris Telephone Switchboards.

As the French public complained of the poor telephone service the minister of posts and telegraphs has begun the experiment of replacing the girls by men at one of the principal "centrals" of Paris. His newspaper statement announcing the change confesses that all beseeching and disciplinary measures have been powerless to induce the girls from chattering among themselves instead of devoting their sole attention to connecting subscribers. Men are expected to be more reasonable.

Fishing for Wheat.

Fishing for wheat has been a new industry in Portland harbor of late, says the Portland (Me.) News. Hundreds and hundreds of bushels of wheat dropped overboard from the Californian, and the chilly shore people have been scooping it up from the bottom in very paying quantities. Twenty-cents a bushel has been the prevailing price, and one man has cleared $70, with the harvest still continuing.

The Proverb Did Not Apply.

The little girl stood on the street corner sobbing as if her heart would break. On the stone flagging were the bits of a broken pitcher. "There, there, little girl," said the benevolent man, "don't cry; don't cry, little girl; 'never cry over spilt milk.'" "But it isn't milk," sobbed the girl; "it's beer."

STATE CLUBWOMEN MET AT CRANFORD.

Many Delegates Attended the Spring Session of the New Jersey Federation.

PETITION TO GOVERNOR

FEDERATION WANT TWO WOMEN ON PALISADE COMMISSION.

"Marion Harland" Says That Clubwomen Make the Best of Home Makers, as It Gives Them a Wider Outlook Upon Life.

One of the pleasantest and most successful meetings ever held by the New Jersey State Federation of Woman's Clubs was that which took place in Cranford Thursday afternoon. The clubs under whose auspices the meeting was held were the Wednesday Morning Club and the Village Improvement Association. The gathering was the fifth semi-annual meeting of the Federation, and was held in the First Presbyterian church, on Union avenue. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and potted plants, and the delegates and visitors crowded it to the doors.

The session began about 2 o'clock with an organ voluntary by Bauman Lowe, organist of St. John's church, Elizabeth. After prayer by Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, the address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. Edmund B. Horton, first vice-president of the Wednesday Morning Club, in a very graceful manner, and warmly responded to by Mrs. Emily Williamson, of Elizabeth, the president of the Federation.

One matter that awakened much interest was an account of what the New Jersey women have done for the saving of the Palisades, and a telegram was sent to Governor Voorhees petitioning for the appointment of two women on the Commission having charge of the matter.

W. N. Barlow, of Cranford, a solo cornetist, played "Twi Palms" with much skill and expression, after which came the first address of the afternoon, "The Clubwoman as a Home-Maker," by Mrs. E. P. Terhune, known and loved by American women as "Marion Harland." She held the opinion that clubwomen made the best of home-makers, as they learned to do things systematically, got a change from home worries, and had a wider outlook upon life.

After a solo by Miss Gaddes Mac Howell, of Plainfield, separated address from the following one which was by Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, on "The Poetry of Daily Life." Mrs. Sangster said that the poet of daily life was one who makes the best out of the material on hand; who understands the beautification of daily life. She strongly advocated this sort of poetical talent, believing that one should be as happy as possible, and make others happy as well.

After the address by Miss Blake, the Federation adjourned to the beautiful Casino on Riverside avenue, where a tea and social hour was held. The rooms were charmingly decorated with wild flowers, and the officers of the entertaining clubs received the guests. Dainty refreshments were served, and a musical programme was rendered.

Among the Plainfield women who were present were Mrs. Stephen B. Krom, Mrs. J. W. Yates, Miss Constance B. Yates, Mrs. John M. Wilson, Mrs. J. E. Morse, Mrs. Horace Kimball, Mrs. Halloway, Mrs. Israel C. Pierson.

THE BREAK FOUND.

Seat of Trouble in Borough Fire Alarm System Was Located Friday Afternoon.

The trouble with the borough fire alarm system was found Friday afternoon by Lineman Herbert Cumberlain, of the local telephone company, who was engaged to locate the difficulty if possible. The break was discovered on the fire-alarm pole which holds box 132 and which is located on the corner opposite Dr. Cooley's residence, corner Westervelt and Manning avenues. It was in the wire running from the top of the pole to the box. The wire was broken, but the insulation held it together. The wind swayed the pole, causing the two broken ends to touch frequently and thereby cause the fire bell to ring.

The work for the trouble was a tedious one, as every box had to be tested and nearly every pole was ascended to examine the wires. The system is now all right and is in first-class working order.

CLAIM TITLE TO A VAST ESTATE.

Daniel Noe's Descendants Believe They Own 4,000 Acres in Middlesex County.

HUNT FOR MISSING PAPERS.

VILLAGE OF MENLO PARK AND SURROUNDING PROPERTY INVOLVED.

If the Necessary Deeds and Leases Are Discovered Ejectment Suits Will Be Started Against Occupants of Land.

Just as soon as some important and necessary papers known to be in existence, but missing at present, are discovered and secured, there will be trouble in the vicinity of Menlo Park, for there will be instituted a number of ejectment suits, involving the title to about 4,000 acres of land between Oak Tree and the old Essex highway, in Middlesex county, including the entire village of Menlo Park. But those papers are still missing, and the present owners and occupants of the land are sitting tight and not worrying, although Mrs. A. J. Foote; her brother, Mrr. Phoebe Noe; her brother, Frank Bush, the well-known comedian and Hebrew impersonator, and a number of other relatives declare that they own the land by virtue of a title in which an ancient grant, later purchases and a long term lease figure vaguely and confusedly.

The grant and the lease are among the important papers upon whose discovery depends the beginning of the suits of ejectment. Briefly stated, the claim is that the Noes, Foots, Bushes et als. are the real owners of the land by virtue of an ancient grant from Lords Berkeley and Cateret to Daniel Noe. Actual title to a large part of the land was held unquestionably by the descendants of Daniel Noe until toward the end of the eighteenth century, when a ninety-nine year lease was granted an English syndicate, formed for the purpose of mining copper near where Menlo Park now is located.

That Noes came to this country about 1676 from France. They were French Huguenots, and there were four brothers—Daniel, Peter, John and James. Of James' fate little or nothing is known. Of the others, Peter settled on Staten Island, John on the Jersey shore where Carteret is now located and Daniel farther inland, near what is now Metuchen. It is from Daniel that Mrs. Foot is descended By purchase and grant from the original grantees, Lords Berkeley and Carteret, Daniel secured a possession of many thousands of acres of land in the vicinity of the place where he settled. This was divided among his children and subdivided, but one tract of several thousand acres remained intract and descended to Amos Noe, the grandfather of Mrs. Phoebe Bush, or Noe, as she is now known, the mother of Mrs. Foot and Frank Bush. Amos Noe, about 1790, leased this tract of land to an English syndicate.

After the syndicate abandoned the mine property it was squatted upon, portions were transfered and sold, until all title to the original tract seems clouded, but Mrs. Foot claims that the lease prevented a legal transfer of the title, and that it also suspended the action of the New Jersey statute giving clear title after a certain number of years of undisturbed possession. Just as soon as the old lease is discovered, then the fight for possession of the land will begin. There will be many defendants. The land involved extends from Oak Tree to the Essex highway, which runs parallel with the right of way of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's line, and the tract includes the railroad. The strip is about two miles in width.

There is no question of the lease of the copper mine property to an English syndicate, although it is supposed that the lease was for only a brief period. The mine is still one of the sights of the neighborhood. It is on land owned by the Ayers estate, about a mile from the laboratory once occupied by Thomas A. Edison.

About twenty years ago an examination was made of the mine and the ore it supplied by a company in which Edison was interested. He believed that with improved methods the mine could be worked at a profit, but the effort was never made.

The three persons most prominent now in pressing the claims of the Noe descendants are Mrs. Phoebe Noe and her children, Mrs. Foot and Frank Bush. Mrs. Noe was the daughter of Isaac Noe. She married Henry Gerhardt von Haberbasch, but the name has been anglicized to Bush. After her husband's death Mrs. Bush resumed the name of Noe. Mrs. Foot has heard recently that Mrs. Cornelius Lesher, a descendant of a collateral branch of the family, has the original lease, and an effort is being made to find Mrs. Lesher, who, when last heard of, was somewhere in Iowa.

SILVER FOR BATTLESHIP.

Plans Discussed for School Children to Contribute Toward Buying Plate for the Battleship.

Mayor Hoos, of Jersey City, has been made temporary chairman of the committee composed of Governor Voorhees and the Mayors of the State to raise funds to provide the new battleship New Jersey with a silver service.

All the Mayors of the various cities and towns in the State, together with the county and city superintendents of schools, are invited to meet in Trenton, May 22, to adopt further measures to secure the money required.

The plan suggested is that every school in the public schools shall contribute five cents. By the last report of the State Board of Education the average number of people between the ages of five and twenty years at the schools was about 300,000, and this would give in round numbers a sum of $15,00 for the service.

The designation of one general day throughout the State—Battleship Day—was discussed, when the pupils of all schools could bring in the nickles It was thought a good plan to have the teachers keep a list of the contributions in each class, forward the list with the cash, these lists to comprise a "Roll of Patriots" to be made into a book, durably bound and to be presented to the battleship with the silver service, to be kept in the ship's library.

HIS SIXTH TERM.

A Compliment That Is Deserved in the Re-appointment of County Attorney Codington.

In the re-appointment of W. R. Codington, as counsel for the County Board of Freeholders a few days ago, a compliment was paid this genial and efficient interpreter of the law. This makes the sixth time that Mr. Codington has been made counsel for the county, and it shows conclusively that the Board of Freeholders are very well satisfied with his work. In addition to holding this position, Mr. Codington is also the counsel for five different townships and one borough. All of these things speak well for his work, and are considered with no little feeling of pride. Mr. Codington is known for his good judgment and conservative action in all matters and when he gives an opinion it is generally worth all that you care to pay on it. He has settled many troubles for his clients in an easy, satisfactory and inexpensive way, and it is for these reasons that he has steadily won favor among the people.

She returned Thursday by trolley, and when the car was at a point about two miles from Bound Brook, an accident occurred to the trolley wire causing a delay of several hours. Mrs. LaRue and several other passengers walked to Bound Brook and there took a car for Plainfield.

ANTS AS STRATEGISTS.

Armies of the Insects Are Manoeuvred with Military Precision and Effect.

From a military standpoint, the methods employed by ants to provide food for an ant colony are almost perfect. Their foraging parties are faultless, both in planning and execution, and are almost uniformly successful. A resident of this city who is at present in business in South Africa, has sent home a description of a foray of an army of ants.

The army, which he estimates to have numbered about 15,000 ants, started from their home in the mud walls of a hut and marched in the direction of a small mound of fresh earth but a few yards distant. The head of the column halted on reaching the foot of the mound and waited for the rest of the force to arrive at the place of operations, which evidently was to be the mound of fresh earth. When the rearmainder had arrived and halted, so that the entire army was assembled, a number of ants detached themselves from the main body and began to ascend to the top of the mound, while the others began digging so as to encircle the base of the mound.

Very soon a number from the detachment which had ascended the mound, evidently the attacking party, entered the burrow and speedily returned, each bearing a cricket or a young grasshopper, dead, which he deposited upon the ground and then returned for a fresh load. Those who had remained on the outside of the mound took up the crickets and grasshoppers as they were brought out, and bore them down to the base of the hill, returning for a fresh load. Soon the contents of the mound seemed to be exhausted, and then the whole force returned home, each carrying his burden of food for the community.

Here, then, was a regular foray, planned and executed with military precision, the country surveyed, the depot of provisions known, and safely before the march was made, and at the mound prudential division of labor and care taken that none of the victims should escape.—N. Y. Herald.

CHINESE INQUESTS.

Their Established Code Embraces Some Peculiar and Absurd Practices.

Coroners' inquests are well known among the Chinese. One of the chief differences between their system and ours is that the Chinese doctors never perform post mortems. Chinese have a perfect horror of dissection.

There are few things more absurd than the code of rules laid down for the Chinese coroner. In the first place he is bidden to make sure that he has a good fee before he begins his inquest. That however is less ridiculous than it sounds, for the heathen Chinee is tricky and may demand an inquest on a sham deceased with a view to extorting money from the person who may be condemned as having caused the death.

The preposterous part of the code comes in with the alleged signs which show the cause of death. If the deceased is discovered to have been poisoned rice is put into his mouth and then taken out and given to a chicken. Its effect on the fowl decides the question. Most of the other methods adopted are even more absurd and fanciful, and at a result inquests in China do very little to prevent crime.—Chicago Evening News.

Big Demand for Peach Trees.

The nurserymen are unable to supply the demand for peach trees. Owing to the large prices reaped for last year's crop the peach borer has broken out all through this and other adjoining counties, with the result that farmers are planting out large groves on their farms. The more conservative peach men say that a decade may pass before such prices may be realized again.

at St. Louis in 1896. His choice has proved very satisfactory to his party in Wisconsin. Mr. Wiswell is a Wisconsin man by birth and is now 46 years old. Reared on a farm, he grew to a strong and healthy manhood, and gained a good school education. After learning the tinner's and plumber's trades he established himself in business as a hardware merchant, continuing it for ten years. In 1886 he was elected sheriff of Walworth county, and during his term founded the state organization of sheriffs. In March, 1889, President Harrison appointed John United States marshal for the eastern district of Wisconsin, and he held the office until 1893. During this term of office he effected the breaking up of several notorious and dangerous gangs of robbers and counterfeiters, especially the "brush hunters" gang in the neighborhood of Hurley. Since 1893 he has been secretary and general manager of the Fraternal Alliance Insurance company. He is a member of several of the most prominent Milwaukee clubs.

BARD CHOSEN SENATOR.

California Legislature Elects a Well-Known Business Man to Succeed Stephen M. White.

Thomas R. Bard, who has been elected by the California legislature to succeed Stephen M. White in the United States senate, was born in Cashtown, Franklin county, Pa., December 8, 1841, the son of Robert M. Bard, a prominent lawyer of that place. When the civil war broke out he was in Tennessee, and was forced to the border between the north and south, and in constant danger from raids. Although scarcely of age, young Bard enlisted in the federal army, taking part in the battle of Antietam and other engagements. His ability was recognized by Col. Thomas A. Scott, assistant secretary of war, who took him into his command, where he rendered valuable service in the transportation department. In 1865 Col. Scott ordered him to go to California to take charge of his (Scott's) large interests in Ventura and adjoining counties. He looked after a tract of more than 277,000 acres of land until Col. Scott's death, when he became administrator of the estate, carrying out the provisions and gave a bond of $1,500,000 for faithful performance of this task.

Mr. Bard is largely interested in the petroleum industry of southern California and is one of the chief executives of the Union Oil company. He is president of the Bank of Hueneme and organizer and director of the Simi and Las Posas Land and Water companies.

FIREMEN'S RELIEF WORK

DISBURSEMENTS WERE $1,697.19 AND RECEIPTS $1,027.59.

How it Would Be Possible to Avoid Such a Deficit—Chief Deane Chosen President.

The annual meeting of the Firemen's Relief Association was held May 9th, when a review of the year's work was taken. The report of the treasurer showed that the receipts were $1,027.59 and the disbursements were $1,697.19, leaving a deficit of $669.60. There are twelve widows of firemen that are being helped by the association and two firemen who are unable to do anything. They are paid $3 a week. Besides there are other sick and disabled firemen that are receiving assistance. The membership of the association is between four and five hundred.

It can be seen from the above that the association is running behind This has been the case during the past year, and the grip grips much Plainfield. The only source of revenue to the association is the 2 per cent. on gross premiums on insurance policies. This the association is entitled to by law and the insurance companies are compelled to pay it. Out of the total amount of insurance carried in Plainfield the association receives about half of the 2 per cent. to which they are entitled. This is due to the fact that so many Plainfielders place their insurance in New York, and the 2 per cent. goes to the treasurer of that state. If persons who have placed insurance in New York would only inform the companies or Chief Doane that they would like to have the percentage go to the local association this would be done, and the person insured would not pay a cent more for his insurance.

This percentage that goes to the State Firemen's Association is issued to support a home for aged firemen near Boston. It would be of more benefit here, for the local association is doing a good work in caring for the town end and the families where assistance is needed. There are many who do not know the state of affairs now existing, else they would gladly have that percentage paid to the local association.

The election of officers took place last evening and for the twelfth time T. O. Deane was chosen president, and J. A. Hubbard was elected treasurer for the twenty-fifth time, Edward Mosher was elected vice-president, and G. Thorn secretary.

IMPRESSIONS OF ENGLAND.

An Interesting Lecture Delivered by Rev. W. C. Snodgrass Last Evening.

A well-filled chapel greeted Rev. W. C. Snodgrass last evening on the Seventh-Day Baptist church, to hear him give his talk on "Impressions of England." At the beginning of his talk Mr. Snodgrass said that the thing which impressed him most of all was the large crowds, not only in London, but all over England. London is particularly noted for its crowds, having more people than Greater New York and Chicago combined, in an area about the same as New York The crowds are so dense in London that people find it difficult to keep on the walks and use the streets instead.

The age of England was very impressive to him. While America is four hundred years old, England has been making history for two thousand years, and signs of this great age are to be seen in Battle Abbey, the Tower of London, Castle of York and Durham Castle. The tower of London which was built by William the Conqueror, is still standing in a perfect state of preservation and looks as if it would last for three thousand years yet.

In conclusion Mr. Snodgrass said that although the little island contained the governing power which controlled one quarter of the world, her feelings toward the United States were of the best.

Loss of Jersey Sheep.

The percentage of loss of New Jersey sheep during the past winter from exposure and scab disease has just been given by the United States Department of Agriculture. The loss in this State from exposure was two per cent. and from disease 2.3 per cent. The total number of sheep lost from all causes in the State was 1,065. The per cent. of condition was 98.

CITY WINS IMPORTANT POINT IN BIG SUIT

Scores a Technical Victory in Supreme Court Against Mrs. Milliken.

WAS BEST METHODS USED?

THAT IS THE ISSUE ON WHICH SUIT WILL BE TRIED.

The Demurrer of the Plaintiff to Corporation Counsel Marsh's Claim for Defense Overruled by the Court May 9th.

The Supreme Court May 9th rendered a decision having an important bearing on the suit brought by Mrs. Sarah Milliken for $10,000 damages against the city of Plainfield, alleged to have been sustained through the establishment and operation of the sewage beds by the city on property in the proximity of Mrs. Milliken's home. Among the answers made by Corporation Counsel Marsh in defense of the city's conduct in the sewage bed matter was that the city proceeded under a law passed by the Legislature, which intended that as long as the city established and operated the beds under the best-known and most scientific methods, it should not be responsible to individuals for damages sustained in their operation.

To this claim of the city, Codington & Swackhamer, assisted by Senator Reed, counsel for Mrs. Milliken, filed a demurrer in the Supreme Court, arguing that the city should not have the benefit of any such point in the proceedings to define the issue on which the case should be tried. In the decision filed yesterday the claim of the city is sustained, so that it is a technical victory in the latter's favor.

Until the lawyers for the plaintiff have an opportunity to study the decision, it is not known whether the Supreme Court's decision will be appealed to the Court of Errors and Appeals or whether the plaintiff's will be willing to go ahead and try the case by jury. If the latter method is decided it will be necessary for the city to prove to the satisfaction of a jury that it used the best known methods in establishing the beds, and that it exercised all reasonable caution in trying to make them unobjectionable to the plaintiff.

The decision of the Supreme Court is under the original law giving the city statutory authority to establish the sewage disposal system. At the last session of the Legislature, however, an amendment was made to this law which wipes out that section which relieves the city of the liability of damages to persons in case they were claimed and proven. Under the amended law, the city will not be able to make the claim it has established in Mrs. Milliken's case by the Supreme Court's decision.

Mrs. Milliken's suit is regarded as a test action, and if she should secure damages against the city a number of similar suits for heavy damages will be commenced against the city. Mrs. Milliken formerly conducted a summer boarding house, but she claims the stench that arises from the sewage beds in the summer has driven away all her patrons, curtailing her revenue and damaging her property to the extent specified in the suit.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

YEAR YOUNGER THAN THE CHURCH ITSELF.

Nineteenth Anniversary of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Church.

MUCH GOOD WORK DONE.

INTERESTING TALKS GIVEN BY MISSIONARY WORKERS.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck Praised the Society for the Good Work That It Has Done—Receipts and Disbursements.

The nineteenth anniversary of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church was observed last Sunday in an interesting and profitable manner. The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the church attended in a body.

After the devotional exercises conducted by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., assisted by Rev. Daniel Rapalje, who read the Scriptures, Mr. Schenck said that the society is only one year younger than the church, and in numbers had accomplished a grand work for the church and the denomination. He spoke of the earnest workers and tollers in the society and what they have done for the advancement of the Kingdom of God. He took occasion to thank the officers and members for their devotion and the committees for their earnest efforts, and prophesied greater things in the future. Mr. Schenck then announced that the report of the treasurer, Mrs. O. W. Dunham, would be read.

This report is as follows: General fund, receipts, $25.80; disbursements, $36.12; balance, 68 cents; poor fund, receipts, $8.54; disbursements, $4.05; balance, 49 cents; sewing fund, receipts, $16.36; disbursements, $15.49; balance, 87 cents; sinking fund, receipts, $347.92; disbursements, $347.92. The receipts for the missionary fund were $46.10 and were divided equally between foreign and home missions. The total receipts were $497.96, and the disbursements $496.91, leaving a total balance of $2.04.

Mrs. H. W. Marshall, secretary for the society, presented her report, which showed a membership of 44 active and 13 honorary, and the average attendance 33.

The chairman of the sewing committee gave twenty-one articles towards the missionary box. Two barrels of clothing were sent to Selma Field School, South Carolina, and the usual amount of $5 was donated to the W. C. T. U. During the year two members resigned and one died.

Following the above reports, Pastor Schenck introduced Miss Leila Winn, of Aomori, an island of Japan. Miss Winn's work is chiefly in teaching women and holding Sunday-schools for the children. She is designated as a children's missionary. She told of the work of Christ in that portion of Japan where she has been stationed, and said that Japan is now open to the missionaries of the world, thus affording a wonderful opportunity to win souls for Christ and to advance the work of his kingdom.

At the conclusion of Miss Winn's talk she exhibited a number of idols and different style shoes worn in Japan.

After the Junior Christian Endeavor Society sang one of their favorite songs, Rev. Daniel Rapalje, of Fairview avenue, who for forty years was a missionary at Amoy, China, gave brief talk. He referred to the gloomy prospects for the girls of China, who are allowed to come up in ignorance, while the boys are sent to school when they arrive at the proper age. He said that the girls and boys are not allowed to learn anything that will be of use to them, and cited the need of more missionaries. In closing he referred to the idolatry and polygamy to be found in China, and how much work will have to be done to educate the people of that vast Empire.

The offering made during the service was for the ladies Christian Work Society to assist them in carrying on their noble work.

GOLFERS WERE PLENTY.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT LINKS OF PARK GOLF CLUB SATURDAY.

Most Members Were Making Up Trial Scores—Professional Blair Defeated Local Ball Amateurs and Tilney.

Ideal weather, an excellent course and the desire to complete the trial scores for a basis for handicapping, all combined to crowd the links of the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon. The attendance was the largest of the season and equal to the holiday crowds of last year. Although there was no regular competion, there was much interest manifested in the scores.

Saturday was the last chance of the club members to hand in their three trial scores to constitute the basis of handicap for the opening competition next Saturday. Those who have the opportunity of playing during the week had their scores completed, but they were in the minority and the others spent the afternoon that way. The course was in fine condition. The fair greens had just been cut and were firm and smooth while the putting greens showed up fast and even. There was a brisk breeze that died away toward evening, but it interfered but little.

There was the usual little group of ladies who played around and a larger gathering at the clubhouse, where an informal tea was held. Quite a number of members were out for the first time this season, and several guests played over the links with friends.

The chief happening of interest was a match arranged between Andrew B. Blair, the club professional, and W. de la R. Anderson and William J. R. Thiers, two of the best players on the club. Blair played the best ball of the amateurs and finally won two up and one to go in the eighteen holes. The amateurs won on the first round, but Blair played almost par golf in the second and finally won out. He made the rounds in 48 and 43. His opponents scored 48 and 48 in the first round and 47 and 47 in the second. They showed slightly better form than Anderson, particularly in his driving.

TWO SURPRISES ON LOCAL DIAMONDS.

Leal's School Met Crushing Defeat at Hands of East Orange High School.

1ST GAME LOST THIS SEASON

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL TEAM CAME PERILOUSLY NEAR WINNING.

Defeated in the Last Inning by the Arion A. C., of This City—Game Was a Good One Up to the Inning.

There were two surprises on local diamonds Saturday afternoon. The Plainfield High School team came perilously near winning, only being defeated in the ninth inning by the Arion A. C., of this city, by a score of 24 to 23. The other surprise was when the Leal's School nine, heretofore easily victorious, met a crushing defeat at the hands of the East Orange High School.

The High School boys and the Arion nine met on Martine Common. At the start it looked very much as if the High School team was going to break its record and win. For the first two innings the Arion boys were shut out. When five innings had been played the High School was in the lead 8 to 4. Squires' delivery puzzled the other team while his support was excellent, only three errors being recorded against the High School team up to that point.

Then the old trouble appeared and the error column on the score book grew rapidly. Arion A. C. made six runs in the sixth to the High School's one. The seventh showed the Arions still ahead by one run. The latter batted Squires freely in the eighth, scoring seven times. In the same inning, however, the High School boys fell upon Smith's delivery and with the aid of wretched fielding made nine runs, taking the lead again. But it couldn't last. The Arions scored five and the school team but two in the last inning.

The first part of the game was exciting, but towards the end it became a question as to which team could play the worse. The teams batted as follows:

FLYNN HIGH SCHOOL.	ARION A. C.
F. Mason, M.,	Kennett, ss., c.,
Squires, p.,	Bernardi, c. cf.,
T. Mason, 2b.,	Martin, 2b., ss.,
Hoffman, ss., 2b.,	Smith, p.,
Schaub, 1b.,	Rosebertz, c., 1b.,
Smith, c.,	Bonda, lb.,
Woodruff, cf.,	Bernardi, rf.,
Pond, rf.,	Dolliver, M.,

SCORE BY INNINGS:

Arion A. C.,	0	0	4	1	0	6	1	1	0—23
High School,	0	0	4	0	0	1	2	1	0—24

The biggest surprise of the day was the game on the Washington avenue grounds when the East Orange High School defeated the Leal's School team 21 to 4. The Leal's School boys were fairly outclassed. The mysteries of the curves of Underhill, the East Orange pitcher, who possessed the wonderful faculty of being able to pitch with either hand at will, were beyond the local team. Tilney, captain of Leal's, has been ill for two weeks and in his absence the boys had not practiced at all. The lack of it was shown.

The score by innings:

E. O. H. S.	1	0	0	5	2	2	0	0	0	—21
Leal's.....	0	0	0	0	1	0	1	0	2	—4

THINKS ROAD TOO NARROW.

Mr. Wilson's Views on the Watchung Trolley Extension.

An idea seems to prevail that J. I. Wilson, owner of the quarry between the borough and Watchung, is opposed to granting a right of way to the trolley line.

In conversation with Mr. Wilson with the editor of The Weekly Review he expressed his views on this subject about as follows:

"The trolley people and I understand each other perfectly well. I am willing that the trolley should go to Watchung, but it is a well-known fact that the highway is very narrow; that it is daily used a great deal by farmers for 12 miles away, and by many others for pleasure driving, as well as for business, and if a trolley is placed there the road will be blocked. What I want is for the trolley people to widen the road out at least 50 feet, which will provide room sufficient for the vehicles and allow of a sidewalk. I don't want to let the trolley in, and inside of three months compel the taxpayers of Somerset county to do this necessary work at their own expense."

Another Trolley Switch.

It is understood that the Plainfield Street Railway Company has a scheme on foot to locate another switch on East Fifth street, between Watchung avenue and Washington street. It was reported that the work was to have been done last Friday night, but it was not. Thus far the company has made no application to the Common Council in open session for the right to place this switch.

MAGIC TEMPLE DOORS.

An Explanation of the Way in Which the Egyptian Priests Used to Fool the People.

The priests of ancient Egypt had a very simple method of imposing upon the credulity of the people. They were well acquainted with many laws of physics, and did not hesitate to employ them to mystify the people. When Hero, the Greek, who invented the first slot machine, was writing his book on natural laws, he included a drawing of the temple doors, which were opened as if by magic by the Egyptian priests. The altar stood outside of the temple itself, and it was by utilizing this altar that the doors of the temple opened, as if by the invisible touch of the god Apis, and the faithful were invited into the holy temple to complete their worship. How this was done is easy to see from Hero's diagram. Beneath the altar was the whole machinery. When the fire was lighted on the altar it warmed the air in the tube running down to the vessel (H), almost full of water. The expansion of the heated air forced the water into the curved tube (KLM), transferring some of it to the vessel (X). This vessel was suspended by a chain, and as it filled with water the weight pulled on the chain, which was wrapped around pivots that moved the doors open. When the sacrifice was all over and the fire was quenched on the altar the air inside of it cooled, the water poured back into the vessel (H), emptying X, and the weight sank at the extreme right hand of the drawing pulled the pivots around so as to close the doors again. Of course none but the priests knew anything about the mechanism by which this marvelous opening and closing of the doors was accomplished, and it must have seemed a miracle to the gaping crowd of worshipers.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

TWO NEW INDUSTRIES.

The Manufacture of "Whalebone" from the Horns of Austrian Cattle and from Rattan.

Thirty or 40 years ago, when whalebone was abundant and cheap, it was extensively employed in making umbrellas, horsewhips and corsets. Slender strips of the same material were also used to stiffen the waists of ladies' dresses. To-day whalebone has become a luxury, and from the market, and other materials are made to perform the old duties. A recent consular report from Austria declares that rattan is now introduced into the cheaper grade of corsets in that country, and that an artificial whalebone is made there out of the horns of cattle. The annual output of this article is put at 276,000 pounds.

Two kinds of artificial whalebone are produced, one having a blond hue and the other black. The former is superior, and brings about 50 cents a pound, while the latter sells for about 25 cents. The blond variety is made out of the horns of Hungarian cattle, and these are first treated in a wet condition. The black variety comes from the horns of India cattle, and they are imported dry.

The horns are pressed between heavy metal plates. The inner sides of the horns become more or less scorched, and slabs drawn from these outer surfaces are much inferior in quality to those taken from the center, which are the best and dearest. The bones are cut into strips 24 inches long and three-sixteenths to five-sixteenths of an inch broad. The lengths from 12 to 20 inches are those principally used for corsets. Large quantities of these bones also come from France, because the manufacture in Austria does not meet the demand.

Automobiles for Army Use.

The German reichstag has just voted an appropriation of £25,000 to the government for experiments in the employment of automobiles in the army. Some trials have already been made, but without having been sufficiently complete for the results to prove conclusive. A more exhaustive experiment may now be made in various military uses for these vehicles and principally for the transportation of supplies. It is highly possible that in a short time the system will be tried for moving heavy pieces of artillery. The German military staff is itself of very considerable investigation.

Right Eye to the Stronger.

People who use their eyes equally well as they are right or left handed, and just as the right hand is usually the more powerful, so is the right eye. Only one person in ten is left sighted. It is very probable that the use of weapons during countless ages has had something to do with the right eye's extra power.

Oil in Blast Furnaces.

Excellent results have been obtained with the use of oil in blast furnaces. It is interposed between the hot-air stoves and the tuyeres of the blast furnace. The oil is driven by the blast into the furnace, where it increases the temperature and also facilitates the reduction of the ore.

HE PLAYED CRUSOE.

But Was Very Glad to Be Rescued by Capt. Tanner.

American Naval Officer's Strange Discovery on a Pacific Ocean Island —Castaway Has Served Captivity to Loneliness.

Out on the equatorial line, 600 miles west of Ecuador, in the Pacific ocean, on Floriana island, one of the Galapagos group, lives a modern Robinson Crusoe. An escaped convict, injured to the most rigorous life, Pedro Guaza became so overwrought through his solitary existence that when Capt. Z. L. Tanner, of the United States navy, retired, on a voyage of scientific inquiry, visited his sovereignty he rushed to the beach with his hands extended, waiting for the irons to be put upon them. He imagined his keepers had sent for him; he was ready to relinquish absolute freedom for companionship.

In narrating his landing on Floriana island Capt. Tanner says, in the New York World:

"We supposed Charles island, as the English call it, or Floriana island, as designated by the Ecuadorians, was entirely uninhabited. Indeed, we had not the slightest suspicion that a human being was present in the whole Galapagos archipelago, except on Chatham island; consequently we were surprised at the discovery of a solitary man—a veritable Robinson Crusoe.

"Pedro Guaza told his story. It was then something more than a year since he came from Chatham island with a party of orchilla pickers, and saw from day to day the deserted plantation, with its wealth of fruit, horses, cattle, mules, donkeys, goats and swine.

"'Why should not I remain and possess them?' he asked. When the party was ready to depart Pedro could not be found. After a futile search his companions departed.

"Guaza displayed good judgment in providing for his comfort and safety. He established himself in a small house near a spring of water at an elevation of about 600 feet above the sea, two miles from the landing place and an equal distance from the deserted plantation. It commanded a wide view, and all the animals within miles on every side came to the spring for water.

"His weapons were a strong knife and an ax. He constructed a blind over the spring, and, by lashing his knife to a pole, succeeding in spearing goats and pigs in plenty. He was compelled at first to bring his fruit from the plantation, but he soon made a lasso of goatskin and captured a couple of donkeys, which he trained as saddle and pack animals, and thereafter rode in state from the estate with proper dignity.

"The wardrobe of Guaza became limited. He remedied this difficulty by simply disrobing. He stowed his one and only suit away, substituting for it the simple skins of goats. The modern luxury of matches was beyond his reach, and he procured fire by the time-honored method of rubbing two sticks together.

"For awhile Guaza kept the record of the flight of the days on a stick, a large mark for Sunday; but, with his increasing prosperity, he became careless, soon losing all run of time; and, as the effect of utter loneliness increased, he imagined every day a week, the weeks months, the months years. The first questions he asked were: 'What year is it? What month?'

"Capt. Tanner said that Floriana island was formerly a convict settlement, as is Chatham island now. In the '70s the convicts rose in rebellion and killed their keepers. Seizing two schooners, they escaped by putting to sea, and have never been heard of since.

"The plantation buildings crumbled into ruins. The fields became a wilderness. The fruit trees, although bearing heavily, were wild. Flocks and herds roamed at will. Wild dogs, made savage by hunger, preyed on the young of these and checked the overpopulation of animal life.

"This condition had existed for two decades when Pedro Guaza became reigning sovereign. The buildings, stained with blood from the convicts' crime of 20 years before, had decayed.

Railroad Accidents in 1899.

There were 2,421 train accidents in the United States in 1899, against 2,228 in 1898. The killed numbered 889 and the injured 2,061. This exceeds the total killed and wounded in the Philippines during the 18 months ended December 31, 1899, the losses in killed being 24 per cent, and in wounded 11 per cent.

EPWORTH LEAGUE WAS BORN IN PLAINFIELD.

Eleventh Anniversary of Chapter No 1 Was Celebrated Sunday Night.

ALMOST 2,000,000 MEMBERS

THE ORIGINAL CHAPTER NOW HAS 105 MEMBERS.

There Are Now 27,000 Chapters in the World—Special Address Delivered by Gen. Rossiter, of Trenton.

Chapter No. 1 of the Epworth League, which has its abiding place in the First M. E. church, observed the completion of its eleventh year last Sunday with special service held in the church. As Chapter No. 1 and the League itself came into existence the same day, the service marked the anniversary of the organization of the League as well.

In the absence of the president of the chapter, Henry Gee, Rev. Dr. W. H. Snodgrass presided. The address of the evening was by Gen. Rossiter, of Trenton. His subject was "The Advance of Methodism." He talked at length on the growth of Methodism, its present proportions and what the future held in store for that denomination. He also told what it stood for.

A short exercise was conducted by Miss Jennie Davies, first vice president, in which the graduates from the Junior Epworth League were received into membership of the main league. She made a short address to the graduates.

The Epworth League was organized in May, 1889, by the union of five societies then existing in the M. E. church. Among them was the Oxford League, a branch of which was located at the First M. E. church, this city. The meeting at which the Epworth League was founded was held in Pittsburgh and was presided over by Rev. Dr. J. L. Huribut, then of Plainfield. Through him Plainfield secured the honor of having Chapter No. 1. The local chapter has 105 members. There are 60 leagues in the Elizabeth district and 27,000 in the world with a membership of nearly two million.

Special services in commemoration of the eleventh anniversary of the league were also held at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church. Edwin Brokaw, president of the chapter from that church, presided. A short address on "Value of the Human Soul" was made by the pastor, Rev. John McMurray. The four vice presidents, Miss Florence Burt, Mrs. Walter Manning, Walter M. McGee and Miss Edith Manning, assisted in a special exercise.

The Grace M. E. church was very prettily decorated last evening with the Epworth League colors and a profusion of flowers for the special services.

The exercises, which consisted of singing by the children, under the direction of Mrs. Low, and special anthems by the choir under the leadership of John Steiner, were in charge of the president of the league. The speaker of the evening was Thomas E. Greason, of New York city.

NEARLY A RIOT

Royal Baseball Mixes Deposited About the Use of a West End Diamond.

Constable Mattox had to be called Saturday to quell a small sized riot which was taking place on the Clinton avenue baseball grounds over the ownership of the lot.

The right to play on the grounds was claimed by two teams from Fords. The Clinton avenue team declared they would have the field as it was through their efforts that the diamond was laid out. Matters were assuming a serious aspect when Constable Mattox appeared and persuaded the Clinton avenue boys to let the Fords teams play.

This they finally decided to do and they left the field in the possession of the Pond boys.

A Plainfield Pianist.

Miss Saidee Mae Howell, a talented young pianist of Plainfield, gave some delightful piano solos at the State Federation of Clubs held at Cranford last Thursday afternoon, and completely won her audience by her sympathetic touch and fine rendering of selections by Chopin and Moszkowski. Miss Howell who has played at several musical clubs and entertainments in Plainfield during the past year is a pupil of Miss Minnie S. Marsh, of Madison avenue.

Case Was Dismissed.

Charles Howell, of Scotch Plains, who was arrested on complaint of Thomas Monroe, was discharged before Justice Mosher Saturday evening for lack of evidence. The trial had finally been adjourned in order to allow both parties to secure witnesses. The plaintiff did not have his and asked the Judge for another adjournment, but it was refused and the case was dismissed.

ROWLAND COX IS DEAD

PROMINENT TRADEMARK LAWYER PASSED AWAY SUNDAY NIGHT.

Death Followed an Attack of Appendicitis —Left Princeton to Enlist But Was Given His Degree.

Rowland Cox, one of the best trademark lawyers of the country, passed away late last Sunday at his residence 310 West Seventh street. He was taken ill Wednesday with appendicitis. An operation was performed by Dr. Hartley, of New York, but his system was too weak to rally from its effects and he died last evening.

Mr. Cox was born in Philadelphia, July 9, 1843. He entered Princeton University but left at the beginning of the Civil War to enlist in the 13th Anderson Cavalry. He was given his degree, however, as a member of the class of 1863. He was commissioned as captain, and appointed on the staff of General Grant but he did not serve there. He was subsequently appointed on Gen. McPherson's staff, and afterwards brevetted major.

At the close of the war Mr. Cox went to Washington, D. C., and then came Plainfield in 1872. He married Miss Fanny C. Hill, of Smyrna, Del. He was admitted to the New York bar and made a specialty of trademark cases, in which class of practice he attained a National reputation. His law offices were at 229 Broadway, New York. His son, Archibald Cox, has been associated with him in the business for the past few years.

Mr. Cox had a host of friends in this city and New York with whom he was very popular. At his home he was a loving husband and a kind father. He was particularly interested in all matters for the advancement of the interests of Plainfield. He was a regular attendant at the Grace P. E. church. He was a member of the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, the Baltusrol Golf Club and also the Zeta Psi Fraternity.

He leaves a widow and four children, Dr. Rowland Cox, Archibald Cox, Robert H. Cox and Miss Fanny C. Cox. His sister is Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place.

The funeral will be held Friday afternoon from the Grace P. E. church.

Power of Little Things.

The evening service at Marconnier chapel Sunday was led by R. E. Anthony, who delivered a very helpful address on the topic, "The Power of Little Things." Mrs. Anthony acted as pianist. The meeting was very well attended and the chapel presented a very attractive appearance, decorated with dogwood and lilacs. Seven Plainfielders were present at the service.

Necessary Money Subscribed.

The necessary $100 to macadamize Watchung avenue between Grandview and Coddington avenues has been subscribed and the borough officials will start the work next week. It will be remembered that the property-owners pledged for the improvement, and were to see that if $100 was subscribed for the work it would be done.

W. L. Saunders has presented, through Miss Marion Dumont, the sum of $50 of the receipts of "A Night Off" to the Plainfield Relief Association.

HEIRS IN HURRY TO GET MELLICK'S WEALTH

Contest Now On In Middlesex County Over Appointment of Administrator.

CASE IS COMPLICATED ONE.

THE CAVEATORS ARE PENNSYLVANIA NEPHEWS OF DEAD MAN.

Judge Strong Spoke of the Hurry of Some of the Heirs to Get Control of the Estate — Hearing Adjourned a Week.

New Brunswick, May 23—The hearing upon the caveat filed against the appointment of John C. Morris as administrator of the late Henry Mellick, of Oak Tree, went off for a week in Orphans' Court yesterday. The case is a curiously complicated one. The caveators are Philip and Daniel Mellick, of Sosharie county, Pa., who claim to be nephews of Henry Mellick.

Mellick was a wealthy farmer who lived the life of a recluse. He died without leaving a will, and there are about forty heirs interested in the division of his property. Some time before his death it was announced that he was dead. He had lived near the Union county line, and Frank Okell, a lawyer living at Westfield, at the request of Philip and Daniel Mellick, secured letters of administration from the surrogate of Union county. Two weeks later Mellick died and Okell entered upon his duties as administrator.

It the developed that Mellick had lived in Middlesex county, and Okell's appointment was revoked. He announced his intention of applying for similar letters from the surrogate of Middlesex, but in the meantime other heirs had selected John C. Morris, of Middlesex, as administrator, and he was appointed. His appointment is now being attacked.

In court Judge Strong referred to the fact that the caveators had been in such a hurry to get hold of Mellick's money that they had tried to settle up his estate before he was dead. Their counsel protested. He said that his clients had read in a newspaper of Mellick's death and had come to attend the funeral. Arriving at the house they were informed that all was over. They had thereon arranged for an administrator. When Mr. Mellick finally died the proceedings were renewed.

STATE LIBRARY COMMISSION.

It Organizes by Electing W. C. Kimball as President.

Trenton, May 23—The New Jersey Library Commission, created under an act of the last Legislature for the purpose of encouraging the establishment of libraries throughout the State, met yesterday in the State Library and elected the following officers: President, W. C. Kimball, Passaic; secretary, Henry C. Buchanan, State librarian.

The other members of the commission, all of whom were present, are Librarian Earnest C. Richardson, of Princeton University; Moses Taylor Fyne, of Princeton; Everitt T. Tomlinson, of Elizabeth, and Frank P. Hill, of Newark. No appropriation was made by the Legislature for the work of the commission, and the members have decided to defray their own expenses for the year by personal assessment.

Rumor Again Sells Lehigh Valley.

A new rumor relating to the Lehigh Valley Railroad appeared yesterday. This rumor was fortified by a few figures, and declared that the Pennsylvania Railroad was to buy the Lehigh Valley, paying $72.50 in new collateral trust 3½ 2 per cent. bonds in exchange for each $50 share of Lehigh Valley stock. President Walter, of the Lehigh Valley, said he did not think there was anything in the story.

Patriotic Services at St. Mary's.

Next Sunday evening at St. Mary's R. C. church a patriotic service will be held, at which time the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans, will attend. The rector, Rev. Father Smyth, will deliver a sermon suitable to the occasion.

Connecting Switch Laid.

The switch connecting the Arlington avenue extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company with the Fourth street line has been completed. The trolley wire will be strung on Arlington avenue as soon as the trees now in the way are removed.

—Health Inspector Addis has been kept busy during the past few days disinfecting places where there is contagious disease. All of the scarlet fever cases in the city are nearly well.

SCHOOL BOYS PLAYED.

HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS AND JUNIORS BEAT LOWER CLASS TEAM.

In the Early Part of the Contest It Looked Like a Close Contest, but Final Score was 17 to 9

The Seniors and Juniors of the Plainfield High School defeated a team from the lower classes at baseball on Martine Common Tuesday afternoon. For the first three innings the game was very close. After that the upper classmen had things their own way and won by a score of 17 to 9.

The members of the school team were fairly divided between the two teams. Squires pitched for the upper classmen and Fred Mason caught. It was Mason's first experience behind the bat and, considering that fact, he did excellent work. The lower classmen had three pitchers, Denton, Davis and VanAuken, who occupied the box for three innings each. Denton was the most successful as the Seniors and Juniors found some difficulty in hitting his delivery. He was a little wild, however. Herman caught all three and did excellent work.

The game proved a rather exciting one and devoid of the unpleasant features that have so often marred the work of the High School team. There were a few errors, of course, but they were not important ones and there were no periods when either team forgot to play ball.

The score was 3 to 3 at the end of the third inning and it looked like a close game. Then the upper classmen found Davis' delivery running up the score to 13 to 6 at the end of the sixth. In the seventh, VanAuken was batted freely and five runs were netted. The lower classmen scored three times in the last three innings but it was not enough to put them in the running.

The teams batted as follows:

FOR A NOBLE WORK.

Appeal for Funds to Carry on Work of Fresh Air Camp of King's Daughters.

As the warm weather approaches the attention of the benevolent minded people of our city is called to the needs of the City Union of the King's Daughters. Soon the work of restoring to health the little ones, who are living in crowded homes devoid of God's fresh air because of their wretched surroundings, will begin. These little ones will be taken, together with the tired mothers, by the city nurse to the camp on the mountains. This work, together with the work the nurse is doing from day to day, necessitates a considerable outlay of money, and the Union feels that the people of the city who have so bountifully helped us with their contributions heretofore, will not fail us now, when we again make an appeal for assistance.

The sunshine gift, as well as the largest, from either organization or individual, will be most gratefully received by the treasurer, Miss Linda Butler, 215 East Front street.

A TRAINED DEACONESS.

Miss Lucy Adams, of This City, Dons the Plain Garments and Will Work Among the Poor.

One of the five young women who were graduated from the Deaconess Training School Monday night at the Union Methodist Episcopal church at Forty-eighth street and Eighth avenue, New York, was Miss Lucy Adams, of Plainfield. Those young women donned for the first time the deaconess costume, the plain black gown and close fitting bonnet with white lawn strings. They will enter the service of the poor and suffering at once. The new deaconesses will be attached to the various churches in the city, but they will all live at the Deaconess' Home in West Fourteenth street where the thirty-five Methodist Episcopal deaconesses in New York city live during their time of service. They take no vow, being at liberty to leave the work as soon as they desire.

FOWLER AND ISHAM TO PAY.

Will See To It That Elizabeth's Two New Cannon Are Received With Proper Ceremony.

Representative C. N. Fowler, of Elizabeth, will pay for the transportation of the two cannon loaned to the city to be put on the soldiers' graves on Decoration Day.

E. H. Isham will pay for a band which will head the Grand Army posts and the military and Trinity cadets and other organizations which will turn out on Decoration Day in a parade to Evergreen cemetery. There the soldier dead will be decorated. The day will be most fittingly observed and an unusually large demonstration will be made.

RUN INTO BY A SCORCHER.

Martin McDonald Thrown From Bicycle and Quite Badly Hurt.

While hurrying to Tuesday's fire on South avenue Martin McDonald, a young man whose parents reside on Terrill road, was run into, opposite Scott's Press Works, by another cyclist who was going at full speed. McDonald was thrown nearly fifty feet and when picked up it was at first thought his ribs were broken. He was taken to the hospital, but upon close examination no bones were found broken, but he was badly bruised and suffering from a shock. He was taken to his home, where he will be confined for some time. The wheel was almost a total wreck.

Hand Caught on a Hook.

James McEvoy, a butcher in the employ of B. F. Crane, the Somerset street butcher, sustained a severe injury to his right hand Tuesday afternoon. He was placing a large piece of meat on one of the hooks in the ice box, when the meat slipped and his hand caught the hook, which nearly penetrated it. The man suffered intense pain and at first it was thought that he would lose the hand. He went to John Powers' drug store and had the injured member dressed and it is believed that there will be no serious results.

Rain Saves the Hay Crop.

The farmers of Union county are rejoicing over the heavy rain of the past few days, which has just come in time to save the hay crop. The amount of rain that fell, as registered at the signal service station, was three and thirty-three one hundredths inches.

Wedded on Sunday.

The marriage of Miss Laura M. Chilly, of Cottage place, and William McIntyre, of North Plainfield, was performed last Sunday at the home of the bride by Rev. F. D. Tildon. They will reside in this city.

Walter Emmons, of Jackson avenue, has taken a position with Curtis M. Thorpe.

LINK CONNECTING GOOD ROADS SYSTEM.

Somerset County Freeholders Authorize Macadamizing Important Stretch of Road.

MET AT SOUTH STIRLING.

DECIDED UNANIMOUSLY TO ADOPT AS A COUNTY ROAD.

Official Action Will Be Taken at the Next Regular Meeting of the Board—Great Improvement for the Farmers.

The members of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders made a trip Tuesday afternoon from Stirling to Plainfield by the way of Smalleytown and Watchung. As a result a very important link connecting the great system of macadamized roads along the line of the Jersey Central Railroad and the Passaic Valley will be constructed in the near future. The road from North Plainfield to Watchung is now macadamized, but beyond that there is a stretch of two and a half miles that will be made a county road and put in proper condition.

The roads of Union county have long been famed as bits of recent years the Passaic valley has been marked by the establishment of county roads, properly macadamized, along its length. There has been, however, no means of passing from one road system to the other except by the way of Springfield and Summit or else braving the common country roads across the Watchung mountains.

A meeting of the Somerset County Freeholders was held at South Stirling yesterday afternoon. The Freeholders were taken over the road in question and were unanimous in the opinion that it would be decidedly advantageous to adopt it as a county road and macadamize it. While there are many roads running over the mountain ridges, none are now macadamized and the residents are compelled to encounter plenty of mud and water in wet weather or lots of dust in dry.

The official action of the Board on the matter may be expected at the next regular meeting. All expressed themselves yesterday in favor of the plan. They then adjourned to meet Saturday at the Washington avenue bridge, Somerville, to consider that structure.

A TALK ON GOLF.

S. H. John McCutcheon Gave an Exposition of Rules and Etiquette for Players.

The series of three entertainments for the benefit of the Park Golf Club was concluded Tuesday, when the third of the series was held at the Park Clubhouse on Washington avenue. A fair-sized audience was present.

The first part of the programme consisted of a number of tricks and sleight-of-hand performances by Prof. Henderson, of New York. He was very clever at palming. Fred VanEps gave several banjo solos, while Harry Walton gave some rag-time piano selections.

The entertainment closed with an exposition of the rules and etiquette of golf by S. H. John McCutchen, a member of the green committee of the club. Mr. McCutchen dealt particularly on the necessity of playing in exact accordance with the rules and the great temptation to evade the real spirit of them in a desire to keep the score well down. The golf players of the club listened with interest, but to the others it was rather unintelligible.

ANOTHER FACTORY IN PROSPECT.

Connecticut Manufacturer May Locate Shirt Industry Here.

J. H. Sternlanz, proprietor of a large Connecticut shirt factory, was in town Tuesday on the quest of E. B. Carson, manager of Crosby & Hill's big store. Mr. Sternlanz visited Plainfield with a view of removing his factory to this place. He looked at a number of desirable locations and expressed himself well pleased with the town. His factory, if located here, will employ from 200 to 300 hands.

Injuries Not Serious.

Charles Clapp, the engineer on the Jersey Central Railroad who was injured in a wreck at Peckinstown a few days ago, expected to return to work in a few days. His injuries were not serious.

—Misdirected energy is chasing all over town for white goods when you can get the largest variety, better quality and lowest in price at Peck's.

—A. F. Naylor, who cleans carpets and makes bedding, has opened a place corner of West Front street and Central avenue, over Manning's marble works.

New Bride at Girl Comes Near Losing Her Life in a Westervelt Avenue Home.

There came near being a fatal accident at the residence of James B. Hall, of Westervelt avenue, Monday night, in which a young woman, who had just entered the household that day as a domestic, played the principal role. Before retiring she was warned by Mrs. Hall to be sure and turn off the gas. But she didn't.

The window in her bedroom was left open which is directly accountable for the fact that the young woman is alive today. On retiring she turned the gas partially off and then blew it out. She did not get up to get the breakfast next morning but was found in bed violently ill. She was still unconscious.

Dr. J. H. Cooley was hurriedly summoned and finally succeeded in bringing the young woman back to a more comfortable state. The room was filled with gas but the open window carried much of it away and prevented a fatal ending to the accident.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Winckler Married Forty-Three Years—Pleasant Observance of Event.

CHILDREN'S SILVER SERVICE

Contributions Toward Proposed Gift to the Battle Ship New Jersey to Begin October 15th.

Trenton, May 23.—There was a meeting of the Mayors of cities, School Superintendents throughout the State and members of the State Board of Education, in the Senate Chamber yesterday, to consider the project of having the school children of the State present a silver service to the new battle ship New Jersey.

Those permanent officers were chosen: Governor Mayor Edward C. Hoos, Jersey City; vice-president, Mayor Frank O Briggs, Trenton; secretary, S. Conrad Ott, Camden; treasurer, State Treasurer Swain. Subscriptions in the schools are to be taken during the week beginning October 15th, and no pupil will be allowed to contribute more than 5 cents. The names of all contributors, but not the amounts, will be taken by the teachers and recorded in a book to be presented with the silver service.

TO SERVE WITHOUT PAY.

President of the Senate Says He is Glad to Help Governor Voorhees.

Trenton, May 23—Acting-Governor Johnson was at the State House yesterday and transacted considerable routine business. As a member of the State House Commission, he considered the contract for the building of the new wing to the State House. He made the statement that he would not draw the salary for acting for Governor Voorhees, which would be $37 a day. He said he thought the Governor was entitled to a little vacation, and he was only too glad to be able to help him.

A Summer Engagement.

P. Ludwig Conde, of this city, went to New York last Tuesday to Hotel Kensington, Fifth avenue, where he made a contract with Manager Charles E. Leland, who is also manager of Hotel Childwold in the Adirondacks, to furnish the music at the latter hotel this season. Mr. Conde furnished the music at the Childwold two years ago and his work was greatly appreciated. He will leave Plainfield July 1st. Manager Leland is a brother of the late Mr. Leland who was manager of the Windsor Hotel, New York.

YOUNG MEN WERE HOSTS

PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT AT HOPE CHAPEL TUESDAY.

Music Formed the Principal Part of the Programme—Those in Charge.

One of those pleasant entertainments for which Hope chapel has always been noted was given last Tuesday under the auspices of the Young Men's Association. The chapel was crowded with the friends of the young men who showed their appreciation of each number in the programme by vigorous encores.

The feature of the evening was the Jeanneaud Brothers, a musical team, that played selections on musical bells, glasses, tin cans, flower pots, octarines, banjo and mandolin. Their faithfulness with the different instruments showed them to be thorough artists and they were recalled after each number.

"Mr. Einstein Speaks" and "Campaign Seven Miles Away" were given by John Carney in his usual excellent manner and the audience was kept laughing from start to finish. To say that William M. Runyon sang better than ever would be rather hard, but those who have heard him before are of that opinion. At any rate the Judge rendered two base solos and was obliged to respond two and three times.

At the conclusion of the entertainment refreshments were passed by the young men and selections on the phonograph was given by S. C. Baker, while they were being disposed of. The committee in charge consisted of Charles F. Smith, chairman; George Shrah, Claude Roseberry and David Gordon. The ushers were George Shotah, Robert Faramour, Irving De-Hart and David Gordon.

MORE TIME FOR TROLLEY.

The Ritter-Bliss Syndicate Gets Concession From Springfield Township Committee.

A six months' extension of time was granted to the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company for the construction of its trolley road through Springfield township, to connect with the company's main line at Westfield, at Monday night's meeting of the Springfield Township Committee. The extension was granted on application of Colonel Edwin W. Hine, of the Ritter-Hine syndicate, owners of the road. Colonel Hine wanted a year's extension. Under the old franchise the time would have expired July 1st next, unless the road was in operation.

The application for the extension was made at a former meeting, and as no trolley representative was present last night it is not known whether or not the six months' limit is satisfactory.

The franchise through Springfield was granted to the Elizabeth and Westfield Company last summer. The proposed route along the county was from Springfield through Mountainside to Westfield. Since then opposition to the road has appeared in Mountainside, and a franchise through the place was refused the company. This spring, as there were no indications of constructing the road to Springfield, the officials of that place took the matter up, and the application of a year's extension of time was made.

DIVISION OF FISK PROPERTY.

Many Personal Property of Less Consideration Than Fisk Will be Divided.

Trenton, May 23.—Twenty-one nieces and nephews, twenty five grandnephews and grandnieces, and two greatgrandchildren of the late Jonathan Fisk will each come in for a share of the $60,000 personal estate left by Mr. Fisk.

Vice Chancellor Reed Monday gave a decision to this effect, the matter having been brought into the court by Harvey E. Fisk, trustee of the estate of the late Johnathan Fisk.

The nephews and nieces will receive equal shares, and the grandnephews and nieces will take, by representation, the shares of their respective parents.

The decision is of importance, as it is the first judicial interpretation of the act of March 22, 1899, prior to which all of the personal estate would have gone to the nephews and nieces.

Entertained Home to Tea.

The afternoon reception of the F. M. C. A. on next Sunday will be led by W. W. Carey, the well known locomotive engineer of the Central Railroad. Mr. Cary is a most interesting speaker and his talks are always enjoyed.

Exams Ended to Graduate.

The graduation exercises will be held at Crozier Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa., Wednesday, June 6th, at which time Ernest Crane, of this city, will be graduated.

—The ordinance of baptism will be observed at the First Baptist church next Sunday.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AS CATHOLIC PRIEST.

Silver Anniversary of Ordination of Rev. M. J. Brennan, of St. Joseph's Church.

SPECIAL SERVICES TODAY.

MANY VISITING PRIESTS JOIN IN THE CELEBRATION.

Rev. W. H. Miller was Master of Ceremonies—Committee Whose Efforts Succeeded—Presentations Rendered — Bishop McFaul as Banquet.

A celebration of unusual interest in Catholic circles took place yesterday at 10 o'clock at St. Joseph's R. C. church, when Rev. M. J. Brennan, curate, celebrated the twenty fifth anniversary of his priesthood under most favorable circumstances. There was a very large congregation present. The services were very impressive, consisting of High Mass and special music by the choir.

Rev. W. H. Miller, pastor of the church, was master of ceremonies, and the music was rendered by Father Regan, of Morristown, as deacon; Father Foy, of Jersey City, as sub-deacon, and Father Carey, of Carteret, thurifer. Besides those mentioned there were in the sanctuary Dean Mulligan, of Camden; Father O'Connell, of Perth Amboy; Father Smyth and Father Westman, of St. Mary's church, this city. On account of ordinations, Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, could not attend the services. He arrived at noon and joined in the reception given by Father Brennan at the rectory.

During the services Father Brennan took occasion to thank those present for their attendance, and he asked all to pray for him that he might spend the remainder of his days in God's service and that he might die in peace. He rejoiced in being able to celebrate his twenty-fifth anniversary as a priest, and thanked all heartily for many expressions of love and esteem.

The musical service consisted of the music rendered at this church at Easter time, and was rendered perfectly under the direction of James Bailey. Mrs. LaPorte presided at the organ. Those who sang were Miss Tiny Smith, Miss Kate Eagan, Miss Josie Fitzgerald, Miss Kate Kiely, Miss Kate Duffy, sopranos; Mrs. David T. Kenney, Mrs. Reddy and the Misses Leahy, altos; Jas. Bailey, bass; Mr. LaPorte, tenor.

Father Brennan was born in Ireland 51 years ago, and when a very young man came to this country. His parents settled at Franklin Park, near New Brunswick. He entered school at an early age and finally prepared for the priesthood. He was ordained May 23, 1875, by the Cardinal Prefect in St. John's Lateran church at Rome. After the ordination he went to Seton Hall College as a professor, where he remained for some time. He was then sent to various places to assist other priests. For a time he was an assistant to Bishop Corrigan in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, and after serving at several other places he was sent to the borough as assistant to Father Miller. He has been there two years, during which time he has also acted as mission chaplain in this diocese, and at present is helping Father Scannell at Stony Hill.

Father Brennan's father was famous as a contractor, having built the first macadamized roads in this part of the country. Father Brennan is very popular and highly-esteemed by his people, all of whom wish him long life, gave a banquet at the rectory in honor of the visiting priests, and the event After the services yesterday he that is was celebrated yesterday.

MAGGIE BELLE A TERROR.

Unruly Damsel Proves Just Three Scenes at Home, I

Mrs. Troy Gibson, otherwise known as Maggie Belle Jackson, of Rose street, was one of the principals in a lively scrap on Watchung avenue Tuesday afternoon. She amused herself by swearing and throwing stones at some men employed on the avenue. The men objected and Marshal Kistner arrested the woman and locked her up. When she was arraigned before Mayor Smalley last Tuesday she was fined $5, which sum she paid.

Soon afterwards a complaint was made against the same woman and her mother, Mrs. Rose Jackson, charging them with keeping a disorderly house. The two were arraigned, but Mayor Smalley suspended sentence with a severe reprimand and warning.

AFTER BEING WOUNDED.

What Is the Time, Says Maj. Ransdell, When a Soldier Feels Thoroughly Uncomfortable.

Maj. Ransdell, the new sergeant-at-arms of the senate, who was one of the most popular officials of the Harrison administration, enlisted as a lad in the Union army against the wishes of his clergyman father, an ardent democrat and opponent of the war. Young Ransdell was a fierce and valiant soldier, always in the thickest of the fight, but escaped unharmed until the battle of Shiloh, fought on May 14 and 15, 1864, when he lost an arm. This accident, of course, fixed the details of that historic action firmly in his mind and when in a reminiscent mood Maj. Ransdell tells many interesting stories of that engagement.

"We had reached the enemy's line, in some cases coming to hand to hand conflict, when I was struck by a minie ball, which shattered my right hand," said Maj. Ransdell, telling of his wound, to a New York Tribune correspondent. "At that moment I experienced what every soldier has at some time felt. While we were engaged I knew no fear, but the moment I was disarmed the great danger overpowered me. It would be impossible to describe the awful feelings of the next half hour and until I got under cover. Friends falling on all sides, the death shrieks of my schoolmates resounding in the air, blood and carnage everywhere, made a scene I can never forget. We lost one-half of the company to which I belonged, five were killed outright, 21 were wounded, some of them dying afterward, and two of us lost an arm. But that was the last of the fighting at Resaca; the enemy retreated that night."

SHOCKS THE ENGLISH.

An Ingenious and Amusing Yankee Trick Arouses the Ire of a Cranky British Editor.

The ordinarily dignified British Journal is horrified over the fact that in Boston there is being manufactured and sold an "X-ray camera" which is nothing but a fraud. The camera, with pneumonia ball, is placed in position before a sitter, in front of whose body is placed a sheet, apparently of white paper, without a mark upon it. Behind the body is placed a lamp. The exposure is made by pressing the ball. Gradually the paper loses its whiteness, the various organs of the body quickly depict themselves, first in faint color, then almost immediately in brilliant reds for the lungs, a duller red for the heart, green for the stomach and intestines, and blue for the veins; other parts in black. This result, however, says the Journal, is only a trick. The white piece of paper has previously been painted over with strong and diluted sulphocyanide solution, ferrycoyanide solution, weak and strong, and finally with tannin, the details being supplied by an anatomical drawing over which this paper is placed while the organs are being painted by the various solutions named. The squeezing of the bulb does not, as imagined, open the lens—it simply ejects an invisible spray of solution of ferric chloride from a concealed source upon the paper, the well-known reaction of this salt with the chemicals named producing the various colors. So long as it is understood to be a trick the idea is ingenious and amusing.

Blond Hair for Royalty.

Teutonic peasants were the providers of blonde hair for rich Roman patronesses, who loved the contrast of its flaxen hue with their black eyes. They even had morning wigs, small and tightly curled, of any color, and kept the beautiful, evening ones to wear when receiving their admirers in the evening.

Water is the hardest of all substances to heat, with the single exception of hydrogen gas. The easiest two are mercury and lead, which stand in this respect on nearly the same footing.

The Gossip of the Stage of England and America

The Successes Attained by Edna May, May Irwin and Annie Russell

THEY talk about England being a commercial nation, a country given over to trade rather than a patron of the fine arts, an encourager of what makes for the less material side of life. And this is said in spite of the great interest taken in things artistic by the scions of nobility. Doesn't all the world know what a deep and abiding attraction the stage and green-room have for English lords and sons of lords, and that it is in this environment many of the present great ladies of England have been wooed and won? It is possible that to some it is not clear how these gentlemen deserve exactly the title of patron of art, but at least they serve as inspiration to the artists. If the young actress can keep before her visions of one day possessing a title, a great country place, a town house, the right to move in the upper circles of society, and all the other privileges that belong to ladies, countesses and duchesses, think you she will not be moved to ever put her best foot forward?

Our own Edna May, it is rumored, is ere long to be united to the son of a nobleman and the owner of much gold. This is gossip, but it is also history; one more of those interesting alliances that are strengthening the Anglo-Saxon chain we hear so much about in these days. Not so very long ago, you know, pretty Edna May was the unknown daughter of an unknown mail-carrier in Syracuse, N. Y. At an early age she went on the stage as a chorus singer and began to make something of a name for herself, but it was not till her London appearance that the papers had much to say about her. She had played the Salvation Army lass in De Wolf Hopper's "The Belle of New York" in America, but neither she nor "The Belle" created much of a furor here. They were transplanted to London and immediately became the rage; the whole city went wild over the Salvation Army lass, and Edna May was the talk of the town. "The Belle of New York" played 700 consecutive nights, and Miss May, save for a short vacation in the summer, played her part continuously. She is charming and pretty, and has a very sweet voice.

It is proverbial that the funny folk, the people who make jokes for you and have as their task the provoking to laughter, are a serious-looking lot of fellows; long-faced and solemn-visaged. Well, one of the most popular fun-makers of the day, May Irwin, is an exception to this rule. In appearance she is jolly and plump, and her face even in repose seems just about to break into irrepressible mirth. Farce-comedy is Miss Irwin's line, a line in which only the genius can escape being vulgar, and usually that genius is shown by this deservedly popular entertainer.

Miss Irving was born in Canada, which country probably has not the unhappy reputation of its mother in the matter of jokes. When a little girl of eight May sang in a choir, and while still at the age of hanging braids and short frocks made her debut on the variety stage in Buffalo. This latter was in 1875. In 1877 she joined Tony Pastor and remained with him seven years. After this she was associated with Daly's for four years, but was not very successful with that company. She appeared under Charles Frohman's management in the burlesque "The Poet and the Puppets," when she was guilty of turning loose on the public "After the Ball." In Miss Irwin's play this season, "Sister Mary," the favorite song-successes are: "What Did Mary Do," "I Don't Care to Be Your Lady Friend No More," "Why Don't My Baby Write," "Rocking Song," "He Certainly Has a Soft Spot for Me," "Not the Way to Treat a Lady" and "I Couldn't Stand to See My Baby Lose."

Jerome K. Jerome's play, "Miss Hobbs," which is now running at Powers' theater, in Chicago, with Miss Annie Russell in the title role, has proved such a success this season that Miss Russell has appeared in nothing else. These affairs, verily, are not to be counted on. "Miss Hobbs" was written at Mr. Frohman's request, by Mr. Jerome for John Drew, but Drew and "The Tyranny of Tears" became associated and "Miss Hobbs" would have been laid on the shelf had not Miss Russell been in need of a play. In New York Miss Russell and "Miss Hobbs" at once struck the popular fancy; and at the Duke of York's theater, in London, the play, with Evelyn Millard in Miss Russell's role, was very well liked and is still running there. It seems quite remarkable that the work originally intended for a male star should have been so well suited to female stars, especially, as Mr. Frohman informs us, no change was made save in the matter of title.

Miss Hobbs is a man-hater—a very pretty and well-dressed one. You remember we told you a few weeks ago about her ravishing toilets; about her cream wool, her blue automobile crepe, her blue gauze, the black crepe de chine, the white satin and tulle, the white over pink, the whole bewildering lot. Now here we are telling you right in the beginning how it turns out, for of course a woman with all those gowns is bound to be married before the season is over, and we might as well say outright that in the end the man-hater marries. This is the story more in detail:

Miss Hobbs believes all men are miserable sinners and tries to rescue her women friends from these monsters. She succeeds in breaking off the engagement of her friend, Mildred Farey, to George Jessop, and gets young Miss Kingsearl to leave her husband and live with her. Miss Hobbs calls at the Kingsearl house and meets a Mr. Kingsearl, a cousin, Wolff by name, whom she mistakes for the husband. To prove to Mrs. Kingsearl that her husband is a villain, Miss Hobbs tries to entrap him; pretends she is a housemaid to Miss Hobbs' household and makes an appointment for him to meet her there. At her house he makes love to her, and she arranges for Mrs. Kingsearl to appear on the scene at the time she thinks her appearance would be most dramatic and see for herself what sort of man her spouse is. The wife enters, but finds the Kingsearl before her is not her husband, just her husband's cousin; and Miss Hobbs is made aware of the fact that she has been making love to an unmarried man.

Later Miss Hobbs finds a note book of Wolff Kingsearl's in her garden, in which note-book is entered a bet that the owner will kiss Miss Henrietta Hobbs before six months pass. Miss Hobbs and Miss Farey go out in a boat to Kingsearl's yacht Goodchance to return his lost property, and here affairs come to a climax. Wolff Kingsearl and George Jessop have seen the ladies coming and agree to play a trick on the fair disturber of their peace. The visitors are shown into the cabin, and Jessop and Miss Farey pretend to go away. When Kingsearl and Miss Hobbs are alone he tells her a dense fog has arisen and the boat is drifting out to sea. Under these conditions the screws are turned and promises to become Wolff's docile, trusting wife; the other divided pairs are to be allowed to come together, and there is to be no more exploiting of the woman's wrongs question.

ASTROLOGER.

The Skirts and Bodices of the Spring Fashions

They Both Continue to Display Great Variety as the Season Advances

AS the interspring fashions unfold the skirts continue to display the most variety. But there is in bodices also an infinite variety, but of all the bolero is, of course, predominant, and it appears in many diversities of shapes. But of them all the little short jacket, cut off more or less to show the undervest, is the general favorite. This class of jacket is often carried away from the front in a curve well above the waist, and then the vest is pouched. For the boleros that come squarely to the waist line a folded or even plain vest suits much better than the pouched ones that are worn with the rounded jackets.

In belts there has been introduced from London drawing-room toilettes the swathed belt. It forms an attractive finish under a bolero with fringed sash ends falling usually at the left side.

The yoke of these vests has a portion beneath the bolero that is trimmed as well as that which the jacket does not cover. For these a shaped piece of lace is very popular with soft silk gathered into its edge, and ribbon velvet laid across in straps from the neck to the bust forms another good finish.

But aside from the jackets fitted bodices, too, have many admirers, but dressmakers have discouraged them to such an extent that nine out of ten of the new gowns are being made with some sort of a jacket. Still there are enough of the fitted bodices seen to warrant the assertion that the wearer of one is not entirely out of style, and, for that matter, it is rather hard to find anything that is really out of style at the present time, unless it is the big sleeves of a year or two ago or the plain skirts.

And now for the skirts of the day. If the bolero is the one thing that may be said to be absolutely correct for the corsage, the lack of variety is fully compensated for by the variety shown in the skirts. Yet even with the variety shown there is a predominating style, and that is the side plaited skirt, made with a plain front. This is the style that seems particularly suited to the soft clinging materials that are now in vogue, but to the economical woman it is not attractive because of the fact that a skirt made with these numerous side plaits can never be successfully reconstructed, as the plaiting spoils the material.

Another popular fancy in skirts are the ones that are made plain, with a fullness at the bottom given by the introduction of plaited pieces let in. These pieces make the skirt very full about the feet, but they are too tiresome to become popular as walking gowns.

Some novelties in color schemes are produced in a peculiar manner. Plain cloths of contrasting colors are selected and these are cut into stripe two or three inches wide and then stitched together, alternating the cloths, and the one just overlapping the next at the edge. This gives the effect of plaits without the weight that comes with the really plaited skirts, and is also interesting because of the possibilities in the color scheme.

I saw a gown made in this way a few days ago, the material being two shades of purple faced cloth. The corsage of this had a bolero of the darker shade strapped with pieces of the lighter shade, the jacket opening over a pale Parma satin vest worked in black chenille, and the whole finished by a swathed belt with ends of purple satin fringed with black chenille.

Another pretty gown that will be worn by one of the wealthy belles of New York is of black cloth decoupe worked all over with chenille, the design including large openings, flower shaped, through which are seen lavender-colored raised floral embroideries. The skirt of this charming gown has the pieces inserted as described above, giving it the desired fullness about the feet, and the corsage is a bolero of Parma violet velvet, with vest of lavender silk, with black chenille embroideries on the sleeves and revers, corresponding to those on the skirt.

In still another charming gown the princess style is favored. In this the shape is formed by a series of tiny tucks passing from the bust to the knee, and graduated to the figure. For this gown the material is pearl gray voile. The lower part of the skirt is made plain in front after the tucks end and is embroidered in shades of gray, toning to pink. At the back the skirt is slightly draped under an art buckle.

A beautiful afternoon gown of old blue silk poplin is made with a skirt that fits snugly in front and at the sides with a double box plait in front at the back. There are four bias cut ruffles around the bottom, each one headed with ecru guipure insertion; they form a V in one side, the insertion extending to the waist. Underneath the pretty bolero is a vest of white silk which shows from beneath the rounded bolero of silk poplin, made with handsome appliqué.

A smart check gown in black and white cloth is made with a tight fitting bolero fastened down the front, over a white vest, with a silken cord. The skirt has side plaits at the back, and is cut in Vs around the bottoms and laced with the silken cord.

An attractive afternoon walking suit is of gray satin-faced cloth. The skirt of this has a box plait in front, and side plaits stitched only half way, with a box plait at the back. A bolero jacket cut in deep Vs in front, and piped with green velvet, with strap piece to fasten at one side, and jeweled button to finish.

SARAH DAVIDSON.

The Sleeveless Jacket.

One of the very latest Paris fashions is the black silk bolero or "sleeveless jacket"—very much the same style of "sleeveless jacket" that was worn by our grandmothers over some of their best muslin bodices. This jacket comes to the waist line at the back and slopes down longer at the front to form pointed corners and give the desirable long front line. There is a narrow collar and revers rolling back and leaving the jacket open all the way down the front. The smartest of these jackets are of heavy corded black silk with designs done in jet spangles. Others of them are trimmed with appliques and edged with narrow silk fringe. They will be worn over the sheerest of gowns or with black silk and crepe skirts topped with bodices of plaited chiffon or those of muslin and lace.—Detroit Free Press.

NEW CANCER THEORY.

Sir William Banks, an English Authority, Suggests That Hearty Eating Causes the Disease.

A number of theories have been advanced to explain the development of cancer. Of late years many experts have inclined to the opinion that it is caused by a microbe. Repeated attempts have been made to find the germ, and on more than one occasion the alleged discovery of it has been announced. Thus far, however, these claims have been unsubstantiated. Another interesting suggestion regarding cancer has recently been offered by an English authority, Sir William Banks.

Sir William thinks that some sort of relation exists between cancer and hearty eating, especially of meat. He declares that it is the well-nourished, plump individual, and not the weakling, that is attacked by cancer. In further support of the theory he urges the fact that cancer has been more prevalent since the era of cheaper food and put meat in the dietary of the middle working classes. He points out that of late the most marked increase in the prevalence of cancer has taken place among men, and he insists that it is man, not woman, who has come to eat meat more abundantly than of yore. Again, in England, London and the immediate vicinity of the capital is the scene of the greatest luxury in the matter of food, and also of the most cases of cancer in proportion to population.

To this notion, which is not altogether new, it has sometimes been objected that vegetarians often suffer from the disfiguring disease here under consideration; but Sir William Banks replies that, after all, cancer is not so common in Ireland as in England, and that it is almost unheard of in Egypt and other parts of Africa, where a vegetable diet is the chief if not the exclusive dependence of the people.

Fresh Air for Consumptives.

In the London hospital for consumption the basis of treatment is rest in the open air, graduated exercise and good feeding. No window in the open-air wards is ever closed, and during the cold weather the consumptive patients are kept warm with extra clothing and artificial heat. It is encouraging to note that practically all the early cases and 70 per cent. of all cases improve considerably under the open-air system.

FOR CLEVER FINGERS.

How to Make Several Novel and Useful Little Things.

This is an easy variation of the many devices for recording the progressive feats of the aristocrat of the family. Twenty-seven inches and a half inch wide satin ribbon, a yard of a quarter inch wide satin ribbon to match and a small paper book are needed. The book should be about 3½ inches wide by 4¼ long, should contain about a dozen leaves at least and may be made of any note or other desired paper at hand. Mark half of the ribbon, also a space for a three inch deep fringe at each end, and above the space at one end embroider the words "Baby's Record." Above the words a few scattered flowers can be worked in dainty silks. The flowers can be daisies, snowdrops or forgetmenots or all three.

Put the book in the fold, pierce holes through both ribbon and book, threading the narrower ribbon and out through the holes and tying at the back to secure it. Make the rest of the narrow ribbon into a loop by which to hang up and complete by the three inch fringing at each end of the wide ribbon.

The substantial putting together is intentional, as mothers rarely throw such things away, and baby's first smile, first tooth, first word and first step are events which will never lose their interest.

A Pretty and Handy Workbag For Summer Use.

With the season of seashore and mountains so close at hand many ladies who are given to handy work will be glad to know of a pretty, inexpensive and useful workbag. One that contains pockets for needles and silks and still has plenty of space for the embroidery requires 1½ yards each of figured and plain India silk and 2½ yards of one-half inch satin ribbon.

Cut a six inch square from pasteboard. Cover the outside with the plain silk, and line the inside with the plain silk, fitting it closely. Cut two widths of the figured silk 12 inches deep and two widths of the lining silk nine inches deep. Sew both in place around the six inch square, which serves as a bottom to the bag. Along the remaining edge turn a 1½ inch hem in the figured silk so that it just covers the edge of the lining silk. Make a second stitching one-half inch above. The casing thus made will serve for the drawing strings. Two widths of lining silk six inches deep are gathered and sewed around the edges of the square on the inside of the bag and fastened at intervals against the lining of the bag. A hem is turned along the upper edge and narrow elastic run through and fastened at each end of the pocket.

Four buttonholes are worked in the outside silk of the drawing ribbon casing at points which correspond with the corners of the cardboard bottom. Four drawing ribbons are run through the casing and drawn out through the buttonholes. Tiny bows make a pretty finish for these loops.

Another embroidery bag that is very pretty and inexpensive than the foregoing one is made of one-fourth yard of pure white "butcher linen." Fold the goods lengthwise and embroider the front in delicate clover blossoms and violets. A large monogram in old rose silk floss decorates the other side of the bag. In selecting embroidery silks choose those only which are guaranteed to wash without fading. French seam the bag. Turn a two inch hem and make a one-half inch openwork beestitching. Run a double drawing ribbon of old rose grosgrain ribbon through the hemstitching.

A Pin Banner For Bachelors' Quarters.

This is especially suited for bachelors' quarters. A paper of pins, three-quarters of a yard of ribbon wide enough to carry the paper and soft material for a small flat pincushion are needed. Turn up a hem at each end of the ribbon and secure it with brier stitch or plain sewing. Fold the ribbon in half and brier stitch or neatly fasten the fold in position; embroider the word "Pins" under the fold, which will indicate the right side and show the use of the banner. Make the cushion and fasten it to the lower end of the back ribbon, and above it secure as much of the paper of pins as there is room for. If possible, a few black pins should be included. Add the safety pins and supply a short cord or two brass headed nails for fastening firmly to the wall.

ROSMAH H. TODD.

THE SILK COAT.

It Is the Very Latest Thing and Promises to Become Popular.

The newest agony is the silk coat. This is made of black taffeta or some other black silk, but the preference is for the light weight taffeta, and the crisp surface of that stuff is really very stylish and becoming. They are several styles of making these, some preferring the short Eton and others liking the short box coat and still others having a preference for the half long sack coat. This is susceptible of so many different ways of treatment that there are ladies like it, as they can have any kind of ornamentation put upon it, and, besides, the shape can be modified to suit each one.

The model style of this kind of coat is made of black corded silk, and the shape is that of a three-quarter sack. It is lined with a soft silk having very little weight. Around the bottom and on the sleeves there is a very rich pattern of silk embroidery. Just a few beads are sewed along the lines of embroidery, enough to brighten up the whole. Around the neck there is a full ruff of lace and crepe lisse, and at the back there is a bow of black ribbon with fringe ends.

The shape can readily be understood by a glance at the illustration. In this instance the coat is worn over a dress of the new black woolen stuff. This has a silk warp, and the figures are all as black as the proverbial crow, but the way it is woven makes it seem to have a dozen shades of gray and black where it is all one shade in the proper light. There are three fan shaped insets on the skirt which allow it to flare gracefully.

However much one may want to forget the shirt waists, it is impossible, as every day sees some new fancy never before shown, and it becomes a duty to tell all there is to say about them. The newest waists are marked by simplicity and are scarcely more than the old French waists drawn down the least little bit to form the beginning of a pouch which is never finished and has just a little fullness at the front.

The neck is finished with a soft band, and this can be turned down and a lace tie worn over it, and this gives one many chances to make changes.

The pure white shirt waist made of nainsook and kindred stuffs is a favorite, and in fact so are all the thin ones, and no one could tell all about them. But this one may say—the white waists have driven the wonderful rumchunds waists out of fashion, for there are seldom any new handkerchief waists to be seen any more. The most elegant of all the newest waists are of some fine white material, and their name is legion.

Some of these are so finely tucked and embroidered that they might as well be cloth of gold, as far as price is concerned, and they require as fine work on the cuffs and cover as on the outside. They are sheer and thin and altogether lovely. A few are of white taffeta and are made very plainly, having only a few plaits or gathers at the center each side of the front plait.

The stout ginghams and madras are preferred for hard wear, and in fact the fashion is now so elastic that any one can have and wear what she likes best, provided it looks well upon her. Even the question of washing and ironing is no longer a matter of moment, since the short skirt has become such an important factor in our present century. All women now know that the short skirt is easier to wear any time, and there is anything like sport going on. It is suitable for golf and wheeling and also for long constitutional walks. The always well liked Norfolk jacket is just now considered the most stylish of the jackets particularly adapted for outdoor wear.

The new shoes are made with wide soles which extend beyond the uppers, and they have an appearance by no means inviting, but they must be thought comfortable. They are shorter and heavier than they were and have round toes—that is, the most of them have, but there are a few who think the pointed toes look more dressy. The Oxfords and the Newport ties are shorter than before for a generation, and they are wider and, let us hope, more comfortable.

SUMMER SKIRTS.

Nothing Decidedly New in Shape to Be Expected.

The thinner the material used the angler the folds are at the back of the skirt. Many gowns of sheer summer fabrics have the skirt carefully formed and shaped by insertions and bands of trimming, while the goods for the waist are in the piece, to be made up as desired.

Thicker will be worn all summer. They are long and are beautifully finished with fringe. A plain skirt is more suitable for a young girl, however, although tunics are used occasionally in juvenile costumes.

Skirts with plaits in front have been attempted, but are not acceptable. It requires a very slender figure to look well in them. The front of the skirt is usually quite flat and plain. Just how long plaited and tucked skirts will be worn cannot at present be safely predicted, but certainly all summer, so it is safe to plan the warm weather wardrobe on that understanding.

The illustration shows a gown of pink bengaline. The skirt, which is plain in front, has three stitched plaits at each side and a watteau plait at the back. The bodice, tight fitting behind, has two plaits in front, which at the top form a sort of collar corded with black velvet. This collar is continued to the waist by fine plaitings of white crepe de chine with black velvet dots. The half length sleeves are of the same kind of crepe de chine, and have cuffs of pink bengaline, corded with black velvet. The plastron and collar are of puffed mousseline de sole. Gold buttons form the decoration, and a black velvet belt is worn. The leghorn hat has a twisted brim with pink mallows under the left side. It is trimmed with black plumes and a jeweled buckle.

The illustration shows a summer cape of changeable silk. It is short, reaching only to the elbows, but has long ends in front. The silk is covered with a latticework of narrow black velvet ribbon. A yoke is simulated by a bertha of black chantilly, and a ruffle of lace borders the cape, headed by a little puffing of black mousseline de sole. The ends are finished with deep ruffles of black lace, with a plaiting of the narrow lace, and a lace jabot ornaments the front. The collar is of black mousseline de sole.

Unique Receptions Planned for the People of Washington.

John R. McLean's Country Place Near the National Capital to Be Converted Into a Semi-Religious Retreat.

A series of outdoor Saturday afternoon receptions has been planned for the summer by Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean, of Washington.

The wife of the democratic leader and editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer and Mrs. McLean are among the most princely entertainers in that city of elaborate and costly functions it would be reasonable to expect that the summer receptions would be arranged for the Washington world of fashion and position. But they are not. They will be outings for the people; they will all take place at Mr. McLean's country seat Tenallytown, a suburb of Washington. The United States Marine band probably will be engaged for the receptions, and on a platform in a beautiful grove the government's best musical organization will play during all the waning half of the day of rest such selections as "Hold the Fort for I am Coming." The crowds will have the freedom of grounds that comprise about 75 acres, which nature has endowed with many grassy knolls and shady nooks. To these refreshing scenes the people can go from the heart of the heated, red-brick and asphalt city in half an hour by electric car, and immense crowds are expected, because there will be no formal programme, except that of the music; no limitation in the invitation, as regards race, color or position. The outings will be announced by Washington pastors from their pulpits. It is believed that the response will be as prompt as widespread.

The country place which will be used for these outings of a semireligious nature, says the Chicago Daily News, is called "Friendship." It formerly was a retreat for Georgetown monks.

JOHN R. M'LEAN.

(Will Open His Summer Home as a Resort for the Public.)

Then, by way of contrast, it became the property and home of the Country club. Later a Richmond (Va.) syndicate bought it, and two years ago the place was sold to John R. McLean, who will open it again to be used for religious purposes.

It was reported that the open-air receptions were to take place at Beauvoir, a beautiful country home near Washington. But Beauvoir has been leased to Mr. McLean's brother-in-law, Admiral Dewey, for the summer. The property is owned by Francis G. Newlands, the millionaire young congressman from Nevada.

Mr. McLean, though known throughout the country as a distinguished Othioan, spends a large part of his time in Washington. His residence, a few blocks north of the white house, occupies nearly half a block, and in the course of every social season is the scene of most brilliant receptions and dinners. He owns a great deal of valuable real estate in the best part of Washington, and democratic politicians and other prominent persons who know him well tell you that he usually can be found about ten o'clock in the morning "at the gas office." Mr. McLean is president of the Washington Gaslight company, and at the hour mentioned a caller, these days, is pretty sure to find from two to a dozen democrats of note waiting in the Cincinnati editor's anteroom. A colored messenger is on guard at the hall door, which reveals a view of the private office beyond, but Mr. McLean himself operates the door between his large private office and the anteroom. On a recent morning he received and bowed out four men in less than 20 minutes, the consultations of each one being behind the closed door. The scene was suggestive of a busy day in those upper rooms of the white house where callers cool their heels.

Pine Needles in Commerce.

The pine needles of south Oregon are being utilized, says the New York Evening Post. The needles are first boiled in water to which is added natural wooden rollers, which extract the juice. This is called pine needle oil, which is supposed to possess medical properties. The pulp is used as a medicated material for upholstering, and is also said to be a good substitute for horsehair. It is said that insect pests will not live in furniture that has been upholstered with pine needles.

The Energy of Sheep.

The sheep possesses a less degree of nervous energy than the horse, ox or pig, but it is capable of enduring great extremes of heat and cold with less inconvenience and possesses a more vigorous digestion than those animals.

ECONOMY IN DRESS.

The Secret of Making a Good Appearance on Small Expenditures.

One of the great problems of everyday life is how to dress tastefully and with due regard for the prevailing style and yet with reasonable economy. That there are many who solve the problem satisfactorily, and only after years of painstaking and patient study.

The secret of success lies to a great extent in the choice of materials. Fancy fabrics in new designs and novel arrangements of color attract the majority of young and dressy women, and flimsy stuffs with dressy possibilities are irresistible temptations to them. They buy these fabrics, and pay good prices for having them made up, for only an artist can handle them successfully. The dresses are worn a few times, when they become faded, or draw in the seams, or a few rain-drops make ugly spots, and they become worthless for best dresses. There is never in an imperative demand for something new, and the same ground is gone over again, with the same results.

Of course, this sort of thing is excellent for trade, and pleasing to dressmakers, and all that can be said to those who can afford to wear such goods and have them replaced every new moon, but the woman who would be economical must put all these temptations away from her, for economy in dress means the purchase only of excellent fabrics, mostly in plain colors, and these must be made in styles as simple and plain as possible.

Some women are always in exaggeration of the fashion. When trains are worn theirs are at least half a yard longer than those of other people; when high sleeves are in vogue theirs cover their faces. The woman who would be well dressed must remember that there is no greater error than exaggeration in dress, and to push a fashion to the extreme is to suggest the grotesque. We often blame fashion for ridiculous excesses, when it is the exponents of fashion who by their exaggerations bring scorn and ridicule upon it. Any fashion in excess degenerates into vulgarity, and the wearer of such exaggerations is deficient in refinement and good taste.

A high-grade silk-warp clothlike black, made up stylishly, but in a plain fashion, and finished with a little elegant garniture, is one of the most useful and becoming of garments. It is also inconspicuous, and may be worn repeatedly without exciting comment. A handsome black dress may be worn again without exciting unpleasant comment, or it may be changed in appearance by the use of a few trifling variations in the way of neck-dressing trimmings or by the introduction of a bit of color.

Another useful costume would be a black china crepe trimmed with lace or ruffles of the same material. Provide several sets of ribbons, one set black and the others of whatever hints or tones are the most becoming and appropriate. In buying ribbons avoid high colors or fancy patterns, and above all get a good quality. Cheap ribbons do not belong in the wardrobe of the economical woman, neither do cheap fabrics of any sort. Everything she buys must be first-class, and all garments must be well made to be profitable.

In outside garments—wraps, cloaks and the like—the economical woman must be to all appearances extravagant. That means that she must buy the best and richest material, goods that do not depend upon show, but intrinsic worth, for their effects. Novelties, or what are usually called stylish patterns, are not her wisest selections. Richness and elegance, not showy styles and materials, must be the economical woman's dependence if she would achieve satisfactory results.—Farm and Fireside.

A GREAT SPLURGE.

The Picturesque Downfall of a Young Man Who Tried to Make an Impression.

He is from the aristocratic old town of Richmond and visiting in Detroit. Being young, pleasing and susceptible, it was inevitable that he will become enamored of some fair local belle. She happened to be one of the most enthusiastic patrons of the skating rink. To her there is no sweeter music than the ring of the steel upon the ice.

"Oh, yes, I skate." In answer to her inquiry. "Ce'tainly. I love the sport. So exhil'ta'in' and healthy, don't you know? Could we go this evenin'?"

They went. She entered the rink, her cheeks aglow and eyes sparkling. He looked about him in a dazed way, shivered and felt faint. "Thought it was rollah skatin'," he muttered to the boy who was adjusting his skates. Nevah pehfo'med on the ice in my life, you know. Reckon I'm in fo' it, shuah. Kindah lingeh near me on the go off, boy," and the lad closed his grimy fist over half a dollar.

"Ah we ah'," announced Mr. Richmond with an uncertain bow as she took his arm and the boy whispered to go slow at first. But she knew nothing about going slow. She was keen as a razor horse and struck out as though for a record. He took his first step and tried the roller motion. He will never be able to describe the events of those two seconds.

Eye witnesses declare that it was something more than a kaleidoscopic fix. The air was full of feet, warm winter colors and screeches. The belle slid 40 feet with her nose as a brake. The boy was pulled from under Richmond, fat as a cornob, hat by request.

Mr. Richmond declared that it was a mere nothing. Skate must have loosened and slipped. All that he claimed was a "broken collah bone and a slight concussion," but the bone was enough to carry a well arm in a sling and she wears a ring.—Detroit Free Press.

MAKES GOOD SCORES.

Indiana Girl of Sixteen Has Shooting Records Which Make Already Won Fame for Her.

Miss Edith, daughter of W. D. Rickel, of Auburn, Ind., is developing rare skill with the gun, and promises soon to equal the average sportsman of the country. Rickel's record, except the trap only dates from January 1, this year, and her rapid advancement has created a sensation among the lovers of that sport, and her scores have been prominently mentioned by the trade papers.

Miss Edith's mother died last summer, and since she has taken the arduous responsibility of keeping house for her father and at the same time attending school, she incidentally took up the gun. She is only 16 years of age, weighs 135 pounds, and stands five feet high. She is a splendid example of "the best type of Hoosier beauty." Her large, dark eyes, black curly hair and charming good nature make her a noticeable figure wherever she goes.

Her love for the field sport came to her like a vision, and, afide expressing a fond desire to take up the gun, she was the recipient from her father of an exceptionally good Winchester, weighing 7½ pounds. The services of Mr. Romeo Tarney, of Auburn, were also secured, and he, being a marksman of recognized ability, soon had her started off, and before first experience at the trap was on January 8, 1900, when she shot at 50 targets, ten yards rise, known trap and angles, scoring 29 out of a possible 50.

On January 16, her second attempt at the trap, she shot 73 birds in strings of 20 at 16 yards rise, scoring first 25, 17; second 25, 18, and third 23, 13, or a total of 84. On January 24 she shot at 75 targets, breaking 57 in 20 yards and steady hill. Yesterday run of 29 from the tenth to the thirty-ninth bird. On January 31 she shot at 40 targets 21 yards, scoring 37. On February 8 she shot at 30 targets, unknown angles and trap, 16 yards rise, scoring 20 breaks. On this day a stiff north breeze made the flight of the targets very irregular.

The score which Miss Edith has made in the field and marsh is also a good one, and proves she not only possesses more skill than the average sportsman. It is not an uncommon occurrence for her to come in from the marshes with plenty of game, especially rabbits. Recently she received a fine Irish setter dog from the well-known kennels of W. R. Lyons, of Piqua, O., and to say that she now thoroughly enjoys the sport is a mild expression. It is predicted by local sportsmen that, with no fatality, a few months hence, Miss Edith will rank among the best trap shooters of her sex in America.

BALL-ROOM ETIQUETTE.

Customs Which Polite Society Approves as Being in Good Form and Quite Correct.

When a man is presented to a young woman at a dance he usually says almost at once: "May I have the pleasure of this dance?"

After dancing and walking about the room for two or three times the young man may take the girl back to her chaperon and plead another engagement—or better, she suggests that he take her to her place near her mother or chaperon.

The lady is the one to first intimate her desire to stop dancing.

If a man holds a girl too tightly she should drop her hand from his shoulder, so as to bring it between her partner and herself. If he does not take the hint let her stop dancing at once under some pretext so evident that he may realize her displeasure or disapproval.

A chaperon should not be inciting in personal gaiety; nor should she dance while her charge is unprovided with a partner.

A girl should be attentive to her mother or her chaperon, presenting her friends to her and occasionally stopping to say a few words.

Both young men and maidens should be careful to remember that their dancing engagements must be kept.

A girl must not refuse to dance with a man under some pretext, and then dance with another; neither should she dance with the same man more than two or three times.

A young man invited to a house should dance as early as possible with the daughters of his hostess, and pay them every possible attention.—Mrs. Burton Kingsland, in Ladies' Home Journal.

HELPED THE POSTMAN.

New Orleans Dog Took Great Pride in the Performance of a Self-Imposed Duty.

"I lost a faithful friend and helper a few days ago," said a letter carrier whose route lies below Canal street. "He was a yellow dog, and I must confess his appearance in the early autumn of last year was not especially engaging. His hide was the color of cheap soap, and he had the disreputable, skulking, troughish bearing peculiar to yellow dogs generally, but for all that he was a gentleman at heart. We met in the way of business. His owner was what letter carriers call a 'throw-out;' in other words, he lived two extra long squares from his nearest neighbor, and to deliver the mail he received almost every day he would have four-square walk for each batch. Four squares means a good deal to a tired carrier, and as a rule 'throw-outs' are anything but popular with the craft, but soon after I took the route I found that was really half human. Sometimes, for instance, he would be a little late and find me on the way to the house when he got out of the yard. Then it was comical to see him come prancing up the street, his tail in the air and saying, as plainly as he could: 'Stop! Hold on! I'm here! Don't budge another inch!' On such occasions he would always insist on going back to the corner, and then, with the air of an official officially for the delivery of mail matter.

"You can judge whether I became attached to him. Often he would be waiting for me, cocking his head to one side and feeling the importance of his yellow stump of a tail to his yellow stump of a nose. If I had nothing for him he showed his dejection and disappointment as plainly as a man, but as soon as he saw me sort out a few letters he would give a sharp, joyous bark that sounded enough like a laugh to be the real thing. When his owner met me the other day and told me he was dead I couldn't say a word to save my life. I turned and left the house, and before I knew it I was blubbering like a fool."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

BRUIN STEALS A SLED.

And Then He Coasts Down a Steep Hill to His Great Sorrow and Mortification.

There were five brothers of us, and we lived in a house in Vermont at the top of a long and steep hill. Father built us a stout sled to coast on in the winter, and the five of us used to get on and go whizzing down the hill and away across a meadow. When there was plenty of snow the sled would run for half a mile.

One afternoon, after we had been coasting for three or four hours, we left the sled at the top of the hill without making it fast. That night, about ten o'clock, a bear came prowling around the house, and our dog made such a noise that we were all aroused. There was a bright moon, and we looked from the windows to see what had disturbed the dog. Almost at once we made out the bear. He was walking around the sled as if wondering what it was used for. Pretty soon he stopped and put a paw on it. Then he put up the other paw. Then what did he do but pull himself up and stand and look about! The sled was pointed down hill, and the movement of the bear started it off. We thought he would jump off, but he didn't. He dug in his claws, and the sled began to go faster and faster, and we got so excited that we gave three cheers. When the steepest part of the hill was reached the bear seemed to get scared. Never before had he gone at a pace like that. Had he kept still the sled would have gone straight at the foot, but he jumped to and fro, and suddenly the sled left the track and ran over one hard snow and struck a stone wall with a great crash.

That was as far as the sled went, as it was badly broken up, but the bear kept on. When the sled struck the stones he went flying ten feet high, and next day we found that he came down ten feet beyond the wall, and then rolled down hill for 100 feet before he could stop himself. He must have been badly frightened, for as soon as he could get on his legs he ran for the woods and was heard of no more. He was probably the only bear in America who ever coasted on a hand-sled, but one trip was enough for him.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Successful Affair.

The dinner given by the Democrats of this city Saturday evening was a complete success in every way. Notwithstanding that two of the scheduled speakers—William B. Gourley, chairman of the State committee, and Congressman Sulzer—found it impossible to come at the last moment, there was a representative and prominent gathering of Democratic leaders from many sections of the State.

The best of feeling prevailed among all the guests, although in past some of those present have vigorously disagreed as to political policies. There had been no intention to make the dinner other than a pleasant social feature for those present, and to incidentally, in a general way, aid in the promotion of Democratic principles leading up to Democratic candidates who will be named in a few weeks. There was a good deal of plain, good-natured talk on the part of all, however, and undoubtedly those who have had differences in the past left the dinner understanding each other better. If this is so, then some political good has been accomplished from a Democratic standpoint.

So far as State matters are concerned there was one thing practically settled. That is, James E. Martine will be one of the delegates-at-large to represent New Jersey at Kansas City. Robert Davis, the Hudson county leader, is regarded as the most powerful partisan in the State—the one man who can absolutely control 178 votes in the State convention. Mr. Davis has a reputation of being exceeding diplomatic and shy about expressing his prefe rences for such positions as delegate-at-large so far ahead of the real time of making selections. But at the dinner he authorized the quiet, frank statement before the assembled guests that Hudson county's 178 delegates would be for Mr. Martine. It was a great compliment to Mr. Martine and a deserved recognition of his sterling partisanship.

Mr. Martine's Prospects.

There are other political indications appearing on the political horizon to indicate that it is very probable that James E. Martine will be one of the "Big Four" delegates to represent the New Jersey Democrats at the National convention in Kansas City.

There has been much speculation as to who the "Big Four" would be, but in every alleged slate that has been made the name of William B. Gourley, chairman of the Democratic State committee, has been mentioned. Mr. Gourley will not be a delegate-at-large, however, as was determined yesterday when the Passaic county delegates to the State convention were instructed for Mr. Gourley for district delegate. This action was taken because Mr. Gourley had decided not to accept the honor of being one of the "Big Four." He prefers that Middle and South Jersey shall be represented in this respect.

Mr. Martine has been the one Democrat in Middle New Jersey that has been prominently mentioned in connection with the delegate-at-large question, and the position taken by Mr. Gourley would seem to be highly favorable to the "Farmer Orator's" prospects. Some of the most prominent and influential leaders in the Democratic party in the State have assured Mr. Martine, without solicitation, that they shall aid and strive to elect him as one of the "Big Four."

That observing and trenchant correspondent who signs himself "Trenton" in the New York Herald, has this to say of the attack on Chancery Clerk Thompson' official work: "It would seem as if the attack upon the Chancery Clerk grew out of the irritability and impudence of Vice Chancellor Pitney. He is the most irascible man on the New Jersey Bench, and has the reputation of finding fault with young lawyers in the most nauseous way whenever they blunder or make mistakes. They hold the stern old justice in as much awe as did the 'leading trombone' Goldenrich's village schoolmaster. He whom some of them were sharply brought up for correction they made a scapegoat of the Clerk in Chancery and told it all on him. Whereupon the irate Vice Chancellor promptly decided that the clerks must be hauled over the coals. The truth probably is that the lawyers themselves made the mistakes. These Bob Davis as a Speaker.

Robert Davis, the Hudson county leader, has never been regarded as much of a speech-maker, but the dinner given by the Democrats of this city has shown him up in a new light. Mr. Davis was among those scheduled to respond to a set toast. When he responded after the dinner his remarks were made up of a number of extemporaneous observations that were of lively interest to partisans, and though the Hudson county man possessed none of the subtle art of oratory or the ready flow of well-fitted words that characterized the talk of of some of the other guests, he spoke in a witty and trenchant manner and won the enthusiastic applause of his fellow-guests.

But that is not the best of it. Yesterday's Jersey City Journal printed a story of the dinner, an important part of which was the remarks that Mr. Davis was supposed to have made Saturday evening. But a perusal of them shows that no one heard them at the dinner. It is evident that they were prepared beforehand by the sagacious Hudson county man and probably handed to a reporter, and why Mr. Davis did not deliver his toast as he had prepared it is a mystery but probably it was because he was suddenly afflicted with the malady known as "stage fright"—a disease that frequently manifests itself in those who are not experienced and skilled in the business of public talking.

Whatever the cause and effect was, however, the fact is demonstrated that Mr. Davis "got there" in good shape, and that he has made a good start in the speech-making business and may yet add to his reputation as an orgasizer the pleasant title of "after dinner speaker."

According to the Jersey City Journal here are some of the latest bits of gossip about New Jersey's programme at the Republican National Convention. General Sewell will again be at the head of the delegation, and this will be the eighth National convention that he has attended. In all of them he was one of the leaders on the floor of the convention. The personnel of both the delegates and the alternates is good, and all of them, excepting General Sewell, are serving as delegates for the first time. Barker Gummere, in the convention that nominated McKinley, was an alternate for delegate-at-large. New Jersey expects to get considerable recognition in the convention, because it has come permanently into the Republican column. Senator Sewell will serve on the committee on resolutions and will have considerable voice in the formation of the platform. There has been no conference of the delegates and the wants of the individual members have not been made known. It is definitely settled that there will be no contest over the National committeeman. It remains just as it was at the close of the State convention. The honor will go to State Chairman Franklin Murphy and will be a unanimous compliment.

That there can possibly be no polities in the official scheme to preserve the Palisades is evidenced in the appointment of commissioners by Governor Roosevelt, of New York, to aid in deciding upon an effective plan to consummate the plan. Mr. Roosevelt appointed residents of New Jersey to the commission, thus demonstrating that the positions were never heard of at those famous breakfasts with Tom Platt. The Governor's selections are Franklin W. Hopkins, Irvin A. Stevins, Abram S. Hewitt, William L. Lewis and Abram Decord, all of New Jersey.

The Boston Herald remarks that the Filipinos have sacrificed more for the cause of Independence than have the Boers, and adds: "If the situations were reversed and we were fighting the Boers and the English were fighting the Filipinos, one may be sure that the same inconsistency in judgment would be shown. Our contest against the Boers would then be looked upon as righteous and praiseworthy in the extreme, while Filipino delegates to the United States would be welcomed as representing the aspirations for freedom entertained by a long downtrodden people."

It would be a pretty dull session of Congress if a bill didn't appear providing for the construction of a government building in Elizabeth. And so it is that Senator Kean has introduced a bill providing for such an improvement, the proposed cost of which is $180,000. The thing that prompts the measure is undoubtedly the old saying that "Keeping everlastingly at it wins success."

The State convention of New Jersey Democrats, to be held at Trenton May 31st, will be called to order by C. Meyer Zulick, of Monmouth county, a lawyer of prominence, who was Governor of Arizona under President Cleveland.

WHAT'S TO BE DONE WITH SEWAGE BEDS?

Will They Be Enlarged or Will a Trunk Sewer Be Built to Tidewater?

COUNCIL MUST DECIDE IT.

PROMINENT CITY OFFICIAL TALKS ON THE SITUATION.

Present Facilities of Sewage Disposal Beds Are Not Enough—The Council for 1900 Will Have to Face the Situation.

Before the term of office of the Common Council of 1900 is over that municipal body will be compelled to grapple with one of the most important questions that the local legislators have had to face for a decade. It's the old question of sewage disposal, only viewed from a somewhat different standpoint. Before the Council had to decide on a method of caring for the city's sewage. Now the system is here and its success is questioned. The growth of the city demands increased facilities, and it's a question whether to enlarge the present system of sewage disposal beds or to build a trunk sewer to tidewater.

The importance of this question, so soon to come before the Council, is appreciated by many of the city officials, and they are quietly studying out what seems to them the best way of meeting it. Much reticence has been shown, however, in talking of the situation.

A prominent city official stated to a Press reporter the other afternoon a few facts concerning this question of sewage disposal and the probable outcome of it all.

"The Council," he said, "cannot possibly get away from this problem and the labor of solving it will undoubtedly begin this fall. There are those suits against the city brought by Mrs. Milliken and others to recover damages as a result of the establishment of the sewer beds in their present location. I believe Corporation Counsel Marsh will win them, but he may not.

"The number of sewage disposal beds now in use is not sufficient to care for all the city. There must be additions to the establishment if it is to be continued. Then there are still many houses in Plainfield which are not connected with the sewer system at all. They too must be provided for. That will mean a still greater increase in the establishment.

"The success of the beds has been disputed. It has been proved that they can be successfully used if given proper care and attention. That means a yearly expense that will surely increase as the size of the sewage disposal establishment grows.

"It is a question whether it would not be better to have the city start without beds and construct a trunk sewer to tidewater and thus provide a sure means of disposing of the city's sewage for years to come rather than going on to enlarge a plant that the city may, at any time, be compelled to give up and the present successful management of which is so often questioned. With a sewer to tidewater, the sewage disposal question would be disposed of indefinitely.

"The only feasible destination for such a sewer would be into Raritan Bay. If it emptied into the Raritan river above New Brunswick, it would only be a question of a few years before that city would be able to compell us to find a new outlet. Of course the building of such a sewer would be an expensive piece of work. It is a question whether we would be justified in handling the city so heavily.

"It's into some, however, to say what course we ought to take. The matter will only be decided after long and careful consideration. It is important, however, that every citizen give the question careful thought and be able to give his Councilman an intelligent opinion. It isn't for the Council alone to decide. It will be of great importance to every citizen and tax payer, and to the latter named Councilmen the Committee will turn when the time comes."

Heavy Fall of Rain.

Weather Observer Naegly reports Saturday's rainfall as 2.35 and that for the entire storm of Friday and Saturday, 2.97.

DISGRACEFUL CONDUCT.

Desecration of Sunday by Ball Players Opposite Cemetery on Chatham Street.

Residents of Chatham street, in the vicinity of the cemetery, have complained at this office concerning the disgraceful condition of affairs that prevails every Sunday in the vacant field opposite the cemetery. Boys and men congregate there and indulge in baseball playing and make a nuisance of themselves.

Sunday there was a prize fight as an additional attraction. A ring was formed and all the things that go with a regular fight. These crowds usually spend all of Sunday at this place and after they have emptied any number of bottles of intoxicating liquid they are in good condition to disturb the peace and quietude of the neighborhood.

Those who have complained about these things say that the marshals do not show themselves at this place and never make any effort to stop the disgraceful practices that occur regularly on Sundays.

KNOCKED OUT.

White Man Fought With Colored Pugilist in a Local Livery Stable.

It only took two rounds to decide a fistic encounter secretly held in a local stable Saturday evening. The participants were from this city, one a white man and the other a colored man. They quarreled over a remark made by one of them and agreed to settle the matter in a ring, at the same time battling for a purse of $25 that some of the sporting men of the city agreed to put up. In the first round the colored man knocked down his opponent three times. After the second round had lasted 2 minutes and 25 seconds, a blow in the neck put the white man out of business for good. Considerable money changed hands on the result.

Hotel Netherwood Again.

Major R. W. Coleman has taken possession of the Hotel Netherwood and will open it for the summer June 2d. The name Hotel Hunterston will be dropped by that well known hostelry and the original one, Hotel Netherwood, resumed. At present the whole establishment is being put in order for the opening.

A Better Choir.

A number of additions have been made to the choir at the First M. E. church which has just passed under the charge of Charles L. Lewis. Mr. Lewis' singing has been very satisfactory to the congregation and they are greatly pleased with the results already shown of his direction of the choir.

Fear a Short Hay Crop.

The Warren country farmers fear a short hay crop and do not even expect it to equal last year's crop, which was a very light one, owing to the recent frost, but the other fruit trees appear to have stood the cold better and from present indications there will be large crops of peaches, pears and apples.

House of Late William Ayres Sold.

The house on West Second street, owned by the late William Ayres, was sold at auction Saturday afternoon to Dr. Samuel Ayres, of "The Franklin," on Eleventh street, New York, a son of the late owner. The price paid was $3,400. William Pangborn was auctioneer.

Chimney on Fire.

The fire department was notified by a still alarm Saturday night that the chimney of Stephen Cahoone's house, on Watchung avenue, was on fire. The Chief's wagon and No. 2 hose wagon responded. The fire was put out with the extinguishers.

Smashed His Finger.

Monroe Squire, of Astor place, had a narrow escape from losing a finger while at work in Pond's Saturday. The finger was drawn into a gear and badly smashed but it is thought that with careful treatment it can be saved.

Fined $2.

"Larry" Wallace, of Fanwood, who was arrested Saturday night in the borough for being drunk and disorderly, was fined $2 Monday night by Mayor Smalley.

BOB DAVIS' SPEECH THAT WASN'T HEARD.

Jersey City Journal Publishes Remarks That Hudson County Leader Had Prepared.

BUT HE DID NOT DELIVER.

ORGANIZATION NECESSARY TO POLITICAL SUCCESS.

Declares That New Jersey is Democratic Today and That Defeat Has Only Come Through Disorganization of Party Forces.

At the Democratic banquet given at the Hotel Kensington Saturday evening by the Democrats of this city, Robert Davis, the Hudson county leader, who was to respond to the toast of "What Can be Accomplished by United Action," said that he had prepared a speech for the occasion, but that Senator VanCleef, who preceded him, had taken the words out of his mouth, and he was perplexed to know what to say. Then Mr. Davis proceeded to talk in an extempore manner, during which he indulged in some plain talk about Democratic organization matters. The gist of it was printed in The Daily Press Monday.

Judging by the account of the dinner printed in the Jersey City Journal, Mr. Davis really did have a speech prepared. But he did not deliver it here. The Hudson county leader evidently thought that it ought to reach the ears of some Democrats, however, and he furnished a copy of it to The Journal, which printed it in the account of the dinner in Monday's paper. It is as follows:

"The subject which your worthy toastmaster has seen fit to assign to me the honor of responding to, "Organization," is so vast in its meaning, that hours, instead of minutes, would be required to do the subject justice. Organization enters into everything and without it disorder would reign. Governments are immense organizations having their separate parts, made up or assembled into the vast body. Armies are in like manner the product of organization, without which the soldiers composing them would simply be a mere rabble. Successful effort in any direction is possible only through organization.

"Inasmuch as the subject has been chosen for me to speak on I suppose, from its political, rather than from its broader outlook, I am competent to say that the success or failure of parties is due to the perfection or the imperfection of their respective organizations. The prestige of organization, and the party being properly fitted for a fight, is an element of strength that can hardly be calculated. That is why it is necessary to the success of the Democratic party that wherever its members may be located and no matter how small they may appear in numbers, they should, in the language of the day, 'get together' and make their village, or their township organizations. They are the pickets or outposts of the Democratic party which may be rallied at the trumpet call of their leaders for offense or defense, as the call may demand.

"It is the practice in war to reward by special marks of distinction, or promotion, the man who leads the forlorn hope, or does some exceptional deed of valor; in short, it is the man who does, or the men who do the work, who are rewarded. In like manner, in political struggle, the workers who are really 'the men behind the gun,' should receive the first consideration in rewards by their party. No matter how influential a man be, or imagine himself to be, he would be nothing politically if not backed or not supported by the workers of his party.

"Now Jersey is an Democratic today as it has ever been in its history. Defeats have come only through disorganization, as surely as victory will come through organization. In the county of Hudson the principle is plain beyond doubt. We reward our workers and increase our majorities. If you would succeed, do likewise, and you will again see New Jersey redeemed and restored to the Democratic ranks."

FUNERAL OF MRS. FISHER.

Services Conducted by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Who Referred to Her Christian Character and Life.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Amelia Fisher were held Monday afternoon from the residence of her sister, Mrs. Bertha Fisher, 208 East Fifth street, and were conducted by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church. There was in attendance the relatives and a few friends, owing to the fact that the funeral was private.

Dr. Schenck read appropriate Scripture selections, offered prayer, and then made a few remarks concerning the life and character of the departed. He dwelt upon her resignation to a long illness and of her readiness to go when the call came. He also referred to her exemplary Christian life and character and of the grand example she left. He also spoke of her devotion to home and church.

There were a number of beautiful floral tributes from relatives. After an opportunity was given these present to view the remains, interment took place in Hillside Cemetery in the plot adjoining the grave of the husband of the departed. At the grave Pastor Schenck offered a fervent prayer and pronounced the benediction. Those who served as bearers were George L. VanEmburg, William Lunger, James S. Lunger and A. L. Force.

HIS DEATH WAS SUDDEN

JOSEPH R. BENNETT PASSED AWAY QUICKLY MONDAY NIGHT.

Resided in Plainfield for the Past Fourteen Years—Veteran of Civil War —Leaves Large Family.

Death came suddenly Monday to Joseph R. Bennett, one of North Plainfield's highly esteemed citizens. He had been complaining of late about a shortness of breath, but thought it was indigestion. In reality it was heart trouble. He worked yesterday as usual. Last Monday he retired at the customary hour, and seemed to be in his usual health. Some time before 11 o'clock he got out of bed, evidently to get relief from a distress about his heart, and in attempting to stand up he fell backward across the bed. This aroused his wife. She called to her husband, but there was no response. She then discovered that he was dead. Drs. Bachanan and Davis pronounced death due to heart trouble.

Mr. Bennett was born at Lee Town, near Rahway, sixty-seven years ago. When a young man he learned the trade of carriage painting which he followed at that place for a number of years. When the war broke out he, together with forty other men, decided to enlist. They went to New York and joined the Sixth N. Y. Independent Battery, of which W. H. Addis, of this city, was a member. He served the full time, three years, after which he returned to Rahway, and continued his trade. Fourteen years ago he came to Plainfield and took up his residence in this vicinity. He established a carriage painting business in J. P. Homan's building on Somerset street, which he continued up to the time of his death. He was assisted by his son, Harry, and W. H. Ludlow. Mr. Bennett was a member of Barry Post, G. A. R., of Rahway, and of the M. E. church of the same place. He was a man of sterling integrity and uprightness of character. His business will be continued by his son, Harry Bennett.

Mr. Bennett is survived by a wife and eight children. The latter are Charles Bennett, Walter Bennett, Fred Bennett, of the torpedo boat Dupont; Joseph Lewis Bennett, Harry Bennett, Mrs. Margaret Dickson, Mrs. Martha B. Milliken and Miss Matilda Bennett. All except Mrs. Milliken, who lives in Dunellen, reside in the borough. Mr. Bennett also leaves a brother, David Bennett, of New Haven, and a sister, Mrs. Matilda Acken, of Rahway.

The funeral services will be held from the residence corner of Lincoln place and Doer street, Friday afternoon, and interment will take place at Rahway.

CARS STILL STAY THERE.

Central Has Not Yet Made Contemplated Change on 7:55 Express.

The four extra cars for the 7:55 New York express were left on the siding yesterday morning as usual, despite the rumor current that the train would come through from Dunellen complete with the beginning of the new schedule. The railroad officials have considered such a step for some time as advisable on account of the delay occasioned to the freight traffic by the blocking of the fourth track for half an hour each morning. There is no certainty that the move will be made, however, as the railroad officials appreciate that the Plainfield public is entitled to consideration.

RULES TO GOVERN CITY MILK SUPPLY.

Ordinance on That Subject Introduced at Meeting of Board of Health Monday.

CLEANLINESS IS REQUIRED.

ORDINANCE WILL BE CONSIDERED AT NEXT MEETING OF BOARD.

Draft of Ordinance Presented by Special Committee—Provides for Strict Supervision of Business by Board of Health.

The Board of Health of this city is preparing to have careful supervision over the milk supply of the city. A special meeting of the Board was held Monday afternoon when the committee, appointed to prepare an ordinance governing the milk supply, made its report. The committee is composed of Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk and Fred W. Dunn.

A draft of the proposed ordinance was submitted and passed on first reading. The draft will be considered by all the members and changed and amended to suit the views of all. It may also be necessary to make some alterations to conform with the State laws on the subject.

While the details of this new ordinance have not yet been made public, its general character is known. Its object is to protect all the consumers of milk and such of the dealers as now observe the proper precautions. It will provide for a frequent inspection of the various dairies by the Board and the conduct of the milk business on the most approved sanitary plans. Every effort will be made to compel the milk dealers to keep everything connected with the trade perfectly clean and to give proper care to the stables.

Some of the general ideas are largely drawn from a similar ordinance that has been in force at Montclair for the past three years and with much satisfaction to milk dealers and their patrons as well.

The ordinance will come up at the next regular meeting of the Board when it will be fully discussed and amended.

CAUSE OF SUICIDE.

Rev. E. V. Jackson Treated the Question from the Pulpit Sunday Night.

The Mt. Olive Baptist church was crowded Sunday evening when Pastor Jackson preached a sermon on the cause of suicide. His text was taken from II Samuel, xvii, 23.

Pastor Jackson thought the greatest cause for suicide was desertion or being forsaken. Another cause cited is mental derangement. This he thought was often inherited, or it might come from overwork, or by excessive indulgence of the appetite or passion, or worldly anxieties, great misfortunes, intense pain, disgrace or the dread of it, and fear of destitution. He claimed that all these things lead to the suicidal act. The speaker then exhorted the young men to keep their word with their lady friends, and the young ladies to do the same with their gentlemen acquaintances. Next Sunday evening Pastor Jackson will tell of the destiny according to God's word of those who commit suicide.

A. T. VANLAER LECTURES TO THE MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

He Talked of Great Spanish Painters, Velasquez and Murillo, in an Interesting Manner.

One of the most delightful lectures of the season was given before the Monday Afternoon Club by A. T. VanLaer, Monday afternoon, in All Souls church. The subject of the lecture was "Velasquez and Murillo, the Great Spanish Painters," and this lecture finished the course of study adopted by the club for the past year on "Spain, Her People, Art and Literature." Mr. VanLaer illustrated his lecture with stereoscopic views of the works of art executed by the famous painters. Velasquez, born at the beginning of the sixteenth century, was a master in his profession, and painted while still a young man with a fidelity to nature that won him renown and the favor of King Philip Fourth. To assist in forming a just estimate of the genius of Velasquez, the lecturer threw upon the screen similar works of his contemporaries and other painters of renown. Masterpieces of VanDyck, Titian, Rubens, Rembrandt, Reynolds and the modern painter, John Sargent, were compared in this way with the strong and life-like characters of Velasquez.

The latter part of the lecture was devoted to the works of Murillo, the greatest ecclesiastical painter in Spain, who was born in 1617. On a visit to Madrid, he was most kindly received by Velasquez, who procured him admission to the royal galleries of the capitol and brought him to the notice of the King and the court. Among the notable pictures of this great artist shown by Mr. VanLaer were "The Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin," several paintings of "The Immaculate Conception," "Moses Smiting the Rock," "St. Elizabeth Ministering to the Lepers," "Charity of St. Thomas" and the "Espousal of St. Catherine." While painting this picture, Murillo fell from the scaffolding with such violence that he never recovered from the injuries received.

These artists founded no school but stand unrivalled, Velasquez for his truthfulness and life-like delineation of masculine and intellectual subjects, Murillo for his religious fervor and exquisite grace of expression.

NEW STATION IS TO BE BUILT AT ONCE

Committee of Plainfielders Called On Vice-President Warren Friday.

WENT ON HIS INVITATION.

THEY INSPECTED AND DISCUSSED PLANS FOR PROPOSED BUILDING?.

Mr. Warren Assured Them That the Work Would Proceed as Soon as the Contracts Can be Awarded —Station to be 500 Feet Long.

A joint committee of the Plainfield Advancement Association and the Plainfield Board of Trade was invited to meet First Vice-President C. H. Warren, of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, Friday afternoon, and examine the plans for the new railroad station at Plainfield. The committee was cordially received at Vice-President Warren's office in the Liberty street building, New York, and given positive assurances that the erection of the new station would be started as soon as the contracts could be awarded.

The visit of the Plainfielders was made in response to a letter received by Harry C. Bunyon, secretary of the Board of Trade, last week, from Vice-President Warren. Mr. Warren referred to the former visit of the committee, and said he would be very glad to have the same committee call as he had a plan for the station that they would be probably be interested in inspecting.

All of the members of the committee were unable to be present, but those who composed the party were L. B. Woolston, president of the Board of Trade, Former Mayor B. A. Hageman, Jr., and Assessor Elston M. French.

Most of the time was spent in examining and discussing the new station which is to be located south of the tracks and opposite the present structure. The proposed building will be of red brick and will conform in general style with the present station. It is to be composed of a main structure of one story, flanked by long covered platforms, having a length of 500 feet in all. The main structure will contain the waiting rooms which will be well equipped. At one end of this central building will be the entrance to the tunnel under the tracks. Over the entrance will be a tower which will break the regularity of outline and give light to the tunnel. Three flights of stairs, two from the waiting room and one from the outside, will lead down to the level of the tunnel under the tracks.

The tunnel will be nearly a hundred feet long and eight feet wide. It will be brightly lighted by electricity. The north entrance to the tunnel will be at the centre of the old station. One stairway will lead directly from the street, North avenue, at the point where a flight of stairs now leads to the upper floor of the old station building. Two other flights of stairs will lead from the waiting rooms to either side of the tunnel.

The baggage-room will remain in its present quarters as will the ticket office. A fence will be placed between the east-bound and the west-bound tracks with a gate in it to allow the transference of baggage from one side to the other.

In connection with the new station, one great improvement planned is the building of steps from the sidewalk on Watchung avenue on both sides of the railroad bridge over that avenue with platforms connecting with the stations.

The property of the railroad company south of the track is to be laid out as a park, with a driveway winding from East Fourth street and another from Park avenue. A footpath will be made to the southeastern corner of the property on Fourth street.

Mr. Hageman presented a petition from a number of residents of Fanwood and Plainfield, asking that the New York express, leaving Plainfield at 8:27 o'clock in the morning, be stopped at Fanwood. Mr. Warren explained that every stop cost from four to five minutes in time and that the company was endeavoring to give Plainfield just as rapid service as possible.

There was also a discussion on the question of noise and Mr. Warren agreed to consider the proposition of issuing a ten-trip ticket to be sold at the rate of 40 cents a round trip.

Dr. Richards to Speak.

Rev. Dr. Richards will be one of the speakers at the students conference to be held at Northfield, Mass., from June 30 to July 8. Among the other speakers will be Bishop John H. Vincent, Robert R. Speer and John R. Mott, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Powlison, of the borough, celebrated the forty-sixth anniversary of their marriage Friday, and Friday evening a dinner was given in their honor by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Powlison, at their home on Somerset street.

THE FRESH AIR CAMP.

A NOBLE WORK DONE FOR POOR MOTHERS AND BABIES.

Plainfielders Are Interested in Dr. L. H. Biglow Has Been Elected Vice-president.

The Union Fresh Air Mission Association recently held its annual meeting at Westfield and organized for the coming session's work.

George E. Woolfe, on whose property the camp is located, was chosen president; L. H. Biglow, Jr., of Plainfield, vice-president; Miss Edith T. Morehouse, of Westfield, secretary; L. A. Clark, of Westfield, treasurer.

The camp is conducted as a compliment to the Little Missionary Day Nursery, which Miss Sarah Curry maintains at 612 East Ninth street, New York. The mothers who leave their children at the Nursery during July and August are brought down to the camp in relays, for ten days at a time, and entertained with their children, thus getting a breathing spell in the beautiful countryside and a new view of the sympathy and love of the Christian people.

The camp is located on the trolley line running through Westfield. Prayer meetings are held there every night except Saturday and visitors are always welcome. One cannot go to the place without being impressed with the helpfulness of the enterprise, and to talk with Miss Curry is to be convinced of the thorough practicability of her work, both here and in the city.

The following from the treasurer's report for 1899 will show how the work is maintained:

TEACHERS MET HERE.

Somerset County Pedagogues Held Their Spring Meeting in the Borough School.

The spring meeting of the Somerset County Teachers' Association was held this morning in the North Plainfield High School. Owing to the heavy rain the attendance was comparatively small. H. G. Krebs, of Somerville, president of the association, presided at the session. It was intended to hold an afternoon session, but this was changed on account of the attendance.

The early part of the session was devoted to topics relative to education among the Greeks, and papers were presented by Miss Josephine Folsom, of Dunellen; F. A. Stryker, of Raritan; Charles Hamilton, of South Branch; Miss Garretta Genther, of Bells Mead. A feature was the address by Superintendent Gregory, of Somerville, who talked about the higher education.

The latter part of the session was devoted to subjects about education in the Nineteenth Century, and comprised papers by Mrs. Mary M. Ayres, of Bound Brook; Miss Elsie Horton, North Plainfield; Miss Lizzie VanKirk, of Griggstown, and Mrs. S. S. Biggins, of Washingtonville. Miss Horton's paper was on "Froebel." The business of the session was taken up with a question box and miscellaneous business. This was the last meeting of the association for the season.

Hub of Snake Stories.

Upper Hunterdon is fast becoming the hub of snake stories of the genuine article. John S. Yorks, who lives near Stanton, relates a thrilling adventure with his reptiles, and as a verification of his story he hurried John Sharis, clerk of the Board of Freeholders, to the scene of the slaughter. A day or two ago, while crossing his farm, he discovered a large number of blacksnakes huddled together taking their morning nap. Seizing a fence rail, he succeeded in killing eight of the reptiles. They measured from four to six feet in length.

Car Jumped the Track.

A locomotive attached to the pay car on the New Jersey Central Railroad jumped the track at Vineland Thursday, but, owing to the slow rate of speed at which it was moving, nobody was injured, and the engine only was slightly damaged. On the train were Paymaster C. W. Kingsman and Conductor Durling.

Keep Your Eyes Wide Open.

Cyclists who purchase wheels now should be careful about the adjustments of the machine before using it. Machines sent out by dealers are often so hastily crated that everything is not properly looked after. The rider, anxious to use his machine, neglects to take time to make the critical examination of all the parts that is so necessary to safety. A machine with a loose or improperly adjusted handlebar may be held at critical moment, and a fall or a damaged bar may result. A pedal that is not screwed tight may work part way out. The careless or unskillful rider will fail to notice this until it has rubbed the threads on the pedal pin or to the crank. Especially look out for the rear axle nut, for if it is not secure the chain will surely pull the wheel out of the true and against the frame.

BICYCLES AND MOTORS

TRUNK LINE SIDEPATH.

To Be Constructed Between New York and Chicago by the League of American Wheelmen.

The League of American Wheelmen divisions in charge of the construction of the "trunk line" side-path between New York and Chicago are, working with all possible speed on the project. While the work of organizing the proper committees is under way, the division officers are rapidly preparing the plans. These have so far progressed that the probable route has almost been definitely decided upon. It is now outlined the path (starting from the New York end) will run through Poughkeepsie, Albany, Schenectady, Amsterdam, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester, Batavia, Buffalo (N. Y.), Erie (Pa.), Ashtabula, Cleveland, Elyria, Toledo (Ohio), Butler, Goshen, Elkhart, South Bend (Ind.), to Chicago. This is practically the old transcontinental stage-coach mail route, and is the one generally followed by the Chicago-New York record-breakers.

The Ohio division is taking the lead in the undertaking, and expects to have practical results within a short time. Under the direction of Secretary-Treasurer Bull maps have been prepared showing the paths already completed in New York state, and engineers are at work preparing plans for the intervening stretches of road. *When these are completed the side-*path commissioners in the counties interested will build the connecting paths until there will be a complete stretch of them from New York city to the western boundaries of the state. The New York division will have supervision of 530 miles of the path, or more than half, as the total length will be 963 miles.

The Ohio and Indiana sections will not proceed so rapidly, as they have not the advantage of paths already built, but so enthusiastically has the project been received in these states that it is immediately, that there may be funds available for the preparatory work.

SAILS FOR BICYCLES.

An Attachment to the Rear Wheel to Reduce Hard Work and Increase Speed.

Sails to assist in the propulsion of bicycles have been suggested before, and usually the attempt has been made to place them on the front wheel, somewhat like but in the arrangement here shown the sail is attached to the rear wheel in such a manner that its weight helps to balance and steady the wheel. The sail is mounted on a mast, which has a universal joint, and its motion is controlled by means of the reel shown just back of the head, on the top brace. When the rider unwinds the sheet from the reel the sail is free to assume an inclined position relative to the vertical plane of the bicycle, and when the sheet is wound up on the reel the boom brings the sail into the plane of the bicycle in case it is traveling against the wind, as no use can be made of the sail at that time. According to the inventor, however, when the wind is blowing in the direction of the travel of the bicycle, or at one side thereof, then the operator unwinds the sheet so as to allow the sail to assume a normal position to cause the force of the wind to assist in the forward motion of the wheel. The inventor is Rudolph Sorensen, of Ord, Neb., who seems to think that this form of wheeling will prove a distinctive and attractive feature of pleasure riding.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

LIKE A QUAKER MEETING

BOROUGH COUNCIL WAS VERY QUIET FRIDAY NIGHT.

Date Fixed for the Filing of Bills Against Borough—Necessity of New Crosswalks.

The adjourned meeting of the Borough Council Friday evening was in many respects a Quaker meeting, as Mayor Smalley and all the members, except Mr. Coddington, were waiting for matters to shape themselves so as to begin. Not a great deal of business was transacted and the meeting adjourned early.

One important action was that of fixing Tuesday next before the regular meeting as a time when all bills against the borough must be in. This action is taken so that all bills can be paid at the regular meeting and at the same time give the committee and clerk time to audit them and get the time of the various persons employed on streets.

The meeting last evening was called especially to pay road bills and this was done, after the above action was taken on a resolution offered by Mr. Valiant.

Clerk Bowley reported that a check for $100 had been received from Watchung avenue on account of the proposed macadamizing of that street from Coddington to Grandview avenues, and Mr. Clark offered a resolution that the borough macadamize that street at once.

Other resolutions by Mr. Clark provided for the collection of assessments of that kind between Duer street and the centre of Green brook, which has been dedicated as a public street, and that the Borough Clerk petition the Somerset County Freeholders to join with the Union County Board in placing a bridge over the brook uniting the street at the earliest possible time. The resolution called for a bridge full width.

Mayor Smalley spoke of the necessity of having crosswalks laid along the line of new work on the upper part of Somerset street, and a resolution offered by Mr. Valiant providing that Superintendent of Highways Mr. Doud, under the direction of the street committee, lay crosswalks where needed along the line of new work. Mr. Valiant also spoke of the proposed crosswalks across Willow and Myrtle avenues, and was informed that as soon as the residents decided where they wanted the walks they would be laid.

This concluded the business and the Council adjourned to examine the Somerset street map which provides for the widening of the street.

FINE IMPROVEMENTS.

Board of Education Making Important Changes Around School Property

The Plainfield Board of Education has planned some improvements for Arlington avenue along that portion which passes the High School and Franklin school. The Board is now having the trees removed and the old board fence will be removed. In its place will be erected a handsome iron fence, so that the children may plainly see passing trolley cars and thus remove all possibility of danger from this source. The fence will be placed several feet inside of the present line, thus making the sidewalk wider. The stone flagging will be reset and the side of the street curbed.

In connection with these improvements it is expected that the owners of the property on the other side of the street will also make concessions, and give some of their land to widen the street. When this is done the thoroughfare will be of sufficient width and the improvement will be worth all that it costs to make it.

PARTY FOR A JOLLY TAR.

Dance in T. A. B. Hall in Honor of Dennis O'Keefe.

That Dennis O'Keefe, of West Fifth street, formerly of the cruiser Detroit, is a popular man in the West End was easily proven last night. In spite of the following weather a large number of young people gathered at a sociable given in his honor at T. A. B. hall under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of the T. A. B. Society. Dancing was kept up until a late hour to the strains of Professor O'Reilly's orchestra, stopping only at midnight, for refreshments.

Before leaving for home all present united in giving three cheers for Mr. O'Keefe and the Detroit.

Dogs Poisoned.

There has been a wholesale poisoning of dogs at Cranford the last few days and as no one is likely to get into trouble. There are a number of vegrant curs which could well be spared, but the pets of society women are among the dead animals. The number of dogs has been very materially reduced in the last few days. Most poisoned with strychnine is said to be responsible for the trouble.

Pastor's Salary Paid.

Through the earnest efforts of the trustees of the Fillmore Baptist church the amount of debt owed the pastor, Rev. W. D. Johnson, has been paid and the church has his receipt in full.

SCIENCE AND INVENTION.

TO PROTECT SOLDIERS.

Present War in South Africa Has Revived the Question of Bullet-Proof Outfits.

The present war in Africa has revived the question of shields for the use of troops in the field, and several lectures have recently been delivered by English officers advocating the use of some arrangement to protect the men, while attacking intrenched positions defended by smokeless powder, says the Philadelphia Record. In a recent lecture Capt. Furse declared that none of the objections made against bullet-proof mantles held good with sufficient force to prevent their use.

He advocated a form of mantlet which would be maintained, under the following conditions: It afforded complete bullet protection, gave the men a good field view and enabled free movement, would be equally efficient in retreat and advance, and would be suited to enable men to destroy obstacles, such as barbed wire. It should be easily moved and taken to pieces and stowed away.

The lecturer proposed a "roller mantlet" weighing about 200 pounds, consisting of a cylinder, about 15 feet long and 3½ feet in diameter, of thin steel, carried a foot above the ground by wheels at each end, with a handle for pushing and pulling, in advance and retirement, respectively.

Each mantlet should cover six men and a line should be formed of them, with about two paces between them. Two hundred would cover a front of half a mile. Chrome steel one-fifth inch thick enables the cylinder to be built, and shrapnel bullet proof at 100 yards, and as the roller forms provents the plate as a circle, it is practically proof at any range.

It is suggested that when halted men could fire below as well as above it, and one mule could draw two or three mantlets if required, or carry one packed up.

Another device that has long been advocated and recently put in working shape is shown in the accompanying illustrations. It consists of a steel shield made to be used singly on a rifle or else fitted shield to shield so as to build up a larger defense. Each shield is, of course, made of the best steel, with as hard a face as can be given to such thin metal. If made of a thickness of three-sixteenths inch it has been found proof against mauser at all ranges; that is, the 7 millimetre bullet with cordite ammunition. Made of the size shown in the illustrations it weighs 17 pounds 14 ounces. A seven-pound shield, three mm. thick, is good for 600 yards, and one weighing 11 pounds, 3.5 mm., 2½ mm., is suited for 900 yards and over. The lower figure shows several shields united together. As there are eight shields here united the arrangement suggests a supply beyond what men could carry on the march.

House Made Fireproof.

A wooden house that would not burn was the test made in New York the other day. The structure had been treated with some preparation that is warranted to render wood fireproof, and the test tended to bear out the claim. The experiment was conducted under the supervision of the New York board of fire underwriters and the building and fire departments of New York. The building was two stories high, with a large space beneath it which a fierce fire was set going. Some of the visitors remained in the house during the test and suffered no inconvenience. The fire was said to be strong enough to burn down any ordinary building in New York, but it did no harm to the prepared wood beyond charring it a little.

The Velocity of Light.

The velocity of light is 186,000 miles in a second of time. From the sun light comes to the earth in eight minutes. From some of the fixed stars of the twelfth magnitude it takes 4,800 years for the light to reach us.

GOOD TIME FOR GERMANS

MUSIC WAS HEARD AND MUSCLED MEN PERFORMED.

Calisthenic Exercises Were Gone Through With—Several Pretty Musical Numbers.

The annual Lent concert and show turning under the auspices of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein, was held last Friday in the hall on Somerset street. It was largely attended. The programme opened with an overture by Eugene O'Reilly's orchestra and selections by the singing section of the society.

Then followed calisthenic exercises by the junior class of turning section, under the direction of Prof. Metzger, and side horse exercises by members of the same class. A feature was the appearance of Mrs. Bartlett, who gave a number of comical songs. She was accompanied by Miss E. Vordermeier on the piano. Mrs. Bartlett made a decided hit and was recalled several times. There were vocal selections of unusual excellence by George C. M. Smith and pleasing vocal selections by Charles Dressell.

A tenor solo by Prof. Eichhorn, leader of the singing section, was greatly enjoyed, as was also the vocal selection by E. Luthman, P. Postler, W. Gartner and Charles Dressell.

One of the most interesting features of the affair was the work on the horizontal bar by the senior class of the turning section, in charge of Prof. Metzger. Their work was of a high class and showed great improvement in the various feats.

A selection by the singing section brought the program to a close, after which dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. Music was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly's orchestra.

After the Tramps.

Already Chief Marshall Campbell, truant officer of the borough, has been after some children who persist in staying away from school. Some of them are of the disobedient kind and will have to be closely watched.

To Rebuild Institute.

The ruins of the Centenary Collegiate Institute at Hackettstown are being cleared and work will commence immediately on the new buildings, which are expected to be ready for the fall term which will begin next October.

ELECTRIC AMBULANCE.

Built Not Long Ago for St. Vincent's Hospital, New York, and Successfully Operated.

A motor ambulance is set down as the latest thing in horseless vehicles and one that has just been put in operation by St. Vincent's hospital, New York, is said by its maker to be the first automobile ambulance to be built and put in service in this or any other country. "An ambulance of this kind," he says, "possesses many advantages over its horse drawn prototype. A greater speed is attainable; there is more ease and safety for the patient; it may be stopped within its own length when running at full speed, and on account of its weight it runs with greater smoothness."

The gears in use are an adaptation of the carriage gear, but improved and made identical with the pedestal gear and locomotives. The wheels are built of wood, and are furnished with three-inch solid rubber tires. The rear wheels are 42 inches, and the front wheels 36 inches in diameter. The motors which drive the rear wheels are mounted on the rear axle, and connection is made with the front wheels by means of a small handle close to the driver. Under the body, in a box, is carried the 44 cell storage battery, which has sufficient power to drive the vehicle for 25 miles on one charge, and at a rate of speed varied by a controller from a slow walk to 15 miles an hour.

The ambulance, as described by the New York Tribune, is trimmed inside and out with rubber and has room for two patients besides the surgeons. Twenty candle power lamps are fixed at either side of the driver's seat, and another lamp of the same power is placed in the roof and lights the interior. The sides, down and the back door are plate glass. A new feature about the ambulance is the bed. This is arranged so that it may be pulled out and still remain attached to the body of the ambulance. When the vehicle backs up to the sidewalk the bed is drawn out and rests like a shelf over the sidewalk; when the patient has been lifted to it the shelf is moved back into its place.

The new ambulance is supplied with all the modern fittings, and on a trial run it made a 14-mile trip to the perfect satisfaction of the builders.

MANY HONORED LATE ROWLAND COX.

Impressive Funeral Services Held at Grace M. E. Church Friday Afternoon.

THE BISHOP OFFICIATED.

TWELVE PROMINENT MEN ACTED AS PALL BEARERS.

Casket Was Draped With American Flag and Surrounded by Many Floral Tributes—Parade Car Brought New York Delegation.

A great congregation, that included many of the prominent citizens of Plainfield and a delegation of influential men from New York, assembled at Grace M. E. church Friday afternoon to pay tribute to the memory of Rowland Cox, who died at his late residence, on West Seventh street, last Sunday night.

Bishop Scarborough, of New Jersey, came to officiate at the funeral service in which he was assisted by Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector of Grace P. E. church, and Rev. Floyd Appleton, his curate.

The service was the regular one of the Episcopal church and proved very impressive. The full-robed choir marched into the sanctuary, down the centre aisle, singing "For All the Saints, Who From Their Labors Rest." Following them was the casket borne by six colored porters and surrounded by twelve honorary pallbearers. They were Edward C. Perkins, Col. Marshall W. Tyler, Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, Mr. Gardner, Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Former Mayor Alex. Gilbert, Samuel Huntington, Councilman John B. Dumont, J. Evarts Tracy, Charles P. Bull, Charles W. McCutchen and Sheeman Evarts. After them came the members of the family and household in deep mourning.

Over the oaken casket was spread a silken American flag, so draped as to show only the blue and white of the union. After the casket was placed in the chancel, wreaths of flowers were also placed in it. The sides of the chancel and front of the altar were covered with many beautiful floral pieces that were sent by sorrowing friends in New York and Plainfield. Many of them were very elaborate.

Bishop Scarborough was a personal friend of Mr. Cox, and was a frequent visitor at his home on the occasions of the Bishop's visits to Plainfield. The two men entertained a great respect for each other, and the funeral services were not held until yesterday so as to allow the Bishop to be present. He conducted most of the service and was assisted by the rector and curate, both of whom were warm personal friends of Mr. Cox. The members of the vestry of the church attended the service in a body.

During the service the choir sang the hymn "Jesus Lives! Thy Terrors Now." Mrs. William H. Freeman, organist of the church, played the new organ very effectively. At the close of the service the choir sang "Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand" while the cortege left the church.

There were many prominent Plainfielders present at the service including Mayor George W. Bockfeller and other of the city officials. A delegation was there from the New York Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion, of which Mr. Cox was a member. A number of lawyers and other business associates of Mr. Cox attended in a body.

The New York delegation was brought to Plainfield on a special car on the express train leaving New York at 1:30 o'clock. The club car, "Plainfield," was also attached to the same train and brought out most of the members of that club of which Mr. Cox was a member.

After the service at the church, the family and intimate friends drove to Hillside cemetery where the interment took place.

Dispatches received from Philadelphia confirm the recent reports to the effect that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is about to remove its general freight offices from Philadelphia to New York, where the company has purchased the block bounded by Cortlandt, Liberty, Washington and West streets. The old buildings are to be torn down and a handsome new structure erected. It is to be fifteen stories high.

Schools Discontinued.

A very pleasant entertainment and sociable was given last evening at the Plainfield Business College. Scholars were present from Raritan, Somerville, Bound Brook, Westfield and Cranford. The evening was spent in having a sociable time and in listening to recitations and piano solos given by Miss Hoagland and Miss Mackie.

MAY QUEEN CROWNED.

Miss Charlotte Anderson the Best Gowned Woman, and She Was Crowned.

The May Queen was chosen and properly crowned with a wreath of real flowers at the entertainment held in the Filmore Baptist church Thursday. In addition to the selection of the Queen, there was a varied programme of songs and recitations by colored talent.

It was announced that the finest gowned woman at the entertainment would be chosen Queen, and so the women of the congregation bedecked themselves in their best raiment and entered into the contest with zest. A committee of judges composed of James Brown and Denny Thompson, of Westfield, Madison Williams, Benjamin Monroe and Clayborn Gofney, was appointed to make the choice.

There was much excitement when the candidates for the regalia honors passed before the judges. After due consideration the judges awarded the wreath to Miss Charlotte Anderson.

The programme included several vocal solos by Mme. Harper, of Jersey City, selections by the Black Diamond Quartette, composed of John Taylor, William Wilson, Watson Randolph and Oscar Nelson, vocal solos by Miss Sarah Vail, vocal solos by Miss Ella Randolph, vocal solos by Arthur Kennedy, and recitations by Miss Florence Randolph and Miss Mary Randolph.

IT WAS A BONFIRE.

Fog Made It Look as Though House Was Ablaze.

When Charles Addison Mann, of 1308 Watchung avenue, glanced out of the window last Thursday, he thought the whole neighborhood was afire. The fog, which was very thick at the time, was all illuminated and flames were to be distinguished in the direction of Lake street. So he notified fire department headquarters by telephone at 8:30 o'clock.

Chief Doane and No. 2 hose wagon went out to investigate. They found a large bonfire in the rear of the house of Floyd Worcser, 1281 Lake street. In the fog it looked as if the house itself was burning.

PORTO RICAN HOMES.

The Babies of the Gibaros, or Peasants, Are Plain and Inexpensive Structures.

The gibaro's house costs him nothing but a little labor, and is mainly set up without nails or any furnishings whatever from the stores. The palms, growing everywhere in the country, says the New York Tribune, yield all necessary materials. For the simple utensils used in his domestic economy the householder goes to another tree, the calabash, the fruit of which is converted into vessels of various sizes, such as dishes and water bottles, plates and spoons, while the "yagua" of the royal palm furnishes tubs for washing clothes in, cradles for the babies wrappers for cigars, and all bundles that are to be kept dry, and even foundations for the rude beds which, when hammocks are not used, are spread upon the floor at night. From these two species (two palms, the royal and the cocoa) and the calabash, the Porto Rican obtains ample material for his home and its equipment.

This hut is called a "bohio," in contradistinction to the house of the town, which is usually built of stone, is much more prefentious and is known as the "casa." The word "bohio" is aboriginal, and was used by the natives of Hayti as well as those of Porto Rico, to designate a hut made of native materials peculiar to the country.

FOR ANTARCTIC SEAS.

Unique Ship Which Will Be Built for the Royal Geographical Society of England.

The task of designing a ship for the British expedition of 1901 was intrusted by the Royal Geographical society to a chief constructor for the admiralty, and the work of building will be committed to a Dundee company which has achieved great triumphs in the construction of whalers. She will be almost entirely of oak, and the wood is now being selected with special care. Her sheathing will be of greenheart, and, like the German vessel, she will be still further strengthened by interior bracing, to withstand the pressure of the ice, which is the most serious difficulty to be anticipated. The ship will be a trifle larger than that of the German expedition. Her length is to be

STRONG ENGLISH SHIP.
(Built Especially for Service in the Antarctic Seas.)

172 feet, her beam 33, and her draught 16. She will be bark rigged, and have engines of 450-horse power. Many features of the vessel will have special reference to the exceptional work to be undertaken. A powerful winch for operating the deep sea dredging apparatus will be provided. A magnetic observatory, with no iron or steel within 30 feet of it, will be established on board. There will be means of lifting the rudder and propeller when the heavy ice is encountered and for replacing them when the ship is again free. An asbestos cold proof lining for the deck and a huge felt blanket big enough to encompass the whole ship during periods of wintering in the Antarctic are among the other novelties contemplated.

Statesman Instead of Soldier.

There is a remarkable document on file at the war department, the existence of which was unknown until a short time ago, when it was accidentally discovered. It is a letter written by Charles Pinckney Sumner to Philip Barbour, of Virginia, secretary of war under John Quincy Adams, asking for the appointment of his eldest son, Charles Sumner, to the military academy at West Point. The application was ignored. Charles Sumner went to Harvard university instead and died a senator of the United States.

SEVEN DAYS IN JAIL FOR NOISY NEWSBOYS

But City Judge Runyon Agreed to Defer Sentence During Boys' Good Behavior.

ARRAIGNED THURSDAY P.M.

DR. R. J. SHAW WAS CHIEF COMPLAINANT AGAINST THEM.

Editor Runyon Blamed the Police for Allowing the Disturbances—Eleven Boys Were Brought Before the Judge—Two Were Missing.

Seven weary days and nights in the city jail! When little "Man Eater" Mullen, one of the smallest of the offending newsboys, thought of it he dashed away the tears that would gather with the corner of his cap and tried to look brave. "Gee Wah" Willie's face took on a far-away look as he thought of that week of prison life. The nine other newsboys who faced City Judge Runyon Thursday afternoon began to realize that the Judge was in earnest.

Then the Judge brought renewed joy to the hearts of the lads. He was going to give them a chance, he said. That sentence of a week in jail would be temporarily suspended during their good behavior. If they offended once more, he carefully instructed the police to lock them up at once and let them serve the sentence out in full.

Anyone who has happened in the neighborhood of Front and Somerset streets during the afternoon has heard the noisy newsboys. They congregate at that corner, play baseball and other games, and step inside the neighboring hallways to settle their numerous dispputes. Wednesday afternoon Patrolman Mattox raided the crowd and captured eleven of them. Two more were added to that number later.

They were all ordered up before the City Judge yesterday afternoon, when Dr. R. J. Shaw appeared as the chief complainant against them. Dr. Shaw has resided very near them. His customers were jostled about as they entered and left the store, while the noise outside made it almost impossible to hear. Lawyers in the offices above complained of the same trouble.

After hearing Dr. Shaw, Judge Bunyon called upon Editor Frank W. Bunyon, of the News. Editor Bunyon declared that the police force was really to blame for it all as the efforts to keep order there was so lax. Lawyer Robert M. Clark, whose offices are close by, was asked to tell his experiences.

Then the Judge asked the boys what they had to say. "Gee Wah" and "Freckles," two of the leaders in the newsboys' strike last fall, were the chief speakers. The boys admitted that they did make a good deal of noise and that they had been warned to desist at intervals. They had forgotten about the warnings, they explained.

The boys who appeared before the Judge were Joe Gjetlieen, commonly known as "Curly," Howard Ayres, Ray Hall, nicknamed "Bazoo," Willett Hall, better known as "Freckles," William Willis, called "Gee Wah" by his associates, Jack Caufield, William Mullen, the "Man Easter," William Lunpkin, Charles Mitchell, William Jones and Arthur Jones. The Halls, Willis, Lunpkin, Mitphell and the Joneses are colored lads. Dan Muldowney, often called "Leather," and Larry Bray were ordered to appear but failed to do so. They will probably be arrested on sight and receive a more severe punishment.

After the Judge had heard all the testimony, he decided that the boys were guilty on their own statement. Then came the awful sentence and the temporary reprieve on condition of good behavior

NO BRIGADE ENCAMPMENT.

Governor Forces Sending Regiments to Sea Girt Separately.

Officers and men of the Second Brigade, New Jersey National Guard, will be surprised and disspointed to learn that Governor Voorhees has put his foot down on the plan for a brigade encampment at Sea Girt. The Governor has written General William H. Cooper, the brigade commander at Camden, suggesting a regimental camp, and asking his co-operation in the matter. General Cooper had made preparations for a brigade camp, and is sorely disappointed, for he has not had a chance to handle his brigade since he was put in command.

Sad Content of Children.

Residents of the West End have been greatly annoyed of late by children running across their lawns and stealing flowers, sometimes ruining a whole bush. This is especially the case with lilac bushes, many of them being broken down for the sake of a single flower. Complaint has been made to the authorities, and a continuance of the mischief will end in someone's arrest.

GREAT SIOUX CHIEF.

Red Cloud, the Last of a Long Line of Famous Indians.

Once He Was a Great Warrior, But Now Is Feeble and Practicing the Art of Peace—His Influence Still Paramount.

At his home near Pine Ridge agency, Red Cloud, the last of the great war chiefs, is quietly passing the twilight of his long and eventful career. Red Cloud is the last of the long line of famous Indian chiefs, of whom Powhattan, Osceola, Black Hawk and Tecumseh were the earlier leaders.

"Misinformed and careless writers," said C. C. Marrivall, of Pine Ridge agency, official interpreter of the United States court, "have caused newspaper readers to look on subchiefs of minor degree through magnifying glasses. Red Cloud during late years has given his efforts toward civilization, and because he wears ordinary white man's clothes and because some of the subchiefs stick to paint and feathers he has been considered in a wrong light. Nevertheless, Red Cloud is far ahead of any and all of them, having been distinctively the war chief of the powerful Sioux nation during the long years of warfare between the whites and Indians throughout the territory now embraced in the Dakotas, Nebraska, Wyoming and Montana. When in his prime he was acknowledged to be the greatest Indian warrior of his generation. Red Cloud for years has lived quietly at his home, a short distance northwest of Pine Ridge agency, on the bottom land of White Clay creek, within plain view of the agency. He lives in a comfortable frame building. In front of the house stands a flagpole and whenever Red Cloud sees that the 'stars and stripes' have been hoisted on the agency building he, to snow his loyalty to the United States government, has a similar flag on the staff near his home.

"During late years Red Cloud's eyesight has steadily failed, until to-day it is impossible for him to distinguish objects at a greater distance than five or six yards. On fine days one of the pathetic sights of the agency is to see Red Cloud slowly making his way through the agency streets leaning for support and guidance on his faithful and devoted little wife, who usually leads him about. Red Cloud is now very old, and is becoming quite feeble, although his mind is as clear as it was in his younger days. His wife is nearly as old, but is not nearly so feeble, and insists on accompanying the old warrior in his journeys around the agency and to the homes of old friends living in the immediate vicinity. He seems to delight in calling on and visiting the oldtimers at the agency—Indians and squaw men, who lived with the tribe during the thrilling days when Red Cloud's blood coursed through his veins more hotly than it does now and when his sole ambition was to lead his fierce warriors against the whites. He passes many happy hours with them, discussing incidents of the past, old treaties and other subjects in which they are mutually interested.

"The influence Red Cloud has over members of his tribe is shown by the manner in which they follow his advice in refusing to accept allotments of land in severalty under an act of congress. Red Cloud was satisfied that this land in the Pine Ridge reservation was not suitable for agricultural purposes, and he advised his brethren not to take lands in severalty. Up to this time not one Indian on the entire reservation has taken an allotment. When Red Cloud dies the whole Sioux nation will turn out to do homage to his memory and testify to the great esteem in which he was held by all his tribesmen."

Kangaroo Pet's Odd Ways.

A unique pet animal in Seattle is a tame kangaroo. It was obtained from a Australian sea captain, who has been in Seattle a year and is now as domesticated as an ordinary dog. As a pet he is all that could be desired, being affectionately disposed toward the members of his own family, although he is somewhat suspicious, and is apt to show his teeth and claws to them in an unpleasant way. Though Kang is generally well behaved he has his little faults. Occasionally he goes on a marauding expedition and robs hens' nests, and he allows no dog to enter the premises. As a rule dogs will take flight at sight of him; if not he swoops down upon the unhappy canine, first scratching him with his forepaws and then seizing him in a footlock for his hind feet. No dog ever tackles Kang twice; one lesson is enough.

The chapel was prettily decorated with an abundance of dog-wood, while the colors, orange and black, green and white, were strongly in evidence through the use of bunting that was draped about the sides and from the ceiling.

President Fred Bach, was in charge of the programme. Rev. J. O. McKelvey spoke a few words of welcome and congratulation. Then followed the reading of the report of the secretary, Miss Adele Hope Kirby. The report was read by Miss Hattie Squires. It shows a membership of 34 active, 20 honory, 3 associate.

There was expended $135.91, leaving a balance of $5.01. The report of the secretary of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society by May Seader shows that there are 34 members on the roll, with an average attendance of 21. The sum of $95 was received during the year, of which $29 was contributed to Miss Rachel Mader's work in Africa.

President Bach then introduced Miss Florence G. Hawkins, of this city who gave a brief talk on the subject of "How May a Christian Endeavor Grow?" Her points were earnestness, devotion, gentleness and lastly entire consecration to the service of Christ. Following Miss Hawkins, Mrs. David M. Bunyon, made a few congratulatory remarks, and spoke along the line of missions.

The last speaker was Dr. Ward, of Lyons Farms, who has talked before in this city. His main thought was "More Love for Christ and the Christless." He said that ideals have always ruled the world and always would, and he spoke of making Christ the ideal. He urged the general adoption of the "quiet hour," and of greater service for the cause of Christ.

After the addresses a social time was enjoyed, during which ice cream and cake were served. The social committee in charge consisted of Theodore Martin, George Zimitzer and Mrs. Flamer. GETTING READY TO COUNT FOR UNCLE SAM

Census Operations Will be Started Thoroughly by the First Day of June.

WORK OF SPECIAL AGENTS.

ONE OF THESE OFFICIALS MAY BE LOCATED HERE.

The Enumerators Are Receiving Careful Instructions as to the Work That is to Expected They Will Do.

Inquiries made of Supervisor Tunis, of the district census office, as to the progress being made in the preliminary work of arranging for the next census, elicited some extremely interesting information. The supervisor has had a force of clerks and stenographers busy for some time, and all preliminary arrangements for the census taking have been practically completed.

Supervisor Tunis stated that all enumerators of this district would in a few days be supplied with full outfits from which no requisite would be omitted. He also expects to notify Director Merriam, May 31st that he is ready to begin the enumeration of the 1900 census June 1st.

With the exception of a few cases, the enumerators have been sworn in and commissioned.

Books of instruction more comprehensive, concise and clear than any ever before issued have been furnished to the enumerators, and the results under these instructions must compare favorably with any heretofore accomplished along similar lines.

Among other matters of immediate importance the Supervisor is just now engaged in a careful investigation into the qualifications of candidates for interpreters to assist in enumeration of the population where there is any considerable non English speaking element, and in selecting special agents for the collection of statistics relating to manufactures. This branch of the work will immediately follow the enumeration of the population, and it is intended to have it completed if possible during the month of July.

Mr. Tunis, himself, as supervising special agent, will look after this branch of the business in New Brunswick and will probably locate the six special agents who are to assist in the work throughout the district as follows: Two (if not three) in Elizabeth; one each in Perth Amboy, Somerville and Lambertville, and if only two in Elizabeth he may name one for Plainfield. He states, however, that fitness for this special class of work must be a prime qualification for every candidate presented for these positions.

It is believed that most, if not all of these will have been selected and strictly along this line which is in accordance with instructions from the department.

FIRST OF THE SEASON.

Strawberry and Ice Cream Festival Given by Methodist Avenue Methodists.

The first of the ice cream and strawberry festivals of the season was held in the Methodist Avenue church last Thursday, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. Strawberries and cream were on sale and found many ready buyers, who formed little groups and enjoyed a social chat while disposing of their purchases. A candy table, in charge of Miss Lottie Aldrich and Miss May Brower, secured a good share of the patronage. No regular programme had been arranged but several present were entertained by voluntary vocal and instrumental music, which helped to pass the evening pleasantly. The waitresses were Mrs. Eakins, Mrs. Dalson, Mrs. Le-Roe, Miss Stafford, Miss Aldrich and Miss Brower.

REPUBLICAN CLUBS.

Executive Committee Decides to Hold Convention in Jersey City Sept. 19.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the State League of Republican Clubs of New Jersey, held in Lincoln Hall, Passaic avenue, Jersey City, Thursday last, it was decided to hold the annual convention of the League in Jersey City Sept. 19th.

The executive committee and the vice-presidents of the various Congressional districts were authorized to select delegates to the National convention of Republican clubs to be held in St. Paul, Minn., July 17-19. The representation will be four delegates from each district and six at-large. It was also decided to invite Governor Roosevelt to address the State convention.

An Exciting Runaway.

One of Alvin E. Hoagland's spirited horses gave an exhibition on North avenue Friday morning that promised some excitement. The animal started to run away and in doing so upset Thomas Finney's expense wagon in his attempt to clear the avenue. Mr. Hoagland's horse and wagon went right over the top of Finney's rig, but several men on the other side stood ready to suppress the fractious steed and quickly him before he could get away. There was no damage.

DINNER OF DEMOCRATS WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

Representative Leaders Were Present from Many Sections of the State.

PROMISE OF ROBERT DAVIS

PLEDGES HUDSON COUNTY'S 172 DELEGATES FOR J. E. MARTINE.

Best of Feeling Prevailed at the Gathering, Though There was Much Hissing Talk—Those Who Were Guests.

The Democratic banquet given at the Hotel Kensington Saturday evening, gathered together a company of prominent and influential Democrats such as not been assembled at one time in the State, outside a State convention, in several years. As a political social event the affair was undoubtedly the most successful and important held in New Jersey in a long time. The dinner was proposed and carried out for the purpose of providing a pleasant social time for the guests and to aid in the promotion of Democratic principles and Democratic candidates, and in these respects it was regarded as a great success on the part of every guest present.

While there had been no studied design on the part of any of its promoters to make the affair serve as a medium through which some definite idea of the prospective policy of the Democrats of the State could be arrived at, or to fix a slate for the political honors which the State convention will have to distribute May 31st, the assembling of so many leading minds in the party resulted in much that was of important portent to the New Jersey Democracy.

Along this line one of the most important things evidenced was that the financial issue in relation to the Presidential campaign is secondary to the matter of imperialism—so less a personage of pronounced financial views than Clarence T. Atkinson, of Camden, saying in emphatic language that the paramount issue for the Democrats of the country to make their fight on is anti-imperialism. Another important outcome of the dinner was the announcement made by Robert Davis, the Hudson county leader, that no matter who the candidates for delegate-at-large are at the Democratic State convention, Hudson county will cast a solid 172 votes for James E. Martine, of this city, as a choice for one of the "Four Favorites." In connection as Mr. Davis seldom puts himself on record in such a open, frank manner, the dinner is credited with having accomplished something that is quite unusual and unexpected.

There were two disappointments, however, in the matter of attendance of prominent men. They were the absence of Congressman William Sulzer and William R. Gourley, chairman of the Democratic State Committee. Although the date of the dinner had been fixed particularly to suit Mr. Sulzer, he found it impossible to come at the last moment, owing to imperative duties in Washington, as the chairman of the Congressional reception committee to the Boer delegation. Chairman Gourley was expected right up to the last minute, but shortly after the dinner had been started a message was received from him saying that it would be impossible for him to be present.

At the conclusion of the dinner, Judge William A. Coddington, acting as toastmaster, called for the reading of letters of regret of several prominent Democrats who had been unable to accept the invitations. Among them was one from Col. William J. Bryan, who expressed pleasant remembrance of his reception in Plainfield last February, and said, referring to the approaching campaign: "If our country is to live as a true Republic the principles of the Democratic party must triumph. Selfishness and personal bickerings must give way to the country's welfare. Acquiescence in the will of the majority must be our party guide and rule. As a united party I believe the Democrats will be invincible." Others were from Congressmen Sulzer and Salmon and Mayor Seymour, of Newark.

Clarence T. Atkinson, of Camden, was called upon to respond to the toast of the "United States of America," which has been assigned to Congressman Sulzer. Mr. Atkinson pictured the present administration's attitude towards the country and its traditions in a despairing manner, and made the important statement that he regarded the issue of imperialism as a paramount to any other question to be considered by the voters at the November election. He closed his address by reading a few verses in parody on the proposed event of raising the American flag over Eiffel tower in Paris, July 4th, the closing verse being an eulogy of Col. Bryan and his ability to preserve the conditions for which the Stars and Stripes are supposed to represent.

Senator James R. VanDieet, of New Brunswick, responded to the toast "Needs and Advantages of Organization," which was to have been given by Mr. Gourley. He paid a compliment to the Plainfield Democrats for their activity and interest in arranging such an affair as the dinner had proven to be, and said that organization was the great need of the Democratic party of today.

"New Jersey in Congress" was the toast to which Congressman Daly responded, but he switched from the text and talked of the Democrats in Congress. He denounced as inimical to the best interests of the people the Hay-Pauncefote agreement with reference to the Nicaragrarian canal. He also urged the Democrats to wage a vigorous campaign on constitutional questions as opposed to the policy of the present Republican administration.

When Robert Davis, the Hudson county leader, was introduced by Judge Coddington there was prolonged cheering which ended in the guests giving three cheers for Mr. Davis. The sagacious Hudson county man talked at random, and made many good-natured, though blunt, sallies about organization matters. He said that the hope of Democratic success in New Jersey lay in organizing the young men and putting them forward to take the places of some of the old ex-office holders who still cling tenaciously to organization offices, though they never do anything. He referred particularly to the State committee, and characterized the committee, as now made up, as almost useless to the Democracy. He declared that they do no effective work. As an instance of their work, he said that at the meeting at Asbury Park last fall theta was only one member that was able to report the true condition of affairs in a political way in their respective counties. "You want to fire such men as Kelcey, Lee, Little and others like them. They've made millions out of the 'pap' of the Democratic party, but they never give anything to it now. Why, in fall Hudson county furnished the State committee with all the funds it had. We can do it, you know, we've got 300 Democrats down there that are holding office," declared the Hudson county leader. Mr. Davis said the way to organize the State thoroughly was for four or five in each town to get together and start an organization, then let each one get one more, and so on, just like an endless chain. "That's the way we started in Hudson county, and now we have got over 1,100 members in the organization," said Mr. Davis.

Assemblyman Allan Benny, of Bayonne, followed Mr. Davis and responded to the toast "New Jersey Redeemed to the Democracy." His main point was that the differences of the past should be forgotten, and that every loyal Democrat should make an effort to get every Democratic friend back into the fold in regular manner.

The last set toast, "The Claims and Anticipations of the Democracy," was responded to by James E. Martine. Mr. Martine talked in his characteristically enthusiastic manner, speaking of the principles that the Democracy stands for and prophesying that William Jennings Bryan will be the next President of the United States.

Then followed impromptu responses from former Senator Kuhl, of Hunterdon county; Col. D. F. Collins, of Elizabeth; Mayor Hoos, of Jersey City; Oliver Kelly, of Middlesex county, and John J. Matthews, of Elizabeth. The latter said that Union county would present the name of Mr. Martine as a candidate for delegate-at-large to the Kansas City convention, and that no man deserved more at the hands of the Democratic party than the "Farmer Orator."

As soon as Mr. Matthews had concluded, Assemblyman Benny jumped up and said that Mr. Davis had asked him to say that if Mr. Martine was a delegate-at-large he could depend upon it that Hudson county's 172 delegates would be for him solidly. Mr. Atkinson followed by saying that Camden's eighty-two delegates would do the same. This caused loud applause and three cheers for the "Farmer Orator." Mr. Martine said that he would consider it a great honor and if selected by the convention he would go to Kansas City to vote for the nomination of Mr. Bryan.

As a closing event, City Judge William N. Runyon, vice chairman of the Union county Republican committee, was called as guest, was called upon to sing a song. He responded and after he finished the affair was brought to a close.

Those who were present were as follows:

Congressman William D. Daly, of Hoboken; Robert Davis and Mayor Hoos, of Jersey City; Assemblyman Allen Benny, of Bayonne; Clarence T. Atkinson, of Camden; Senator James A. VanDieet, of New Brunswick; Oliver Kelly, of Metuchen; Former Senator Richard A. Kuhl, of Flemington; City Clerk James Manning, Lieut.-Col. Collins and Deputy Postmaster John J. Matthews, of Elizabeth; Former Assemblyman Jacob Klotz, Sheriff Schoonmaker, John Gaffney, of Somerville; W. L. Hetfield, John Ross, C. L. Moffett, James Kane, W. J. Bentley, J. R. The preparation and serving of the dinner by J. A. Staats, proprietor of the Kensington, was of the finest and most elaborate of its kind ever carried out in this city. The menu displayed a skill in catering that will add further to the already enviable reputation that Mr. Staats has made

LIBRARY FOR MARCONNIER

Warren Chapel Presents It With 300 Volumes—Election of Sunday-School Officers.

The Sunday-school of Warren chapel in the borough has presented the Sunday-school of Marconnier chapel with 300 volumes of a library, in good condition, recently discarded by Warren chapel Sunday-school. As soon as partitions can be arranged to hold the books, Marconnier chapel will have what it has long needed, a library for its scholars.

The first election for the officers of the Sunday-school, since it became a part of Trinity Reformed church, took place Sunday afternoon, and the following persons were chosen for the ensuing year: A. E. Metler, superintendent; Mrs. Mal Marconnier Swenck, assistant superintendent; Miss Edith G. Stover, secretary; Wm. VanCourt, treasurer; Stephen Stover, librarian.

G. L. VanEmburgh led the meeting at the chapel Sunday evening, taking "Faith," for the foundation of his talk, which was very interesting. Seventy persons were present.

Sand Mills to Close.

The fifty employes of the Bowers snuff mills at Chanceyville have been notified that the mills are about to be closed indifinitely. The mills formerly belonged to John Bowers, Sr., of Changewater, and Messrs. Lafayette and John H. Bowers and Mr. Blackwell, of Washington. About a year ago they sold out to the Continental Snuff Company, and they in turn sold out to the trust, the American Snuff Company. The only real reason for the closing of the mills appear to be the desire to curtail production. The mills are a great boom to Changewater and had been run night and day up to the time of the sale a year ago.

Class Day Exercises.

The class of 1900 of the Plainfield High School is already beginning to make arrangements for the Class Day exercises, to be held Tuesday, June 19th, probably in the Franklin building. The additional officers of the class who will participate in those exercises have been chosen as follows: Historian, Miss May Ross; prophet, Miss Pauline Denton; poet, Miss Mary Locke.

Nearly Struck by Lightning.

The sharp flash of lightning which struck the house of Harold Serrell on Myrtle avenue, Friday, came near striking Charles Warnock, of East Fourth street. Mr. Warnock was standing in front of Mr. Serrell's residence, when the bolt exploded so near him that he was thrown to the ground and stunned for about ten minutes. Although he was not burned he felt dazed for the rest of the day.

Plumbers' Strike Settled.

The plumbers' strike in North Hudson, which was begun May 1st to compel the masters to agree to pay $3 50 a pay for eight hours' work, has been settled by a compromise. The men originally received $3 for nine hours a day. They are to receive $3.50 a day for eight hours' work, the new schedule to begin July 16th. The plumbers will also have a half-holiday Saturday.

Jumps to Furnish Bonds.

Edward Jones, the young man who was brought before Justice Moffett last Saturday, on complaint of W. H. Cole, Overseer of the Poor of Dunellen, was released in the custody of Constables Folbemus, of Lincoln. He is to furnish bonds for his appearance before Justice Warden of Dunellen on June 7.

Planning Print Exhibition.

The Plainfield Camera Club is already planning for a print exhibition next fall. Committees will be appointed at the meeting of the club this evening to arrange the details of the exhibition. There will also be a number of applications for membership to be acted upon.

Fixtures of Late E. H. Dunn.

The last issue of The Sabbath Recorder, of this city, contained a very excellent half-tone picture and sketch of the life of the late Elston Marsh Dunn, a former postmaster of Plainfield.

MAN FOR THE PLACE.

M. Picard, Commissioner General of the Paris Exposition.

Evolved the Magnificent Plans of the Grand Fe.. in Less Than Four Hours and Thereby Killed a Pet German Project.

In Alfred Picard, commissioner general of the exposition, whose nomination to a grand cross of the Legion of Honor was announced by President Loubet a few days ago, is practically the organizer of the Paris exposition. By his outward appearance one might take him for a Don Quixote. A figure with lanky limbs, a cast of countenance overclouded with an air of gloom, a nose of characteristic prominence, piercing eyes and a mustache of heroical dimensions, these make him seem a living knight of La Mancha, ever tilting at windmills. Never was a greater contrast between natural aspect and reality. M. Picard is, in fact, the "King of Method," a practical man above all things—the very personification of the French genius of lucidity, order, harmony.

From his youth up M. Picard has given free play to his taste for serious matters. Mathematician, engineer, economist, administrator, lawyer, he has been all these by turns and simultaneously. He has built bridges, excavated mines, arranged statistics, managed railways and led the discussions of a council of state in its consultations over the plans for a world's fair.

M. Picard was born in Lorraine. When 17 he made his way to Paris, entered the Ecole Polytechnique, and just before the outbreak of the Franco-German war passed out of its classes, with distinction won by the qualities which have through life brought him his success—hard work, patience and regularity.

Returning to Metz, he was shut up with the garrison in the citadel and suffered the privations of the siege. Rather than surrender and give his police not to bear arms against the enemy, he effected an escape in an ingenious manner. He was one day clanking his sword dolorously along the Metz pavement, when he caught sight of himself in a window. "I am not of a corpse!" he muttered, but no idea was suggested to his mind. Running to a friend, he exclaimed: "You must declare that I am in the last stages of consumption, and that I should be sent home to my friends to die." The German surgeons, deceived by the youth's cadaverous appearance, granted the request, and the slim consumptive passed through the besiegers' lines unmolested. He at once struck for Switzerland, joined the army of the Loire and served in its ranks until the end of the war.

After the war he pursued his profession of civil engineer with astonishing success. One year after another was filled by him with credit until a technical appointment was given him in the office of public works. It fell to his duties at the end of the exposition of 1889 to make a financial report. He at once took him two years of unceasing labor, but its accomplishment set a stamp on his reputation.

His association with the present exposition came about in this way: One morning in the autumn of 1892 he received a summons from M. Jules Roche, the minister. Germany had shown a desire to arrange a great exhibition for 1900, but France had determined to be first in the field and keep that year for herself.

"It is now ten o'clock," said the minister, after he had announced the cabinet's decision to M. Picard; "can you get to us at two o'clock a first scheme?"

At the time appointed M. Picard was ready with his plan, which he handed to the prime minister, and on the morrow the decree appeared in the Official Gazette. M. Picard was appointed commissioner general of the exposition of 1900.

Nine Comprehensive Rules.

Seldom has there been better advice for the conduct of the human family than is boiled down in nine comprehensive antitheses: Drink less, breathe more; eat less, chew more; ride less, walk more; clothe less, bathe more; worry less, work more; waste less, give more; write less, read more; talk less, think more; preach less, practice more. To follow these is to strike for better health, further popularity and greater success.

The Ubiquitous Smith Family.

The Smiths are everywhere. In Italy they are called "Smithi;" in Holland, "Schmidt;" in Russia, "Smitowski;" in Spain, "Smithus;" in Poland, "Schmidtzwitski;" and in Mexico, "Smitzi." In England the Smiths are the most numerous of all families; but in Ireland they are content to rank fifth, after Murphy, Kelly, Sullivan and Walsh.

Wants to Sell His Body.

Walter Wentworth, 75 years old, and for many years a prominent dentist, is in New York looking for some one to buy his body. He has long been a wonder to medical men on account of the wonderful pliability of his frame, which he has already sold privately to Dr. Cowen, of Detroit, and later to Dr. Wilder, of New York, receiving in each case $100. Both these medical men are dead, and now Wentworth is looking for a third speculator.

GOLF PLAYERS OUT IN FORCE YESTERDAY.

Exciting Competitions Held on Both the Hillside and Park Club Courses.

THE HYDE HOLIDAY CUP.

FIELD OF FORTY CONTESTANTS FOR THIS TROPHY.

Best Scores Made by Fred P. Taylor—Semi-finals for the Chapman Cup—Hard Fought Game at Park Club, Too.

A field of forty players turned out for the first play for the Charles Hyde holiday cup on the links of the Park Golf Club yesterday morning. The competition proved a lively one. It was a handicap event, eighteen holes, medal play, to be continued Labor Day and Election Day, the four players making the lowest average net scores to qualify for the semi-finals Thanksgiving Day. The "duffers" were handicapped with fat handicaps and came to the front in great style.

The best gross score was made by Fred P. Taylor from scratch, who played with Morgan T. Townsend, four strokes handicap. Their scores were as follows:

Taylor, scr.	5	4	4—45
Townsend	4	4	5—45
Taylor, scr.	5	4	4—45
Townsend	4	4	5—45

Charles E. Fisher was low man, added by the fat handicap of 46. The Rogers brothers were second and third. Fred P. Taylor was fourth.

Twenty-nine scores were turned in as follows:

	Gross.	Hand.	Net.
Charles E. Fisher	107	46	61
Robert A. Rogers	117	46	71

Andrew D. Mills, Jr.	107	6	101
Philip S. Stedman	108	6	102
Frank Stedman	108	6	102
Charles S. Cook	108	6	102

The event of the afternoon at the Park Club links was a mixed four-some foursomes, eighteen holes, medal play. Eight pairs took part in the contest and all the card were turned in. Miss Vallant and Herbert Rogers had a close ming of it with the scratch team, Miss Saldee Mae Howell and Fred P. Taylor, but finally defeated them by a single stroke. The course was in the best of condition and a great crowd played both morning and afternoon. The scores in the four-some were as follows:

	Gross.	Hand.	Net.
Miss Vallant.
Herbert Rogers	121	30	121
Miss Saldee Mae Howell.
Fred P. Taylor	120	6	114

Yesterday was an ideal day for golf, and the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course was crowded from early in the morning till almost dark. The course was in the best of condition and even the novices were able to make good scores. There was not a large programme of events for the day, but perhaps this was best, for it gave many an opportunity to play who otherwise would not have been able. The events for the day were the first round and semi-finals for the Chapman cup. Last Saturday the preliminary round for the Chapman cup was played and the following qualified: J. Whitney Baker, A. R. Fisk, Willard Wadsworth, Morris Dumont, W. L. Glenney, W. T. Kaufman, Howard Huntington and Olaf Sangstead.

In the first round there was some good playing and the interest was intense. Olaf Sangstead beat W. T. Kaufman 1 up; Willard Wadsworth beat J. Whitney Baker 7 up and 6 to play; W. L. Glenney beat Howard Huntington 8 up and 4 to play. Morris Dumont beat Reeve Stockton 5 up 4 to play.

Although the interest in the morning play was great, it was even more so in the afternoon, when the semi-finals were played. There is great rivalry between the contestants and it was a toss-up as to who would win next. A number of persons watched the contest with almost as much interest as the players. The result of

SELF SUPPORTING NOW.

HOME FOR GIRLS OF ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH ESTABLISHED.

Greater Demand on the School for Girls Than it Has Been Possible to Accommodate Thus Far.

The home for girls that is being conducted on Manning avenue by the sisters of St. Joseph's R. C. church is now well established and self-supporting, not one penny from the church being given in support of the institution. The accommodations was so small that it became necessary to purchase additional property. The sisters were desirous of securing Mr. Bradder's property adjoining that of the home, but he did not care to sell, so the next property was purchased of Michael Connolly, and the sisters have been gradually furnishing the house. At present four girls are living at the new home and more will be received when the accommodations are properly arranged.

The work done at this home has been highly commended, and girls have been sent from there to all parts of New Jersey and New York, wherever there has been calls for help and there were girls to send. The great difficulty has been that the supply has been greater than the demand. There is always a demand for efficient help, and the girls strive to train girls to intelligently do work that is required of them about a house. They are taught all kinds of housekeeping, sewing, embroidery, music, etc., and when they complete their work are thoroughly capable. In fact, they are not sent out until they are.

The new home is well-adapted for the needs of the work. It is in many respects similar to the original home next to the church. The rooms are large, light and well-ventilated, and permit the best of work. There is a sufficient depth to the property to allow for a large addition to the home when the necessity demands it. Mother Raymond is in charge of the home, and she has the respect and esteem of those under her. She is proficient in all the various details of the work, and greater results are looked for in the near future.

FAST HORSES RACE.

New Brunswick Driving Associations Hold Successful Horse and Bicycle Races Yesterday.

New Brunswick, May 31.—The New Brunswick Driving Association held a race meet on its track yesterday afternoon. In the 2:30 trot or pace, Parkway Stables' "Lawrence" won first money. Woodbrook Farm's "Barney Williams" was the only Plainfield starter and took third money.

In the 2:22 trot or pace, "Elizabeth D," belonging to Thomas Drum, of Elizabeth, won first money. "Myrtle Twig," belonging to A. J. Brantingham, of Plainfield, took second. "Gen. Brayton," from Parkway Stables, Brooklyn, won first money in the 2:40 trot and pace. Charles Brower, of Plainfield, captured second with "Patella."

In the bicycle races W. H. Cornwell, of Newark, won the mile open, and Henry Galchter, of Paterson, the two mile handicap.

Walked for the Cake.

Washington Hall was crowded last evening with the friends of the Park Avenue Hotel waiters, under whose auspices a reception and cake-walk was given. Dancing was stopped at 11 o'clock for the walk, in which five couples took part. The judges awarded first prize to William Wilcox and Mrs. Troy Gibbs, formerly Miss Maggie Bell; second to Harry Anderson and Louise Carr; third to Thomas Brokaw, of Somerville, and Miss Annie Hewlett.

Township Wins.

The controversy between the Millburn Township Committee and the Diamond Mills Paper Company over the maintenance of the bridge over company's raceway on Brookside avenue, Millburn, has ended. The paper company has decided to build a new bridge. The structure is to be built of heavy timber.

Engaged to be Married.

Miss Estelle Glenn of the North Plainfield High School, will give a reception to the senior class at her home on Fairview avenue tomorrow night. There will be phonograph selections and recitations by Frank Bristol.

May Reserve.

Joseph D. Spicer, of West Fifth street, improves very slowly from injuries he received some time ago. The physician as well as the family can notice the change for the better, and hopes of ultimate recovery are entertained.

BOYS IN BLUE HONOR THE VETERAN DEAD

Observance of Memorial Day Carried Out by Members of the G. A. R.

MUSIC HALL EXERCISES.

PATRIOTIC ADDRESS BY REV. W. C. SNODGRASS.

Impressive Ceremony of Decorating the Unknown Graves — Final Parade Marked the Observance in the Morning.

Yesterday's observance of Memorial Day by the G. A. R. veterans was a success in every respect. The exercises began in the morning with the decorating of the graves of the departed comrades in the different cemeteries. Besides the Plainfield graves, those in Scotch Plains, Westfield and South Plainfield were honored by detachments from the local post.

The usual parade began at 10 o'clock and moved over a short route to the Methodist cemetery, where the graves were decorated, thence back to the post rooms. Those in charge of the parade were Marshall W. G. Smith and Commander J. F. Berg. The remaining officers of the day were: Chief Commander Francis Whitely, Junior Vice-Commander Augustus Runyon, Officer of the Guard John Finley, Surgeon Israel Compton, Quarter - Master John Naylor, Adjutant R. G. Morse.

The day's programme concluded with the exercises at Music Hall, which began at 2:30. The house was filled long before that time. Bunting and flags were placed around the balcony and boxes, and lent a patriotic appearance to the hall. The veterans filed into the hall behind the Crescent band of Raritan, and took their places on the stage. A pretty bouquet was given to each veteran and pinned on their coats by the members of the W. C. T. U.

The ceremonies were opened with a prayer by Rev. F. D. McKinney, of Warren chapel. A male quartet, composed of Clifford Bralder, Arthur Smith, Wilson Derby and Frank McDonald, sang three songs acceptably. The post exercises were then given under the direction of the master of ceremonies, Dr. J. F. Berg, followed by a solo, "America Forever," by Miss Mira Marsiona. Sixteen little girls then sang a chorus, and were followed by a contralto solo by Ben LaVere, with bugle and piano accompaniment. His accompanists were Herbert Harold and Wilfred Olmstead. Miss Alberta Barber also recited. The members of the post then went through the ceremonies of decorating the unknown graves, which represented those of their brothers who had fallen in battle and were buried in unmarked graves.

The exercises closed with the beautiful and a tableau entitled "Rock of Ages, or Freeing the Slave," arranged by Comrade Matter. Those who took part in the tableau were: "Slave," Miss Ella Phillips; "Emancipator," Miss Lorraine Cossitt; "Justice," Lorraine Mason; "Rock of Ages," Edna Glass; "Victory," Gertrude Compton; "Crowning the Victor," Ethel Glass; "Cherubims," Gothard Shephard, Rose Rothberg, Nettie Stelzer, Mamie Secher, Esther Wolf, Sadie Goldstein, Annie Neilson and Henrietta Welsh. The speaker of the day was Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, of the First M. E. church. He gave an excellent patriotic address, which was frequently interrupted with applause. He spoke very feelingly of the reuniting of the North and South by means of the Spanish War, after all other means had failed.

A Renowned Soprano.

Miss Dora Louise Topping, of New York, will be the soprano for the "Persian Garden" to be given at Y. M. C. A. Hall next Monday evening, under the direction of W. J. Bomsis. Miss Topping has a soprano voice that has placed her in the foremost rank of vocalists. It is a dramatic soprano of remarkable range and purity, a voice rarely heard outside of the Metropolitan Opera House. Miss Topping is the soprano at Dr. St. Anthony's church, Brooklyn, where she attracts many to hear her voice.

To Superintend Repairing.

George W. Reeve, of White Oak Ridge, Millburn, has been appointed by the Union County Board of Freeholders as supervisor of construction of the new county road on Parsonage avenue, Millburn.

Has Four Sooty Foresters.

The Red Rose maple has attacked the apple orchards in the vicinity of Whitehouse. An effort will be made to kill the pest in June by spraying the trees with petroleum.

STRONG SUPPORT FOR THE "FARMER ORATOR"

If Pledges Are Kept J. E. Martine Will Be Chosen One of "Big Four."

UNION IS ENTHUSIASTIC.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION IS STRONG FOR BRYAN.

Convention Called to Order at 12:30—Adjourned for Dinner and Conference—Conference—The Probable Choice.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Trenton, May 31.—The chances that James E. Martine will be one of the "Big Four" to represent the Democrats of New Jersey at the Democratic National convention at Kansas City, have brightened visibly since the delegates to the Democratic State convention began to gather here last evening. If all the pledges made are kept the "Farmer Orator" will have a substantial majority on the first ballot. Union and Somerset counties are enthusiastic in their support of Mr. Martine. Hudson is pledged to stand by him while the Essex county friends of Governor Voorhees believe that they can hold that delegation solidly in his behalf.

The Union county crowd has been prominent all the morning working enthusiastically in behalf of Martine. A part of Essex started a boom in favor of Gottfried Krueger, of Newark, but it seems likely to be short-lived and that the support of Krueger will eventually rally to the support of the Plainfield politician.

There can be no doubt but that a majority of the delegates favor the nomination of Col. Wm. J. Bryan this year, and that they are likely to support a resolution to instruct the delegation to vote for him at the National convention. There has been no test of the strength of the opposition as yet, so it is impossible to say whether or not it will materialize.

It is barely possible that the "Big Four" will be chosen without opposition. A contest is generally expected but it will not last long. The four men who are the probable choice of the convention to go as delegates-at-large to the Kansas City convention are James E. Martine, of Plainfield; Robert Davis, of Jersey City; Former Congressman Johnson Cornish, of Weirton, and Former Congressman Thomas N. Farrell, of Gloucester.

The Union county delegation held its caucus at the Democratic Leagues Club rooms this morning. Lieut. Col. D. F. Colliton, of Elizabeth, was made chairman, and John M. O. Marsh, of Westfield, secretary. The choice of convention were selected as follows: Vice-president, John L. Crowell, of Rahway; committee on credentials, Frederick W. Park, of Cranford; committee on rules and resolutions, Former Congressman John T. Dunn, of Elizabeth.

It was unanimously decided to support J. E. Martine for delegate-at-large to the National convention, and City Clerk James Manning, of Elizabeth, as Union county's representative on the Congressional district convention.

The Congressional district convention was held in the same place immediately after the adjournment of the Union county caucus, the Essex and Sussex delegations arriving. James Manning, of Elizabeth, and M. J. Doyle, of Montclair, were chosen delegates from the Eighth Congressional district to the National convention. E. S. Wile, of Glen Ridge, and Frederick W. Park, of Cranford, were elected alternates.

The Somerset county delegation held its caucus at the Trenton House this morning. Andrew Lane, of Kenilworth, was the chairman and John J. Gaffney, of Somerville, the secretary. The convention honors were assigned as follows: Vice-president, Dr. S. O. B. Taylor, of Millstone; committee on permanent organization, W. Henry Rogers, of Warren; committee on resolutions and rules, Sheriff Selah Schoonmaker, of Somerville; committee on credentials, Gen. S. Cutler, of Bernardsville. The delegation pledged itself to the support of Mr. Martine for delegate-at-large.

The convention was called to order at 12:30 o'clock in the Trenton Opera House by State Chairman Wm. H. Gourley, of Paterson. Just previous to the opening of the convention the Union county delegation proposed three cheers for James E. Martine which were given with a will by almost all the delegations.

Col. G. W. Bolles, of Monmouth, was introduced as the temporary chairman and Wesley Dewgenes, of

The North Plainfield High School team defeated the Arions, of Hope chapel, yesterday by a score of 11 to 6. The batteries were: Arions, Smith, Rosebery and Kennedy; N. P. H. S., Armstrong and George. The pitching of Armstrong deserves special mention, as it was his first full game.

Among the interesting baseball games of yesterday was the one played in the morning between teams from Warren Engine Company and the West End Hose Company. The West End team won the game by a score of 20 to 16. Up to the fifth innings the Warren boys were ahead, but after that they became rattled. There was one accident, Robert M. Clark injured one of his fingers.

State Leagues and Out Tires.

A mean and contemptible act was committed Tuesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. McIntosh, of West Seventh street, rode their wheels to Watchung avenue, where they called on some friends. They left their wheels out doors and amused them with a bicycle lock. While they were inside some mean person or persons came along and cut the tires on the wheels and made off with them. The wheels were in the yard of the McIntosh and anyone going near them was trespassing. Mr. McIntosh has offered a reward of $25 for the detection and conviction of the thief, and it is to be hoped that he may be found.

Lowered Watchman's Nap.

Lincoln, May 31.—A few nights ago some thieves entered "Wheelaway's Inn" owned and conducted by Constable Tolbert. A quantity of cigars, confectionery and booze was taken, but no trace of the thieves has been found. Mr. Tolbert was now close at the rear with a shot-gun alone to his side and on his head in his eyes for all to-gether.

AFTER MELLICK'S MONEY

JOHN C. MORRIS APPOINTED ADMINISTRATOR OF ESTATE.

Two New York Men Who Claimed Relationship to Henry Mellick Cannot Be Found.

Those mythical nephews of the Middlesex county miser, Henry Mellick, who proposed to contest the disposition of a one hundred thousand dollar estate located just outside of Plainfield, failed to materialize in court at New Brunswick Tuesday.

When about a hundred cousins of the dead miser filed an application last week to have John C. Morris, of Metuchen, made administrator, two men giving the names of John and Henry Mellick, of Schoharie county, N. Y., claimed to be nephews of old Mellick. Their claims were presented by Counselor Meyers, of Elizabeth, and he was given until yesterday to present these men in the Middlesex Court, as no one knew that Mellick's one brother had ever married.

Cousins by the dozen were present when the Orphans' Court opened Tuesday, and when Alan Strong, for the cousins, asked to have John C. Morris appointed as administrator the "nephews" counsel had no objection. Judge Strong turned the big estate over to Mr. Morris, and he will divide it among the cousins after considering each claim. The estate is worth a trifle more than $150,000, and from the way cousins, first, second and third, are making themselves known, very little will be left of the property of the man who would not spend money enough to have a will drawn.

TROUBLE AT WATSON'S.

Duffy and the Bartender Had an Altercation and Boyle Joined In—Both Men Fined.

John Duffy does not remember exactly what happened in Michael Watson's saloon on Grant avenue last evening. According to the statement of the proprietor and his bartender, Patrick Crystal, Duffy insisted upon drinking at the expense of the house and then beating the bartender with his blackthorn. Crystal took the blackthorn away and retaliated to the detriment of Duffy's face. In some way Patrick Boyle became mixed up in the fracas and was for damaging the bartender seriously. Sergeant Kilby and Roundsman Fredericksen responded to the call for aid, and arrested both Duffy and Boyle. They were fined $5 each by City Judge Runyon this morning.

Camera Club Commissioners.

The committees of the Plainfield Camera Club have been appointed for the year as follows: House committee, W. W. Moore, chairman; Rachel Sewell, George E. Holmes, J. Harvey Dunne and Fred W. Black; entertainment committee, J. Harvey Dunne, chairman; Walter Freeman, Harry R. Durand; outing committee, George H. Fountain, chairman; Otto Arens and Harold Sewell; membership committee, Otto Arens, chairman; Ida F. Randolph and Harry E. Coward.

Tennis Tourney Postponed.

Miss Belle Patterson, of Franklin place, and Miss Marion Bowne, of Watchung avenue, entertained a number of young people from Wilmington, Del., over Decoration Day. Last evening A. S. Patterson entertained the party at dinner at the Hillside Tennis and Golf clubhouse. During the day the party visited Glenside Park, near Fairville, where they had a delightful time. The guests returned home this morning.

Struck in the Face With a Ball.

During the ball game between the Leal and Rutgers teams yesterday afternoon, Miss Mae Runyon, of Pleasant place, was struck in the face with a ball and had her upper lip badly cut. It bled so profusely, it was thought she was badly hurt, but fortunately she was not. She then came home by an older route.

Children's Fair.

Four little girls, Edith Glenister, Alice Hinckley, Ada Wemplad and Ethel Lorton, will hold a little fair on the lawn adjoining No. 822 Watchung avenue, Saturday afternoon. The proceeds will be given to the Westfield Fresh Air Camp Fund.

Extremely Wet Weather.

Ninety farms were rung up on a closed car of the Somerwood line yesterday between Dunellen and the North avenue switch. When it is remembered that the car only seats twenty-four persons, one can imagine what a crowded car it was.

Lodge Notes.

Lawyerville Lodge, No. 27, Brown will give a free lecture to the students and friends of Plainfield Business College, City Bank building, tomorrow at 12 o'clock.

Mrs. Kinney, of New street, has returned from a visit to her parents in New York state.

HONORS AT THE HORSE SHOW FOR MISS FISK

Won Two Firsts and a Second at Union County Hunt Club's Show.

MORE PLAINFIELD WINNERS.

MISS HYDE RECEIVED FIRST AWARD IN SADDLE HORSE CLASS.

Chief Honors Went to Miss Fisk and Mrs. R. F. Lawson, of Newark—Held at Elizabeth—Was a Great Success.

Many Plainfielders There.

Elizabeth, May 31.—Society circles of Elizabeth, Newark, the Oranges, Plainfield and all the counties of New Jersey were represented in the number of over three thousand at the second annual horse show of the Union County Hunt Club, held on the grounds of the New Jersey Jockey Club yesterday. The chief honors were carried off by Miss Louise Fisk, daughter of Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of Plainfield, and Mrs. R. F. Lawson, of Newark. Other Plainfield winners of prizes were Miss Edith Hyde and Lewis M. Warner.

In the first and second classes, for roadsters and horses in harness, there were no competitors from Plainfield. In class No. 3, for single horses to appropriate vehicles, Miss Fisk's "Deer Foot," driven by Charles W. Fisk, won over Mrs. R. F. Lawson's "Master Claude." This was the first time "Master Claude" has ever been around ever. A. R. Fisk and F. L. Schoonmaker were the other Plainfield entries in this class.

The same horses were the principal rivals in class No. 4, for ladies' harness horses, ladies to drive. As "Deer Foot" had already scored over "Master Claude" in the preceding class, it remained a matter of horsemanship to decide and Miss Fisk finally won by her superior handling of the ribbons.

E. M. Jackson, of Orange, won the fifth class for combination saddle and harness horses. Dan Rankin drove and rode Miss Fisk's "Deer Rabbit." The other Plainfielders in that class were Dr. M. O'M. Knott, Setzfried H. Arens, F. S. Schoonmaker and L. E. Waring.

In class No. 7, for harness tandems, side counter for the blue ribbon were two Plainfield teams, Miss Fisk's "Deer Rabbit" and "Deer Foot" and Mr. R. F. Lawson's "Miss Easy" and "Master Claude." The Lawson team undoubtedly won on account of the better action of the wheeler, Miss Fisk's tandem took second prize. Her brother, Charles W. Fisk, drove. L. E. Waring drove Chas. H. Rose' tandem, but the rein of the leather tables as they entered the ring and a serious accident was narrowly averted.

The class for saddle horses, No. 8, was won by Miss Edith Hyde from a large field of contestants, among whom were Setzfried H. Arens, Augustus R. Fisk, Dr. Knott on Cindy A.; Marsh's "Karlos," and C. W. Fisk on Miss Fisk's "Deer Rabbit."

The class for jumpers, No. 9, was won by Gallopin, owned and ridden by Jos. L. Frelinghuysen, of Somerville. Louis Barjer's "Regis," ridden by C. W. Fisk, took second award. Miss Daisy Sheppard and R. M. Sheppard were also entered.

Dr. Knott, on "Black Diamond," was the only Plainfielder to ride for the Union County Hunt Club cup. In this event Major J. A. Keeney, of Elizabeth, was on his "Bobby B," and Lewis E. Waring was mounted on "Doctor." Waring rode a very clever race despite the fact that his glasses were knocked off at the first jump.

A party of forty Plainfielders attended the show in a private trolley car. There were many others who went by train and drove down.

FASHION'S CHANGES.

A Return of the Taste For Quiet Decoration.

Fashion authorities all sorts of fancies. Nevertheless the most elegant costumes are those of a simple style and reserved character. Great care is taken to preserve purity of outline, and, although rich effects are obtained with lace, it is used fast, and complicated draperies are avoided which tend to conceal the lines of the form.

There is a strong current of taste now setting toward sobriety of ornament, and the excessive superimposed ornamentations hitherto employed and the extravagant metallic and spangled effects are in less high regard than they have been. There is a return of self colored decorations and those not superabundant. For example, on costumes of velvet cloth or rockaway moire or taffeta trimmings are used which exactly match the gown and are covered with cordings of the same tone.

The cut given today represents a bodice of this gray satin cloth. It is plain at the back and fitted in front by means of stitched plaits, which take the place of darts. The flaring collar and the revers are of white satin, embroidered and spangled. The corselet is of royal blue panne, as are the plaited collar and the plastron. The tight sleeves have stitched plaits at the shoulders and cuffs of satin matching the revers.

PARASOLS.

They Match Summer Gowns—Novel Handles.

Among the recent untrimmed parasols are those of plaid silk in different shades of the same color. These are carried as accompaniments to the tailor made gown and are of the same general tint.

A fashionable luxury is a different parasol to match each gown, a piece of the same silk being used for the covering. This is less extravagant than it seems, now that parasol and umbrella covers are adjustable and are so made that they fasten on the frame with tiny hooks or loops, or are put on with ease in this way serve for half a dozen parasols.

Novelty handles for sun umbrellas and parasols are rather large, terminating in carved heads of beasts, such as the fox and sheep with horns and cats with immense glass eyes. These are more odd than pretty.

Natural wood handles are thick and clubbish in aspect. The umbrellas thus mounted are of bright or light plain silk or of delicately tinted plaids.

The cut shows a costume of linsel green bengaline. The skirt has a band of white satin around the foot, upon which are five lines of black velvet. It is lined with light green silk. The coat bodice is trimmed with bias bands of white satin and black jet buttons. The collar of white satin is covered with lines of black velvet and is edged with a plaiting of black mousseline de soie. The draped plastron is of black spangled lace over pale yellow. The tight sleeves have black velvet bands and black mousseline plaitings at the wrist. The tight straw hat is faced with black velvet and trimmed with pink roses and foliage.

The Onion.

Onions and cucumbers are two of the most popular flavors required. Like pease the Egyptians grow them at least 30 centuries ago. Indeed to the onion belongs probably the honor of being the first vegetable primeval man ever made trial of.

FANCIES OF FASHION.

Authorities Say We Are to Have a Veritable White Season.

Diaphanous Fabrics Will Rule the World of Fashion for Some Time to Come — Novelties in Belts and Sunshades.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

AT THIS particular time of the year one's thoughts turn naturally in the direction of dainty summer gowns and all of the airy-fairy belongings suitable for warm weather wear, and as the season's fashions have declared themselves in no uncertain manner, and are at their brightest and best just now, I think a few hints regarding the prevailing and forthcoming modes will not prove uninteresting reading matter to the majority of womankind.

That this is to be a veritable "white season" goes without saying, judging from the almost unlimited number of all-white models seen within the past week. And, after all, there is nothing prettier or more appropriate for midsummer wear than white, but it must be borne in mind that this charmingly dainty fashion entails considerable expense in the matter of laundry bills, as the entire beauty of a white costume depends upon its perfect freshness. The care and attention a woman gives to her summer clothing has very much to do with her good appearance, and by observing certain rules of neatness the woman who is unfortunately obliged to manage on the smallest of incomes can appear any number of times in the same white gown, white hat and white gloves and ever look trim and what is called for want of a better name "well groomed."

Pretty and attractive as the fashions are at the present moment they would be as nothing were it not for the beautiful materials now in vogue that lend themselves in the most pleasing manner to all the latest whims and fancies of Dame Fashion.

Diaphanous fabrics of all kinds and descriptions are, of course, much in demand. Silk-finished batiste is to be reckoned among the season's favorite novelties, while embroidered mulls and sheer organdies vie with each other in popularity. Spotted silk muslin is another delightful material seen for the first time this season, and when mixed with accordion-plaited lace makes an ideal summer gown. For dainty afternoon wear white silk is greatly to be recommended, and from a lasting point of view is far from extravagant, provided that a good quality to procured in the first place, as it cleans most beautifully and will even bear washing, though cleaning is to be preferred.

Gowns fashioned of this silken fabric are delightful to look upon when trimmed with tiny frills and edged with valenciennes lace and narrow satin ribbon. For morning wear and wear in the country frocks made of cool-looking dimity and soft-finished muslin are the correct thing this summer. They are fashioned in a somewhat simple manner, although, strictly speaking, nothing in the world of fashion is simple nowadays, the mode aims being seemingly to produce a simple and chaste effect at the expense of a vast amount of labor and skill in the way of exquisitely fine needlework.

Foulard and taffeta silks are in as much, if not greater, demand than ever before, which is a somewhat surprising state of affairs considering they have reigned almost supreme in popular regard quite three seasons.

The sketch represents a smart foulard gown trimmed with blue velvet ribbon and dainty lace, the waist being of tucked chiffon with insertions of bebe ribbon velvet. The gown in the other picture illustrates one of the latest and prettiest models. It is fashioned of gray silk-finished batiste. The skirt is elaborately tucked, while the bodice is trimmed with cream-tinted cluny lace, the chemisette being of cream muslin and pink panne-velvet.

Black strappings outline the lace on the bodice, and black velvet bows ornament the front.

Highly favored of fashion at the present hour is the white shirt, both lined and unlined. In fact, this dainty little garment has created a perfect furore of late, especially when fashioned of very fine lace or the ever-popular all-over lace embroidery.

Tuckings and puffings and all kinds of fine stitchery are playing a most important part on the newest of the new shirts, but it is whispered in authoritative circles that accordion-plaiting will take the place of these later on. Time alone will tell. There is a most distinct change in the sleeves, whereby the new shirt can be readily distinguished from the old, otherwise it is the same as those worn earlier in the season. This new sleeve is cut somewhat on the lines of the old-fashioned bishop shape and is invariably finished in rather large tucks placed perpendicularly from shoulder to wrist. It is comfortable looking and appeals at once to one's sense of appropriateness, something the erstwhile tight-fitting shirt sleeve never did.

The effect that this sleeve best is without exception the one worn over a well-boned, tight-fitting silk or cotton slip, its success also depending largely on the way in which it is put on and the belt with which it is worn.

The model given in the picture is more of a blouse than a shirt. It is composed of cream-tinted Mechlin lace and black velvet ribbon and mounted on a tight-fitting silken slip.

The belts brought out this season are beautiful in the extreme, the designs almost without limit, the same being also true of the prices.

Some are beautifully jeweled with various colored stones, the exquisite workmanship showing the skilled fingers of the artistic craftsman, while others made of filigree silver are studded here and there with mock diamonds so beautifully imitated as to deceive any but an expert. Belts of soft leather, hand-painted in small floral designs, are also in the novelties, while the new snatched belt is carrying all before it in its mad race for popularity. It is seen to particular advantage when worn by the tall slender woman, but the short-waisted, stout person will be in her day and generation, will stick to the narrow, stitched belt fastened with a neat cut steel buckle, or, better still, to one of silk or satin cut on the cross.

I have not yet said a thing about parasols and sunshades, and there are in fact very few styles to occupy one in connection therewith. Fringes are still being used on the plain black satin and peau-de-soie sunshades, but the latest importations display various tuckings and plaitings of the black net, mixed with chenille and jet.

Lace plays a most important part on some of the Frenchiest-looking parasols seen this summer. Fine Chantilly lace is invariably used and usually takes the form of a handsome "all-over" or else of a deep frill wrought at intervals by small lace rosettes. Hand-painted parasols are among the most attractive novelties of the season. They come in both black and white. In the petticoat line there are made of rich black satin, the painting being carried out in a small floral design, which shows to particular advantage against the black background. Extremely smart, though representing a vast deal of labor, are some black and white silk parasols stitched and tucked in a wonderfully intricate manner, but personally I consider black and white a little hard, whereas tucked chiffon and soft lace always form a charming frame to a pretty face.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE ABROAD

Statistical and Historical Data Bearing on the News of the Day from Foreign Lands

The Famine Stricken People of India.

Aside from the war in South Africa the great topic of public interest is the famine in India. The distressing conditions in that country continue to grow at a rapid rate, and were it not for the war in which England is engaged the English people would be pouring immense sums for the care of the starving lands the stricken country. Even as it is England is doing fairly well toward the starving people in her great eastern colony, and many thousands of dollars are being distributed daily to the suffering millions.

Some of the causes of the present famine, and something of the prospects for relief with the coming seasons of new crops, may be read with interest.

The southwest monsoons (upon which the animal and vegetable life of India substantially depend), laden with the moisture of the Indian ocean and the Arabian sea, break in June upon the Malabar coast and for three months flood India with a rainfall averaging about 100 inches. The rains of the last monsoon proved from a half to a total failure, and famine was then threatened to a large portion of the country. It was still hoped that the autumnal crops of southern India might be saved by a good northeast monsoon in November, and in central and upper India by early abundant winter rains. The normal time for winter rains has long since passed by. On the east coast the usual rains in November and December, which are termed the northeast monsoon, fail to visibly attend the withdrawal of the monsoon current from the Bay of Bengal, failed to a very large extent. Elsewhere throughout India, abnormally high day temperatures were unaccompanied by the usual dews at night, while the cold weather has been extraordinarily rainless, in so much that only during the last few days of January were there any signs of the winter showers. These conditions have still further injured the autumn crops, diminishing the early prospects of a spring harvest, thereby greatly enlarging the affected area and intensifying the distress.

MAP SHOWING THE FAMINE DISTRICTS OF INDIA.

The rice crop of Burmah and Bengal has fully realized expectations and constitutes a great reserve of food for the rest of India. The northwestern provinces and Oudh have successfully sown their winter crops, which have been greatly benefited by rain in the past week. In Madras and Mysore, the abrupt disappearance of the monsoon was a great disappointment. The harvest will be indifferent over large areas, but, except in a few places, no distress requiring relief is anticipated here. In the irrigated or inundated tracts of Sind and the southwest Punjab, the crops will be somewhat short, owing to the contracted area of inundation by the Indus and its tributaries, due to diminished volume of water in the canals, but the shortage will be comparatively small. The tracts which, as in former years, yield food in excess of local requirements cast will profit from the misfortunes of their neighbors.

The famine district embraces the greater part of the Bombay presidency, most of the Nyzam's dominions at Hyderabad, the western half of the central provinces, the western states of central India, the entire part of Rajputana, the southeast Punjab, and a large portion of the native states of Cutch and Gujarat. The true famine area in British India and the native states is thus about 280,000 square miles, with a population of 48,000,000. There is a further area of about 145,000 square miles, with a population of 21,000,000, in which more or less scarcity and distress prevail, where relief is being given in a tentative form. Thus, the area and population affected by the drought is largest both in British territory and the native states that was anticipated in October last. As a whole, the autumn harvest of 1899 was the worst on record for many years, while the present spring harvest on unirrigated land occupies little more than half the area sown in either of the last two years.

Agricultural prospects are growing gloomy, and the water famine increases in intensity. Lord Curzon, the viceroy of India, in an address to the imperial legislative council on the 19th of January, called attention to another feature of the present distress. During the famine years of 1896-97, the whole external world seemed to share India's sorrow and contributed to alleviate its distress. The attention of England was then turned upon suffering India, and hundreds of thousands of pounds were contributed by generous hearts. Now, the thoughts of almost every Englishman throughout the empire are fixed upon the war in South Africa. It would be too much to expect that England can again come to the rescue so splendidly as she did in 1897, and it seems clear that India must fight the plague and famine with her own means.

The Miners' Strikes in Austria.

Austria, perhaps, has never witnessed a more determined contest between capital and labor than that which is now going on in the coal districts of her three northern provinces, Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia, where from 90,000 to 70,000 mine operatives have for several weeks been on a strike for a reduction of working hours and an advance of wages, as well as for redress of various minor grievances. The production of coal has been almost entirely stopped by this strike, and, although there have been as for no tumultuous gatherings nor indications of violence, the situation is nevertheless most serious. The scarcity of fuel is not only paralyzing many important industries.

There was for some time previous to the actual outbreak of hostilities a widespread dissatisfaction among the miners. They objected especially to the length of their shifts, to the strict rules regulating contract work, and the condition obliging them to furnish their own light in the pits. They also complained because they were compelled to buy coal for domestic consumption.

A marked spirit of solidarity prevails among the strikers. All the concessions thus far have been made by the employers, and there is in labor circles a firm belief that the strike will end in a complete victory of the eight-hour movement. The government, which owns and operates a number of coal mines in Bohemia, has already caused its operatives to be informed that with the beginning of the year 1901 the uniform duration of a shift in any of its mines will be only eight hours. The other mine owners, however, have so far refused to make a similar concession. At present, of all the persons employed at the government mines, 11.4 per cent. work ten hours per day, 22.4 per cent. work eight hours, 11.4 per cent. work 12 hours, 9.5 per cent. work nine hours and nine per cent. work 11 hours, average, 9.76 hours.

The following table shows the average wages paid during the past 20 years:

The output of coal in the various districts affected by the strike was 28,000,000 tons in 1899, or more than two-thirds of the entire production of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy.

Society in Gotham Displaying Pretty Costumes

They May Be Seen at the Round of Entertainments That Are Now in Vogue

SOCIETY is in vogue once more. The long days of Lent are a thing of the past; Easter has come and gone again for another year, and the days of entertainments, of parties and balls and visiting are here again. With these days come the beautiful fashions of the spring, the dainty gowns, and hats, and jackets; and of these none are more charming than the dainty visiting gowns in which my lady does a calling go.

Much variety is seen in the gowns of the season, no matter for what purpose they are designed. In fact, variety is the order of the day in fashions, and so great is the variety offered that every woman may be just as exclusive in the fashioning of her garments as the desires and can afford, for, of course, exclusiveness and originality in gowns, as in everything else is expensive.

These elaborations by which variety is secured are carried out in many ways. The latest of these is now shown in the sleeve design, that sleeve; the ornamented sleeve, with its ornamentations in countless different ways, is seen on almost every new gown that are either worn by the fashionable woman of the city, or displayed in the fashionable shops. And while speaking of sleeves, we may note the tendency toward short sleeves for an early date. These have come to us from Paris and from our own winter resorts. While in the south I saw large numbers of these sleeves worn with long gloves of silk, suede or kid, and the returning fashionables are not only bringing the fashion north with them, but are rejoicing in the fact that it is a fashion approved by Paris. As seen to-day the lower ends of these short sleeves are variously finished, small revered cuffs, ruffles of lace, chiffon, puffings of soft silks and panne, shirrings of various materials and other fabrics are being widely used where the sleeve is cut deeply at the elbow or slightly below it. Many house gowns have shirred sleeves of thin fabrics, which are cut off at the elbow and finished there with falls of lace, full if the lace is thin or simple if the richer embroideries are used.

But the short sleeve does not please every woman, and those who prefer the long ones there is an equally great list of ornamentation to attempt. The long sleeve covering the wrist has disappeared, and all long sleeves are now finished with cuffs and with the fullness of lace fastened with a falling gracefully over the hand. This is a return to a style which has frequently been in vogue. All sleeves have some soft fabric inside and around the hand. This is also a former fashion, and is a very advantageous one, as the material which touches the skin can be frequently changed if it becomes slightly soiled.

It has only been within the past week or so that any tendency has been shown toward ornamentation of the sleeve above the wrist. For several seasons this portion of every gown has been made plain and without garniture of any kind, unless it were a few narrow tucks or cording, or a few gathers at the top. But now fancy sleeves are to assert themselves. On them are seen net, filigree, puffings, strappings, narrow velvet ribbons and rich embroidered laces. In fact, the more elaborate the construction of the arm covering, the more effective and new will the costume be. The lingerie sleeves are being constructed in a variety of forms, from the end of the short sleeve to the wrist. These fabrications admit of a great deal of additional garniture in the way of thin fabrics and lacy effects. No two need be alike, and, in fact, no two are alike. Every frills and net-and-point nets, plaited gauzes and shirred chiffons. In the gowns of the day these are being used for yokes and vests, with ruchings and flounces of guipure lace, Brussels lace, duchess lace, mallee, valenciennes lace, fine French lace and applique lace, and rosettes of ribbon and tulle. These are in shades of white, ecru, old lace, ivory and black, and are worn on the many handsome light weight cloths which are a feature of the season's materials, and silks, poplins, foulards and printed silks.

One of these visiting gowns of pale gray cloth, with trimming of ivory lace in a design of flowers appliqued on the cloth. The skirt is very graceful, with a box plait at the back, and a circular flounce in front about five inches from the waistline. It was very narrow, and as it extended towards the bottom it widened. This flounce was edged with very narrow ivory lace. Directly down the front of the skirt was an applique of ivory lace, with the narrow lace outlining around the bottom of the skirt. The bodice was in fine tucks of gray silk, and over this came cleverly swathed folds of the cloth bordered with wide lace appliques.

Another gown seen on Fifth avenue a day or two ago was of heliotrope silk poplin. This was elaborately trimmed with quantities of ecru guipure insertion and ruched ribbon.

One of the prettiest things of the week was a gown of French foulard in pink, with quantities of the finest of French lace in black. The skirt of this gown was made with a double box plait in the back, and a narrow accordion plaited flounce around the bottom, with a heading of French black lace. There was a row of these accordion pleats that reached to the bottom of the skirt with the black lace on each.

A pretty foulard gown of red and white was made with flounces of bretton lace, and the round bodice had a yoke and sleeves of the same lace trimmed with ruchings of scarlet ribbon.

JAPS ARE PLEASED.

Rejoice in the Marriage of Their Crown Prince, Yoshihito.

His Bride Is the Princess Sada, a Prodigy Notified of Fifteen—Some of the Details of a Swell Japanese Wedding.

Cable dispatches from Tokio announce that Yoshihito Harunomiya, the heir apparent to the mikado of Japan, was united in marriage there with Princess Sada, a pretty little daughter of the great house of Fujiwara. The prince imperial escorted the bride-to-be from the home of her parents to the imperial palace, where the wedding was performed.

Princess Sada, now tae crown princess of Japan and its future empress, is 15 years of age. She is a daughter of the powerful Prince Kugo Michitaka, who is a direct descendant of the illustrious family of the Fujiwaras, who have furnished many an empress to the Japanese. The family is noted for its military traditions and its great wealth. About 18 months ago the mikado decided that his son should marry, and the little princess, then a pupil in the third grade of the high school, was selected as the bride.

Japanese girls mature at a much earlier age than their fairer European sisters, which accounts for the youthfulness of the imperial couple's bride. When the court of Tokio selected little Sada for that high honor she was taken from among her companions at school and turned over to efficient masters whose duty it was to instruct her in the special branches in the study of which modernized Japan encourages its nobility. Dropping all her studies save history, French and geography, she began to devote herself especially to these and to the study of music, not forgetting the cultivation of her talent for poetry, which is said to be so unusually promising as to threaten the prestige of the present empress as a poet. In addition to these mental exercises the princess has not been allowed to neglect her calisthenics, and her naturally robust physique has been strengthened by work in the gymnasium and in the open air.

CROWN PRINCE OF JAPAN.

Prince Yoshihito is 21 years old, but, young as this may seem for a betrothed to occidental custom, it is a very mature age for Japan. The groom's imperial father was married at the startlingly early age of 15. Yoshihito is not the son of the empress. The dynasty cannot be endangered by the practice of monogamy, and that is why the emperor is always supplied with several secondary wives, who live quietly and are seldom heard of. One of these—Mme. Yanagiwara—is the mother of the crown prince.

All of the mikado's hopes of a succession in his direct line are centered upon Yoshihito. He is the only living son of the emperor, who would have been married long ago had he not been something of an invalid. It is said that he has weak lungs, but lately he has been in very good health, owing to the skill of eminent foreign surgeons who have been consulted in the case. Should the prince have no issue, the crown of Japan will pass to an heir who is only remotely related to the reigning house. Hence the great solicitude of the mikado and his friends for the marriage of the delicate young man who is at last a husband.

A Japanese wedding is not a simple affair, and even the crown prince was no exception to the rule. The bride is required to wear 15 silk garments and to make several changes of gowns before the nuptial oath is said to be finished. No vows are interchanged, but such ceremonies as the west is familiar with are replaced by the drinking in solemn fashion of several draughts of wine from different vessels. The cups are very small—about the size of a benedictine glass—and bride and groom alternate in consuming the wine from these diminutive utensils.

Prince and Princess Yoshihito were the recipients of hundreds of costly presents from all kinds of sources. The most important of these is a fine palace, magnificently furnished, in which they begin their married life surrounded by every comfort conceivable to the oriental imagination and possible of production by modern art.

Black Diamonds Are Rare.

The only place where "black diamonds" are found is in the Brazilian province of Bahia. They are usually found in river beds and brought up by divers. Others are obtained by tunneling mountains. The largest specimen ever found was worth $50,000.

UNIQUE OHIO CHURCH.

Was Christened with a Bottle of Old Whisky After All Hands Had Taken a Drink.

The Congregational church at Austinburg, O., was dedicated as a house of worship by the breaking of a bottle of whisky over its spire. This town, located six miles south of Geneva, will next June celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of its settlement; and the old church near its geographical center has the distinction of being the first frame church built upon the Western Reserve.

The days when this church was built were avowedly the days of whisky. It was the day when the drink was poured out freely by all who attended the "raising" of a building, and when everyone partook of it as we of the present would drink a glass of lemonade. Even Rev. Giles W. Cowles, the hero of Austinburg and veteran minister of the county, partook of the "firewater;" and pastors subsequently filling the pulpit of the church stopped at the village store, before and after attending Sunday services, to take an "eye opener."

(It Was Built Before Temperance Workers Held the Fort.)

The "raising" of the church occupied a whole week, having been begun on Monday morning and completed Saturday afternoon. On the last day the entire community was upon the scene to witness the dedicatory ceremonies. As none of those erecting the building would climb to the top of the spire, which is over 100 feet from the ground, the services of a lake sailor were procured. With a rope in his hand, he climbed to the topmost point of the edifice, and as the last timber was placed he drew a bottle of whisky from the ground by means of a rope, and, breaking it over the spire, shouted: "Three cheers for the new church."

THE SULTAN'S MONOGRAM.

It Is a Queer-Looking Symbol, But One That Is Highly Esteemed by Mohammedans.

Possibly you have seen this queer looking symbol upon pieces of Turkish embroidery, for it is much used by the Turks, and Mohammedans generally, for decorative purposes. It is the autograph, or more properly speaking, the monogram, of the sultan of Turkey. It consists of the words "Abdul Hamid

THE SULTAN'S MONOGRAM.
(Counterfeiters Would Have Hard Work to Imitate It)

Khan, Second, son of Abdul Majid Khan." The smaller monogram just to the left contains the words "El Ghazi" (Warrior of the Faith), a title which the present sultan adopted after his army had won several victories in the Turko-Russian war. The queer shape of the sultan's monogram is due to the fact that it is a copy of the form of the signature of the first sultan, who could not write. He signed his name by bringing the thumb and fingers of his right hand close together, dipping them in ink and pressing them upon the paper. The imperial secretary of state, remarks the Little Chronicle, is just now trying to get an autograph of the sultan—on the bottom of an order for $200,000 to reimburse American missionaries whose property was destroyed during the Armenian riots five years ago.

Punishment Fitted Crime.

Rough and harsh as he was Nicholas I., czar of Russia, had a measure of chivalry in his disposition. While driving through the streets of St. Petersburg on one occasion he caught sight of an officer of his household in the act of ordering an old beggar woman, whose hands were raised in a prayer for alms. The official was quite unmindful of the august witness of his act, and was rather pleased when, a few hours later, he was summoned to the imperial presence. Nicholas soon undeceived him, and in the presence of a dozen courtiers cut him to the quick with his indignant reproof. "Enough!" said Nicholas, finally; "you will walk up and down that corridor all night, and every time you turn you will say, in a loud voice: 'I am a puppy! I am a puppy!'"

CHARLES A. TOWNE.

Nominated for Vice President of the United States by the Sioux Falls Populist Convention.

Charles A. Towne was born in Ingham county, Mich., near the city of Lansing, 51 years ago last October. His parents were in comfortable circumstances, and young Towne, after receiving a common school education was sent to Ann Arbor university, where he graduated in both the academic and law courses. After receiving his sheepskin Mr. Towne went to Marquette, Mich., where he opened a law office and practiced his profession for about three years. He then moved to Chicago, where he struggled to establish a law practice for several months, but gave it up and came to Duluth in the spring of 1890. He has always taken an active interest in politics, and until the free silver agitation in 1896 was a staunch republican. In 1892 he stumped considerably for the republican ticket through the northwest, and his remarkable eloquence soon brought him to the front. At the next republican congressional convention for the Duluth (Minn.) district, Mr. Towne was enthusiastically nominated for congress, and was elected with an overwhelming majority. He seemed destined to be one of the foremost republicans in the west, until in the early summer of 1896 he declared himself in favor of free silver. In the fall he was nominated by the democratic and populists as their candidate for congress, although holding his seat in that body as a republican. He was defeated by Page Morris by nearly 2,000 votes. In the fall of 1898 he was again nominated by the populists for congress, and was once more defeated by Morris by a plurality of 1,000 votes, although he carried Duluth, the home town of both candidates, by 1,342. In the summer of 1896 he was chosen national chairman of the silver republicans.

IS AFRAID OF CATS.

Gen. Lord Roberts Has an Antipathy for Whitehall, Which Amounts Almost to a Mania.

Gen. Lord Roberts, the hero of Kandahar, who wears the Victoria cross for gallantry in the field, is afraid of cats.

If the fate of the empire depended on it, "Bobs" could not stroke the fur of a cat.

A flock of thousand domestic cats scattered after the veldt would drive the commander in chief of the British forces out of South Africa. A single cat hurled into his tent might demoralize the finest plans for a battle or a march.

It is not likely that the Boers will be able to take military advantage of Lord Roberts' weakness, for he is well guarded, and the most patriotic Transvaal cat could not approach his tent without being shot. So Boer sympathizers will gain nothing by forwarding their household pets as munitions of war to President Kruger.

"Bobs" is the victim of an antipathy. He cannot help himself. An antipathy cannot be reasoned away, and it has nothing to do with courage. It is something a person is born with or else acquired very early in life. Many persons share Lord Roberts' antipathy. Nearly everybody has a horror for snakes. Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote a story about a young man who had a mortal antipathy for beautiful young women, which is about the saddest antipathy that could be imagined.

So the British general is entitled to sympathy and not scorn because the sight of a cat makes him tremble all over and feel faintly faint.

Illuminants and the Eye.

The number of winks in a given time is found by Nois, a Russian physician, to furnish a fairly accurate measure of the degree of eye fatigue caused by various illuminants. This method gave the following unexpected results from readings of ten minutes: With a candle, 6.5 winks per minute; city gas, 8.9; sunlight, 2.2; electric light, 1.5.

GOVERNOR OF HAWAII.

Sanford B. Dole, Late President of the Island Republic, Appointed to the Position.

Sanford Ballard Dole, who has been appointed governor of Hawaii by the president, is regarded as a particularly available man for this important post. His name and personality are a part of the recent history of the islands. Mr. Dole was born in Honolulu in 1844. His parents arrived as missionaries to Hawaii in that very year. He received his preliminary education in Punahaun college, on the island, and was later graduated from Williams college, in the United States. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in Boston and returned to Honolulu, where he took up the practice of law. In 1887 he was appointed to the supreme court of the kingdom. Mr. Dole, as member of the Hawaiian legislature, took part in the reform movement which culminated in the revolution of 1893. On July 4, 1894, he was made president of the republic of Hawaii. Mr. Dole was the choice of the conservative element of the island for the position of governor. He is thoroughly familiar with the needs and the affairs of the country, and it is believed his administration will be just and wise.

HE FAVORS THE BOERS.

Mr. Schreiner, Premier of Cape Colony, Is Filling a Most Difficult Place Just Now.

W. P. Schreiner, premier of Cape Colony, who is now threatening to resign his office, has had a very difficult place to fill during the British-Boer war. As leader of the Afrikander element in the Cape, he was ostensibly opposed to war, although doubtless in sympathy with the other states. He made many efforts to preserve the peace between the peoples, and was more than once called a traitor while negotiations were under way. As to his intellect, he is certainly clever enough to have been for many years an adroit and not entirely unsuccessful opponent of Cecil Rhodes. Mr. Schreiner was born in Cape Colony, is of Dutch descent, and was educated in England. He studied at London and Cambridge universities, and after taking his degree returned to South Africa. A barrister, soon winning a reputation for shrewdness, he became attorney general of Cape Colony when Rhodes was prime minister. For a time he was Rhodes' right-hand man and intimate friend, but in time Jameson's raid caused a rupture which was never healed, and the two men were long at "daggers drawn" with each other. In appearance Mr. Schreiner is a fine-looking man. He has a large head, joined to a pair of broad shoulders by a thick neck. He is a brother of Olive Schreiner, the novelist.

Where Girls Do the Courting.

The Coroados of Brazil have no marriage ceremony. The suitor simply presents to the bride's parents fruits or game as a token that he agrees to provide for the necessities of his wife. Among the Caroyes of Brazil the courting is left entirely to the girl. She woos and wins her husband, fixes the day of the wedding and invites all the guests. When the feast is over the guests will carry the bride to the river and give her a bathing. The bridegroom makes a pretense of hiding, but is soon found and is served in the same manner. Then his parents set up a prolonged howling and declare that they cannot part with the lady love, but, all the same, a cock and hen are sacrificed and the pair are legally man and wife.

RUSHING THE SEASON.

Full Dressed Women Are Governed by the Weather in Changing Costumes.

There are always persons who are discontented if they cannot be in advance with every change of fashion—who are eager to don spring attire before the winds of winter are laid. However bitter the blasts they desire to lay aside their comfortable winter wraps as soon as the calendar changes and appear in spring coats. The number of these who do so from the mistaken idea their health to shallow vanity is not so large as it once was, because, in spite of all that is said to the contrary, the women of to-day are wiser in such matters than their mothers or their grandmothers. They do many things now in matters of health, and have become, for that reason, more intelligent housekeepers and mothers. There are not, therefore, so many women as there once were who "rush the season" and adopt the attire of May in March. Fashionable women never do this to-day, as they once did, because it is now considered "bad form" to do so. It is the woman who aims to be fashionable, and who does not comprehend the fact that economy must be at the foundation of the modern fashion, who makes this blunder. The elegant woman of to-day makes no sudden changes in her dress. She abhors the startling and extreme in her attire as she does in everything. Pronounced styles in dress are soon looked upon with favor by fashion, but fashion has changed.

The only persons in the cities who rush into a new gown and a spring bonnet, whatever the weather is, are makers of "novelties," and to copy their mistresses' styles, and other ignorant but ambitious persons.

Each year the changes of dress from one season to another are more gradual. The distinctive fashions of spring and autumn are almost lost sight of, so gradual is the change in the present day between the styles of winter and summer. Well dressed women of to-day are governed by the weather and by the calendar in making changes from winter to spring dress. It is not an uncommon thing to see women wearing their heavy winter wraps and fur garments as late as May. The sensible English fashion of using fur capes and boas for cool evenings in midsummer has long ago been adopted in this country, so that fur is no longer a badge of the season of frosts. Ultra changes in the cut and fit of clothes are not now introduced suddenly, as they once were. The fashions of one year, on the contrary, are gradually merged into those of the next. It is as though all well dressed women had agreed to the poet's dictum:

"Do not the first by whom the new is tried, Nor yet the last to lay the old aside."

KITCHEN ECONOMIES.

Various Small Items Which Go Far Towards Reducing Expenses.

After a broth has been skillfully skimmed and still little atoms of grease appear on the surface, lay a piece of clean brown paper over the top, and the grease will cling to it.

Often only the whites of eggs are required for immediate use. The yolks may be kept some time if they are put into a small cup, covered with a little cold water, and kept in a cool place.

A loaf of cake that has got stale and dry may be freshened so as to seem newly baked by putting it in a tin, covering the tin with another pan, and leaving the whole in a warm oven about 20 minutes.

To boil meat so as to retain the juices and soluble salts, and yet cook it sufficiently, it should be plunged into boiling water and boiled rapidly for about ten minutes. After this heat has killed the outside layer, the pushed over to the back of the fire, where its contents will simmer gently. This tends to coagulate the outer rind of the meat, so that the juices cannot escape. If meat be treated in this manner the beef will be found juicy and tender, but if the meat is allowed to boil it will be found hard and chippy.

When small pieces of pie crust are left from making pies, instead of rolling them out again, as is usually done, secure some round hardwood sticks, about four inches long, and, after the pieces of crusts are rolled out thin, cut them into narrow strips, with a jagged iron. Sour the sticks and lay the strips around them. Place these in a tin, and put in a hot oven to bake. When the crust has got partly cool, slide the stick out. When serving, fill the spaces with jelly, whipped cream or a marmalade, and the family will be delighted with a new dish.—Home Life.

Quiet Colors the Vogue.

No matter how inexpensive a gown may be, it should be becoming in color. There are a few points that should always be remembered by the woman with a limited wardrobe. She should not invest in high novelty shades; if very stout or very tall, or unusually slender, she should not wear light or dark colors; medium shades of red and white are particularly stylish for trimmings on any color or material. A light, airy effect should be aimed at by young women and young girls. The colors on the color card issued for the manufacturing and retail trades are almost faded in appearance, as they are the tones represented by the pastel or miniature shades. Everything is softened by art to appear as though subdued by time, and several old colors in the list are well disguised by the antique finish.—Ladies' Home Journal.

WOULD IMITATE SANDY.

Widow of Secretary of the Navy Long Will Give Her Rich Value to Evangelistic Work.

Miss Ruth Cordis Long, niece of the late secretary of the navy, John D. Long, has chosen as her vocation to sing gospel singing. Her work in this line in connection with recent revival services at a Worcester (Mass.) church confirmed her inclination to adopt this calling, which has dated back two years.

Wheat at San Diego, in 1896, Miss Long was asked by the Christian Endeavor society if she would be willing to sing at some services to be held on board the United States steamship Monterey. She gladly consented, and sang "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" with so much effect that one of the sailors, a boy of about 20, came forward to her at the conclusion of the service and declared that the song, as rendered by her, had determined him to lead a different life, and that he intended to write to his mother to that effect on that same night. He gave Miss Long one of his cards on which he wrote: "May God bless you for showing me sinner the true light." Miss Long carries the card in her purse as a keepsake of her first mission work.

Since her return to Boston from California Miss Long has been engaged in church singing. She visited Washington last winter, and by invitation sang several selections before President and Mrs. McKinley.

Personally, Miss Long is a young woman of much charm and magnetism. Her enthusiasm in her work proceeds from a sincere conviction that her voice can be made a powerful influence for good in connection with evangelical and temperance work. Her voice is a rich, deep contralto.

At the age of 17 she was brought out as a concert singer in Portland, Me., by Annie Louise Carey. Her singing then showed great promise, and her friends urged her to make the operatic stage her aim. Her family encouraged this career, and Miss Long took up concert singing, in which she has been successful.

AN UMBRELLA TENT.

How a Modern Inventor Has Made Practical Use of the Old Indian Tepee Idea.

An Indian tepee, with its lodge pole, is the course of its evolution is passing through the hands of a modern inventor, has become transformed into an umbrella tent. The main original feature is still there, the central pole, the supporting side poles, and the canvas cover. There is this difference, however, that the modern inventor's tent folds up conveniently when camp is to be struck, while the Indian's and even the modern army tent are not nearly so conveniently set up and taken down. Dexter Smith of West Superior, whose unique feat is illustrated by the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, conceived the idea of building a tent for hunters, campers or army use, exactly on the plan of a huge umbrella. By the use of ordinary tackle, by ropes and pulleys, serve to open and close the tent. The upper collar is adjustable at any point to permit changing the height of the tent as desired; the lower collar controls the extension of the side walls. The tent can be folded up or closed ready for transportation, assumes simply of the central stick with the canvas rolled about it, in true umbrella fashion.

Rats Fetted by Miners.

Rats in the mines of Colorado have pushy tails, like squirrels. They are petted by the miners, and sit on their shoulders while eating the food which the latter eat their meals, waiting for scraps to be thrown to them. Miners always share their meals with them, and never try to harm them.

KENNEL OF RATTERS.

Located on the Roof of a Down-Town Chicago Building.

Some of Its Canine Inmates Never Tread the Earth—Used to Keep a Big Department Store Clear of Rats.

A dog kennel upon the roof of a stationery building surrounded by tall skyscrapers, in the midst of the business portion of the business center, is one of the curiosities Chicago has to offer.

This novel kennel, says the Chicago Tribune, is located upon the roof of a prominent downtown theater and is the property of a department store immediately adjoining. It has been maintained with great success for three years.

The dogs in this kennel are fox terriers and are used by the manager of the department store to keep the place clear of rats that fairly overran the place before their introduction.

The manager claims they are superior to cats or professional rat catchers, as, unlike cats, they are cleanly in their habits, and unlike the professional rat man they do get rid of the rats that infest the place, both by killing and frightening them away. Before we introduced these little four-footed guardians the damage wrought by rodents ran up into the thousands of dollars every year; now our loss is comparatively slight," said the manager.

The dogs are turned into the store by the night watchman in the evening after the last customer has gone and the last clerk has departed. They scamper up and down the aisles, nosing behind boxes, barrels, and bales of goods, keeping up a barking and yelping that frightens all the longtails away.

They killed from 20 to 30 rats every night when they were first installed as a guard over the stock, but since their catch doesn't amount to that many a month.

They are in charge of the head janitor of the store, who sees to it they are supplied with the best of food—much of it specially cooked by himself—and their bedding consists of soft woolen blankets that have been too badly damaged to be salable.

Their kennels are dry goods boxes with a door cut on one side, and are set on the roof in such a way as to give them protection in the winter time and oilcloth cloths in the summer.

They serve as a playground what the janitor calls "their park," which is bounded by an iron fence about three feet in height, setting just back of the cornices facing the street on one side. Two sides are formed by the sloping sides of a nearmost rising from the gravel roof which forms the lawn of their playground, and the fourth side is the wall of the department building.

The dogs seem perfectly contented with their situation, and evidently consider it in this high altitude. The janitor claims that the dogs are much healthier than their relatives who live in hamsts upon the earth, and to substantiate this claim points with pride to the fact there has never been a single case of distemper among the dogs, and he has been in charge for more than two years.

There have never been less than six and sometimes as high as 20 dogs in the kennels at one time.

The number of litters of puppies have been during the two years the janitor has been in charge, averaging five pups to the litter. This makes 120 dogs that have sprung to life upon the rooftop in that time, and of that number only two have been lost, one accidentally pushed over the edge of the roof into the areaway in the rear of the building and was crushed to death by the fall of six stories.

There are at present seven dogs in the kennels, and they are of a pure bull terrier lately introduced, has ever set foot upon the ground.

Perhaps as curious as anything connected with these aerial kennels are the names the janitor, who is of a poetic nature, has bestowed upon the dogs as they appear in litters. One male being named "Sky," "Air," "Cloud," "Smoke" and "Vapor," while the female glories in the name of "Sunshine." The bull terrier, which is as white as bull terriers can be, bears the name of "Snow."

A Methodist Revolution.

The Methodist General Conference has removed one of the rules of church government that has long since disappointed the deconstruction from any other—that of limiting the pastorate of any of its ministers to more than five years in one place. Under the limitation system the Methodists have grown to be one of the greatest church bodies in the world, and the effect that the abolition of this rule will have will be watched with great interest. While it may be that the larger towns and most influential churches will not feel apprehensive of the result, it is thought that in the rural districts the change from the system of compulsory rotation may not be so satisfactory.

Considering the case of the rural church and this aspect of the question, the Newark News observes:

"The rotation in pastorates, made absolutely necessary by the time limit, secured at least an occasional able clergyman for the church of the smallest means. Talented young men accepted these churches gladly, knowing that in five years at the latest they would be released to take better fields. They worked hard, with promotion in mind, and the weaker churches flourished correspondingly. The abolition of the time limit will naturally make promotion much more tardy, and render the smaller churches, therefore, far less desirable to able men, results full of evil omen to country communities."

Comparing the total losses of the British in South Africa with those of the United States in the Philippines, the Filipino war looks rather insignificant. The total losses suffered by the English in their unholy war against the struggling and brave Boer Republic now amount to 40,000 men. Cutting off one cipher, and putting the figure at 4,000, you have the total losses to the United States troops in their conflict with the Filipinos. The British have already paid the price that "staggers humanity," as Paul Kruger put it at the outset.

The members of the Congressional Committee on Harbor and River Improvements that visited Paterson and Newark on Saturday to look into the project of widening and deepening the Passaic river, so as to make the stream navigable for big craft, expressed themselves unanimously in favor of the proposed improvement. The news carries cheer to those who would be benefited by such an improvement, but it will require considerable "log-rolling" in Washington to get the necessary funds to carry out the project.

The grim reaper has again taken off a prominent and prosperous figure in New Jersey newspaper circles. This time it is James Wilson Schoch, senior proprietor of the Newark Sunday Call. Together with the late Wm. U. Ure, Mr. Schoch secured control of the Call many years ago when the paper was struggling to outlegen, and by judicious, able work and brilliant talent succeeded in building up one of the most valuable and influential journals in the State.

Bloodsuckers are actually shaking hands with themselves in their joy at the passage of Senator Kean's bill providing for a $165,000 public building. But they must remember that it is a long road to an actual consummation of the project even after it has reached the stage to which Senator Kean's energy and influence has pushed it.

Staunch scientists have temporarily abandoned their crusade against that festive New Jersey bird, the mosquito, because, as a local paper puts it, "people were not sufficiently interested to co-operate." It is too bad. An expectant world was anxiously awaiting the result of the war in which a truce has now been ingloriously declared.

That Somerville undertaker who was paid by the county for interring the remains of the South Branch wreck victim, and did not even so much as wash the dirt off the face of the poor fellow before putting him in the grave, must have a cold-blooded idea of his professional duties.

And now the Passaic City Journal rebuts to him as "Farmer Orator James R. Martine, of Bayonne." If this thing keeps on Mr. Martine will soon lose his identity as a Plainfielder.

A Wise Democratic Course.

The nomination of Col. Bryan as the Democratic candidate for President being conceded long before the National convention meets, the next great subject that looms up for settlement at the Kansas City gathering is the question of who will be the Nebraskan's running mate. Many names have been mentioned in connection with the Vice-Presidential nomination, but as the date of the convention draws nearer there is one that seems to be regarded with more favor than any other. It is the name of William Sulzer, Congressman from New York.

The fact that Mr. Sulzer is a formidable aspirant for the second highest office in the gift of the people of this country possesses a close interest for New Jersey, and particularly of Union county. It is a fact probably not generally known that Mr. Sulzer is a native of Union county, having been born in Union township, only a few miles from Plainfield, and attended the public schools in the city of Elizabeth till he was in his teens. However much men may disagree as to political views, there is a sense of satisfaction in realizing that out of the section in which they live, and in which there must be an inherent pride and a desire to see it glorified and made prominent, a man has developed who has had the ability, the cleverness and the force to make for himself a place among the leading men of the country. That Mr. Sulzer, springing from humble parentage and battling against the odds of the world while striving to rise, has done.

If he is nominated to the second place on one of the leading tickets in a campaign which promises to be the most important and notable in the history of the Republic, it will be a distinguished honor and recognition that his fellow-citizens in the section in which he was born to that priceless heritage, a sovereign citizen of the United States, will at least—even though they are partisans of another political organization—appreciate as a choice which meets with local gratification and pride.

Considered from a purely Democratic view, the candidacy of Congressman Sulzer for this office has much that commends itself to the practical, sober view of the political situation. It is generally admitted that the Democratic ticket should be made up of an eastern Vice-Presidential candidate, and in considering those in the east who are regarded as available for the place, Mr. Sulzer's position in the party, as well as his official acts as a Congressman, strikes a sympathetic chord that vibrates the majority of the Democracy.

New York's electorial vote is regarded as very desirable—in fact, essential—to the success of the Democratic ticket. Mr. Sulzer would tend to do much in the second place on the ticket to stir New York, and especially Tammany Hall, to an exhibition of Democratic energy and aggressiveness that has not been witnessed in that commonwealth in several years.

As a native of New Jersey, the Democratic delegates to be elected at Trenton next Thursday to represent the State at Kansas City will undoubtedly regard Mr. Sulzer's aspirations to be Vice-President with more favor than any other name that will be mentioned in connection with that office.

Plainfield's Military Chance.

For several years there has been more or less discussion about organizing a company of the National Guard of New Jersey in Plainfield, but somehow the opportunity has never come so that the project could be carried out successfully. Now, however, it looks as though Plainfield's chance to secure a military company has about shaped itself in a practicable manner.

At the recent field day of the Second Regiment in Trenton the commanding officers of the company hailing from Keyport were so manifest, both from a military standpoint and as gentlemen, that Colonel Gillmore has recommended that the company be disbanded and a new company to take its place be organized in another town.

The determination of Col. Gillmore to effect this change is the chance which Plainfield should seize upon. Efforts should be made at once to start a movement to organize a company of the National Guard in this city, and in the meantime Col. Gillmore should be thoroughly acquainted with the military desires of the Electrode of the East and his ability to furnish one of the crack companies of the Second Regiment.

A fine military company, attached to the National Guard, would be an excellent thing for Plainfield. That the city possesses the requisite material for such an organization no one can doubt. All it requires is for a few to take the initiative and enlist the interests and efforts of those who will unconditionally be anxious to become members as soon as the first steps have been taken.

GOOD GOLF PLAYED ON THE LOCAL LINKS.

Van Herden and Chapman Cups Contested for at Hillside.

MANY PLAYED SATURDAY.

W. J. R. THIERS WAS FIRST WINNER OF COMMITTEE TROPHY.

Edgar I. Serrell Won Men's Handicap at Park Club Links—Miss Howell Victorious in Ladies' Handicap Competition.

While the links of the Park Golf Club have been open for a month the active season of competitive play was not inaugurated until Saturday afternoon. First play for the green committee challenge trophy, a men's handicap competition and a ladies' handicap competition, were the events of the day. W. J. R. Thiers won the green committee trophy, while Miss Saidee May Howell and Edgar I. Serrell carried off first honors in the two handicaps.

The course was crowded during the first part of the afternoon, and even the threatening rain failed to frighten the golfers away. The rain kept its promise and appeared late in the afternoon, but many of the enthusiasts declined to have their day's sport spoiled and kept on playing.

The general interest centred about the first winner of the green committee trophy. A men's handicap competition, eighteen holes, medal play, was held. There were sixteen entries. The player making the lowest gross score in that event was to be the winner of the trophy. He will then be subject to challenge and the trophy will be played for every Saturday afternoon.

It was expected that one of the scratch men in the tournament would win it and W. J. R. Thiers did so. He made the two rounds in company with Edgar I Serrell. Thiers played good, consistent golf except for the last two holes of the first round. He rallied, however, and handed in a card that showed 101. Serrell played a brilliant game, but it lacked steadiness. With his handicap of 20 it easily won him first place in the handicap. His ninth hole in 5 was a fine achievement, being one better than bogie. He made it on a phenomenal put.

But for Thiers' break at the end of the first round, he should have had a 41. The score card, turned in by Thiers and Serrell, was as follows:

Thiers, out	4	5	4	4	5	4	5	5	5	41
Thiers, in	5	5	4	5	4	4	5	5	5	42—83
Serrell, out	4	5	5	4	5	4	5	5	5	42
Serrell, in	4	5	4	4	5	4	5	5	5	41—83

Fred P. Taylor and Morgan T. Townsend played together. Neither was up to his best game and so figured little in the handicap. Townsend's ball hit in a pot hole on the seventh and bothered him somewhat. Both came within ten strokes of the score made by the winner of the trophy and so were eligible to send in a challenge which they promptly did. Taylor will play for it next week and Townsend the week following unless the green committee allow it to be competed for Decoration Day. Serrell just came inside the challenging limit and will probably challenge later.

Senator Charles A. Reed and Councilman George T. Rogers carried off second and third place respectively in the handicap. They played together and the Senator did some great work on the green.

The following cards were returned in the men's handicap:

	Gross.	Hand.	Net.
Edgar I. Serrell	103	20	83
Charles A. Reed	125	40	85
George T. Rogers	126	40	86

Only four competitors took part in the ladies' handicap, nine holes, medal play, although there were a number of other entries. It proved a fairly easy win for Miss Saidee Mae Howell from scratch. The scores were:

	Gross.	Hand.	Net.
Miss Saidee Mae Howell	57	3	54
Miss Ethel Reed	67	12	55
Miss Lucy Lewis	67	12	55
Miss Mary Lewis	67	12	55

There was a large number of golf enthusiasts that gathered at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds Saturday when two events formed the attraction. In the morning the first play for the vanHerwerden cup, ladies' competition, was the feature. The account of this event was published in The Daily Press of Saturday. In the afternoon the qualifying round for the Chapman cup brought out a large number of players. The entry list for this event was large, although all did not head in their scores. In this competition the first eight qualified for match play for the cup to be played for next Wednesday. The contest was close and exciting throughout and, as will be seen by the scores there is very little margin between the majority.

The course was in the pink of condition, allowing the best play, and aside from the competition there was a goodly number of enthusiasts enjoying private matches. Toward the latter part of the afternoon the rain somewhat interfered with the play, but the majority of the players remained on the course and completed the rounds. The scores made in the competition for the Chapman Cup are as follows: J. Whitney Baker, 90; A. R. Ish, 91; Willard Wadsworth, 94; Morris Dorsett, 101; W. K. Gwesney, 101; W. T. Kaufman, 94; Howard Huntington, 106; Olaf Bangstand, 107; R. F. Murray, 106; B. M. Shepard, 108; R. Stockton, 109; F. W. Mason, 109; J. W. Sandford, 119; L. H. VanBuren, 120.

On Decoration Day the first round and semi-finals for the Chapman Cup will be played, and next Saturday the finals will be the event of interest. The golf team will go to New Brunswick Saturday and contest with the team at that place for honors in the New Jersey League series.

In addition to the amount received Friday evening by Rev. J. O. McKelvey for famine sufferers, he has received by letter a check for $40 from a man who says: "Having been in that country I know in a slight degree how awful the suffering must be." Another person stopped Mr. McKelvey and handed him a dollar for the cause. He refused to give his name.

NOBLE PATRIOTISM OF FATHER SMYTH.

Expressed in the Sermon He Preached to Veterans in St. Mary's Church.

G. A. R. MEMBERS ATTENDED

FIRST SERVICE OF ITS KIND EVER HELD BY LOCAL CATHOLICS.

Praise for the Men Who Saved the Country in the Civil War—Father Smyth Glorified the Great-Sons of the United States.

For the first time in the history of Plainfield, the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., the Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans, attended a memorial service last Sunday in St. Mary's R. C. church, which was held for the soldiers and sailors who died for their country in the Civil War. The large and beautiful edifice was thronged with members of the organizations and friends until there was scarcely standing room. The organizations marched in the church in a body and occupied seats reserved for them. In the front of the church near the altar was placed an American flag that symbolized the object and principles for which the service was held.

The service opened with the singing of "America" by the choir and congregation. This was followed with a prayer by Rev. Father J. A. Westman, curate of the church. An impressive part of the service was the singing of "Resting on the Old Camp Ground," by the chancel boy choir, the congregation singing the chorus. "Pray for the Dead" was a beautiful selection sung by a quartette composed of Mrs. Veronica Brady, soprano; Miss Flanagan, alto; Charles Boone, bass; Mr. McDonald, tenor.

This was followed with a patriotic address by Rev. Father P. E. Smyth, pastor of the church. It was a soul-stirring discourse and was intently listened to throughout. A portion of the address is as follows:

"Members of the G. A. R., on this, your first visit to our church, I beg to extend to you a cordial welcome.

"On matters of religious faith we may hold distinctly different views, but in respect for the dead soldiers and honor to the living ones, in love for the flag and loyalty to the Union, we are in heart and hand. But those especially with Irish blood in their veins have a warm spot in their affections for the American soldier. We cannot forget that the first ray of hope for the Irish people came, after long centuries of oppression, as a result of the bravery of American soldiers in the War of the Revolution, and we gratefully acknowledge that to American sympathy and influence we are indebted for some of the just rights our people now enjoy in their own land.

"It is good and edifying to find men, after the din of battles, coming to a house of prayer to remember their comrades who are gone, to thank God for their own preservation and to keep alive the spirit of patriotism in those who are to be hereafter the defenders of the Union.

"We are a Christian people, and as such owe allegiance to God. On Christian principles our moral strength is founded. We owe to God gratitude for our Christian heritage and for the noble lives of those whose example now so powerfully sustains us.

"New Jersey's sons, by their patriotism and valor, did honor to themselves and the State from which they came. Where the fight was thickest and danger greatest could be found the Jersey Volunteers. In the valleys of the Cumberland and Mississippi, on the banks of the James and Potomac, by the shores of the Gulf and Atlantic, in southern battlefields and prisons, they fell by hundreds. Gladly would you, their comrades, place fresh flowers on their graves, but it would be impossible. The God of battles will mark their place in His eternal mind.

"But some who escaped the conflict are here with us this evening—living memorials of what our people accomplished at a time when the nations of Europe expected to see this young republic crumble to dust. For more than thirty years you have kept alive in the land the spirit of patriotism. Strangers who came to our shores, children who were born since the war ended, receive on occasions such as this, a lesson in history that cannot be forgotten. And though the participants in the parade on Memorial Day may diminish yearly, and the flowers they scatter on the graves of their comrades may fade, the recollections of their sacrifice will remain to inspire their children in a future emergency to do as they did.

"A word or two, particularly to the young people in this congregation, and to those born under another flag: When it comes to the question of living, we hold there is only one country to live in, only one flag to live under, the flag that floats above us here. We, who were born in another realm, bless the day of our second birth when we began to know and live the lives of men under the emblems of the bravest and freest people on earth. There must have been more than human foresight in the framing of a constitution that gathers in the oppressed of all lands, and, irrespective of nationality, creed or previous condition, assimilates them into one family; teaches them to think, speak and act as men; binds them together in ties of true Christian brotherhood; draws out and develops whatever is noblest and best in each of them, and leaves nothing indone to make them prosperous and happy. Under whatever sky a man may have first seen the light, whatever may be the form of his religious belief, when he once sets his foot on this land and comes in contact with American civilization, he attains the full stature of his manhood and feels within him possibilities of what is good as he never before dreamed of. However true or noble a character he may be, be he Christian minister or layman, he will find here a broader field, with larger opportunities and encouragement to develop and perfect his individual powers, such as he never found before, and as can be found nowhere else but in America.

"Here we have liberty in its truest sense—not the Old World idea of liberty, which leads often to tyranny and anarchy, but the liberty of conservatism, liberty of conscience, the liberty with which Christ has made us free.

"No wonder that the grand old Pontiff, who, for us Catholics, is our spiritual guide, as he looks out over the ashes and ruins of Rome, Republican and Imperial, goes out in hopeful thought to the young and vigorous Republic of the west, because in its genius and the spirit of its institutions there is evidence that a power more than human has been at work in fashioning this land for a noble destiny.

"America of today is not only peaceful at home, but powerful and respected abroad, sufficiently respected to be courted, powerful enough to excite the ambition of more than one European power to form an alliance.

"What is it that has made Imperial and royal houses of Europe willing to stoop and ally themselves to the once despised daughter of Democracy? It is because her democracy is feared, because she has wrested from the powers beyond the sea their unwilling admiration.

"What a few years ago 'Yankee braggadocio' is today American pluck and courage, and, above all, success. Today, did she wish to exercise it, the United States holds the balance of power and the strongest power of Europe would be afraid to interfere with any suffering nation to which America stretched forth the hand of friendship. We trust, however, that the warning voice of the father of his country, the immortal Washington, will always find a willing ear among those who guide the destinies of the nation: that they should never mix themselves up with 'entangling alliances' against which he counselled them. What a tribute of praise we owe to you, veterans of today! What a glorious result for your sacrifices! Mine once stain on the flag of freedom, slavery, has been removed. Disunion has been buried deep and forever, and the states united rise in their preserved unity and rally under one flag. No north, no south, but a union of States and sentiments cemented by the blood of a nation's heroes.

At the close of the service the choir and congregation sang "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name," while a collection was taken for the benefit of the relief work carried on by the G. A. R. Post. Miss Smith presided at the organ and her work was of a high order.

CROWNING A STATUE.

Impressive and Pleasing Service Carried Out by Children of Mary of St. Joseph's Church.

St. Joseph's R. C. church was crowded to overflowing last Sunday when the annual celebration of the Children of Mary took place. This is one of the most interesting features of the year. It is always the custom to close the month of May by crowning the statue of the Queen of the Heaven.

Last Sunday seven young women took part and recited appropriate selections. Miss Lizzie Ryan, after reciting a selection, crowned the statue, and those assisting were Miss Lulu Jacot, Miss Mary Leahy, Miss Katy Carty, Miss Lizzie Fitzgerald, Miss Kate Egney and Miss Alice Kennedy. After the part in which the Children of Mary officiated, Rev. Father Brennan, curate of the church, delivered an eloquent sermon of great interest to all. During the services there was special music by the chorus choir under the direction of James Bailey. There were solos, part songs, chorus selections, all of which was enjoyed by those present.

Filipino Independence.

Hon. Charles Denby has a vigorous answer, in the June Forum, to those who urge the granting of independence to the Filipinos. "Do we owe independence to the Filipinos?" he asks, and then proceeds to show from despatches and from the history of the Philippine campaign that no reasonable ground exists for supposing that Aguinaldo ever looked on the United States as an ally, and that therefore in conquering the islands from Spain Americans are in no wise pledged to obtain the consent of the Filipinos before asserting sovereignty over them. His reinforces the argument by historical parallels, and has made an exceedingly effective argument for expansion.

MOON SHUT OFF VIEW OF SUN FROM EARTH.

Through Thousands of Smoked Glasses the Eclipse Was Observed Monday a. m.

LASTED OVER TWO HOURS.

PRODUCED A STRANGE AND UNCANNY EFFECT ON TERRA FIRMA.

At 9:06 o'Clock the Eclipse Was at Its Height and 95 Per Cent. of the Sun's Surface Was Covered by the Moon.

Our friend, the sun, performed his stunt Monday morning according to schedule. The moon wandered across his face and nearly covered him up. The clouds blew out of the east and threatened to hide both from view but they relented at the last moment and the eclipse was to be seen for nearly the entire time. Thousands of people gazed at the unusual phenomenon, and all sorts of arrangements of smoked glass were utilized with which to view the strange sight.

The early morning was bright enough, but as the sun rose, the clouds began to gather and it was a question whether or not the eclipse would be visible.

As early as 7:45 o'clock the moon appeared on the edge of Old Sol. Half an hour later the old fellow looked like a cracker with a big bite taken out of the side. The clouds closed over the sun at intervals and a cold wind swept out of the east and chilled the watchers.

Anything in the line of smoked glass was eagerly sought for, and all over the city men, women and children gazed through it at the bright orb above them. It began to grow dark, an effect which the cloudiness of the sky assisted in producing. At 9:06 o'clock the eclipse was at its height and 95 per cent. of the sun's surface was covered. All that remained was a little narrow crescent of silver light. The thin clouds drifted by and made the appearance of the sun easy to view with the naked eye. The rays of sunlight that reached the earth all assumed the shape of a crescent. The effect was strange and rather uncanny.

At a number of the schools, both public and private, recitations were so arranged that the pupils might have an opportunity to view the phenomenon. Shop-keepers and business men deserted their establishments for the time and turned their eyes upward. Then the clouds swept away for a few minutes and a fine view was obtained.

The moon passed away as rapidly as it came, but the end of the eclipse was hidden by the clouds which grew heavier and hid the sun completely. There were many who thought the cold wind that blew was the direct result of the eclipse, but it wasn't. It was merely an easterly wind, just off the ocean.

Many of the local photographers took advantage of the opportunity to secure some views of the solar eclipse. J. Harvey Doane, George H. Fountain and C. T. Coon, all of the Plainfield Camera Club, mounted on top of the Babcock building during the progress of the eclipse and took several views of the sun. Mr. Doane took three plates, Mr. Fountain six and Mr. Coon two.

LITERARY.

It is not generally known that attached to the staff of the Paris Observatory is an American astronomer, Miss Dorothea Klumpke, of California. In November last, in company with a friend and an astronaut, Miss Klumpke made an ascension from the city of Paris with the purpose of observing the expected shower of leonids. Her experience of "A Night in a Balloon," on a trip which extended to the border of the sea, will be narrated by her in the June Century, with illustrations by Castaigne, drawn under her directions, and with a portrait of the writer.

Miss Gussie M. Babcock's Prize.

Rev. Harmon Peake, of East Millstone, stationed in Southern Japan, as a missionary, at present on a vacation in this country for his health, has received word that he and his wife and children will return in a few weeks to their fields of labor. Mr. Peake will occupy Dr. Babcock's pulpit next Sunday evening.

BEAUTIFUL NEW WINDOW

DESIGNED AFTER RAPHAEL'S PAINTING ENTITLED "SISTINE MADONNA."

It Is a Duplicate of the One Presented to the New Church at Bernardsville by F. P. Olcott.

Now that the improvements are completed at St. Mary's church it will be interesting to know something of what has been done to beautify this large edifice. At a great expense the whole interior has been changed and when seen last evening for the first time in its completeness, it was certainly the admiration of the vast throng present. The work was done by Locke & Arnold, of Brooklyn, world-renowned church decorators, who have instituted an American Art School for the purpose of changing the prevailing style of heavy, dark English decoration. St. Mary's church now presents a bright appearance, due to the lighter shades used. The frescoing and tinting harmonize perfectly.

One of the strongest among the improvements is the new window in the front of the church. This is after a painting by Raiphael, entitled "Sistine Madonna," and is a duplicate of the one placed by the same firm in the Catholic church at Bernardsville for F. P. Olcott. The duplicate is considered an improvement over the original. The base is a deep brown, which merges into an olive color, and the top is trimmed in ivory. The colors blend beautifully and is a work of art in every particular.

About the front of the church a complete renovation has taken place, and everything presents a bright and attractive appearance. The edifice is illuminated with the Welsbach light, which was furnished by Gayett, of Front street. In September next the church will be consecrated, at which time the entire debt on the property will have been paid.

McClure's Magazine for June.

The June number of McClure's is particularly strong and varied in its contents, both as regards fiction and special articles. President Kruger of the South African republic is portrayed in an acute character-study by F. Edmund Garrett, who has had the advantage of personal contact with the remarkable Boer leader, and is thoroughly familiar with his past career and with the political history of the Boers. Excellent portraits of Kruger and his wife are included. J. Lincoln Steffens of the New York Commercial Advertiser, relates some striking "incidents of conflict" between Governor Roosevelt and the party leaders, and considers whether his first term as governor has turned out to be a successful experiment. One of the most striking features of the number is a thrilling naval story of the Japanese-Chinese war by Adachi Kinnosuke. The pictures are full of action and unusually effective. In addition to this, there are several other good short stories.

WAGER-WON HUSBAND NOW GETS A DIVORCE

Henry Cook Freed From the Nuptial Bonds Into Which He Was Inveigled.

WIFE MADE NO DEFENSE.

AFTER MARRING COOK SHE REFUSED TO LIVE WITH HIM.

She Induced Him to Wed Her in Order That She Might Win a Wager—He is Twenty Years Her Senior.

Chancellor Magie has just issued a decree of absolute divorce in the suit brought by Henry Cook, of Scotch Plains, against his wife, Mrs. Linda Englehart Cook, whose marriage took place under the most unusual circumstances ten years ago. A copy of the decree was received Friday a. m. by Murphy & Blatz, who represented Cook in the suit.

It was to win a wager that Mrs. Cook, then Miss Linda Englehart, set about to persuade Cook to marry her. He finally did so and since that time she has utterly refused to live with him. After repeated efforts toward that end, Mr. Cook brought suit for divorce through his attorneys. The case was referred to Senator Joseph Orosco, of Somerville, as master in chancery and testimony taken in the case. There was no attempt at defence. The case then went to Chancellor Magie whose decision in the case has just been rendered.

Cook lives on a farm near Scotch Plains, and is interested in the neighboring stone quarries. He is now fifty-five years old and twenty years the senior of his erstwhile wife. Ten years ago New Year's Day he called on Miss Englehart. It is said that she plied him with beverages until he reached a happy state. Together they waited down the street to the next dance of Rev. Mr. Lock, where the young woman proposed that they go in and get married. It didn't take long to persuade Cook to go, too. They were quietly married immediately.

When they returned home Mrs. Cook refused to admit her husband, telling him to attend to his business and she would look after hers. She continued to withstand all his intreaties and husband and wife saw each other but very seldom after the wedding.

She afterwards explained that she had been married to win a bet she had made with her parents. They had teased her about Cook and wagered that he would never marry her.

CELEBRATED QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

Englishmen and Scotchmen Honored Victoria at a Social Gathering.

Thursday was Queen Victoria's eighty-first birthday and the event was fittingly celebrated last evening by about 30 Scotch and English-Americans of this city, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Bowden, of West Fourth street. A most enjoyable evening was spent in listening to songs and reciting in Scotch and Highland fings, made for which was furnished by Hugh Gray. Songs were given by Mrs. Donald McInnes, Fred Wharton, Robert Gow and Thomas Henry, and recitations by William Macpherson and Mrs. Firstbrook. Refreshments were served at midnight and the guests departed for home, wishing the grand old lady many a happy return of the day.

OLD SOLDIER'S FUNERAL

LAST SAD RITES OVER REMAINS OF JOSEPH R. BENNETT.

Services in Charge of G. A. R. Members of Rahway, at Which Place Remains Were Interred.

The funeral services of the late Jos. R. Bennett were held Friday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock from the home, corner of Lincoln place and Dunn street. There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends, testifying many from Rahway, the former home of the deceased.

For the convenience of the many business men who would have attended the services, the body lay in state from 11 o'clock until 1 o'clock, giving them an opportunity of viewing the remains during them hours.

The services were in charge of Rev. John A. Leggett, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, and chaplain of Barry Post, G. A. R., of Rahway, of which the departed was a member. He spoke concerning the strong Christian character and exemplary life of Mr. Bennett, and of his bravery during the Civil War, when he was among the first to answer his country's call and go to the front. He spoke of him as a kind and loving husband and father and his peculiar devotion to the home. He made mention of Mr. Bennett's uprightness and how highly regarded he was among his fellow business men.

There was a beautiful display of flowers about the casket, consisting of two pillows, one from the bereaved wife bearing the word "Husband," and another from the grandchildren bearing the word "Grandpa." There was also a cross from the children with the inscription "Father," and a large bunch of lilies from Westfield relatives, and a floral tribute from Barry Post, placed about and on the casket, upon which there was also placed an American flag. Upon the lapel of the coat of the deceased was the familiar G. A. R. badge.

After the services the remains were taken to Rahway for interment in the family plot. At Rahway the cortege was met by the members of Barry Post, G. A. R., who accompanied it to the grave and conducted the military service of the order, including the firing of the salute.

Those who acted as pall bearers were W. H. Indlow, Wm. H. Addis and J. P. Homan, of this city; Col. Joseph W. Martin, Frank Bliss and Thompson Thorn, of Rahway. Col. Martin and Mr. Addis, were members of the Sixth N. Y. Independent Battery, of which the deceased was a member.

The Christian Endeavorers of the Park Avenue Baptist church held a temperance meeting Friday evening which was led by J. M. Hawkins. The feature was the talk by Fred H. Martin, of this city, who related his experiences in mission work in New York City. During the services vocal solos were given by Miss Adele Runyon and Miss Ada Runyon. At the close a collection was taken for the famine stricken in India which amounting to $6. This with the sum contributed by the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the church will make the total amount $10. This sum will be forwarded to Rev. Mr. Spooner who is working among Jersey Endeavorers for these sufferers.

BRAVE LITTLE BUGLER.

John Francis Dunne Honored by the Queen and Lionized by the People of England.

One of the proudest boys in the British empire is John Francis Dunne, bugler of the First battalion, Royal Dublin fusiliers. He was wounded at the battle of Colenso on December 15, but was one of the first to cross the Tugela river, leading the bugle in the fight. On his return to England he was summoned to Osborne, where the queen presented to him a silver bugle, inscribed: "Presented to Bugler John Francis Dunne, First battalion, Royal Dublin fusiliers, by Queen Victoria, to replace the bugle lost by him on the field of battle at Colenso on the 15th December, 1899, when he was wounded." His companions thought that he would probably be more afraid to face the queen than the enemy, but he stood firmly to his guns and came off with flying colors.

The queen asked him about his health, and whether he had fully recovered from his wound, and seemed to be pleased with the frank and manly manner in which the little soldier acted, and accepted with evident pleasure the framed portrait of himself which he presented to her. In the room where the little fellow had to wait—and, according to one account, this was in the basement of the palace—he met Lord Roberts and friends from various departments, who were all anxious to see and speak to the young soldier. And then ladies from other parts of the building came and brought their birthday books, which the bugler was invited to sign against the date of his birth, July 14; and before the summons came to appear before the queen he had held a levee in the basement on his own account.

NEW SENATE SECRETARY.

Charles G. Bennett, Recently Elected, Is a Young Man of More Than Ordinary Abilities.

The new secretary of the United States senate, Hon. Charles Goodwin Bennett, is an exceptionally young man to have been elected to such an honorable and important office. But words of fulsome praise from grave and white hairs announce the period when excellence may be placed with surety. Mr. Bennett was born in the city of Brooklyn, December 11, 1863. He has always resided there, though his law offices are located in New York. He was elected to the Fifty-fourth congress and then to the Fifty-fifth congress, as a republican. His term of office expired on the 4th of March last. His office of secretary of the senate imposes upon him exceptional duties of trust. In addition to the responsibility of the detailed business of the senate, he is also the disbursing officer for all the expenditures involving the pay of senators, committee work and a large corps of clerks and other employes. Mr. Bennett succeeds Gen. William P. Cox, of North Carolina, who, since August, 1893, performed with so much ability and satisfaction the duties of the office.

Cuba and Porto Rico.

The preliminary figures of the newly completed census of Cuba and Porto Rico show a total population for Cuba of 1,572,845, a loss from 1887 of 33,802. The population of Porto Rico is 927,000, which is an increase of 158,300 over the census of 1887. The largest Cuban province is Havana, which has 424,811 inhabitants, a falling off of 27,000 in 13 years. The next largest is Santa Clara, with its 352,154 residents, showing also an increase of 2,000. Santiago has gained about as much as Pinar del Rio has lost, says the Army and Navy Journal. The former provinces returns a population of 327,719, an increase of 18,357, while Pinar has fallen from 221,921 to 172,092. Matanzas has dropped from 203,578 to 202,462. The smallest province in point of population is Porto Principe, to which the census gives 85,997 inhabitants, a gain of 21,660.

POPULAR IN MICHIGAN.

Senator McMillan, His Friends Say, Still Rules the Republican Party of That State.

Since the death of "Old Zach" Chandler Senator James McMillan has been the head of the republican party in Michigan. Gen. Alger and Gov. Pingree, it was said awhile ago, had formed a combination to beat him, but so far he has held his own against all opponents. Born in Hamilton, Ont., May 23, 1838, he removed to Detroit in 1855, and since that time has been actively associated with important interests. He entered at once upon a business life, and in 1863 engaged in the manufacture of railroad cars. With others he was successful in building up several large manufacturing establishments in Detroit. Senator McMillan is also interested in railroads and steamboats, and when elected to the senate was president of the Michigan Car company, the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railroad company, and the Detroit and Cleveland Steam Navigation company.

Before starting in business for himself Senator McMillan was purchasing agent for a small Michigan railroad on a fair salary. This work he got his start with which to begin business on his own account. He was elected to the senate in 1889 and reelected in 1895, receiving the unanimous vote of the legislature. There was but one democrat in the legislature that year, and he joined with the republicans in voting for Senator McMillan, as a recognition of his services to the state independent of partisan politics.

TROPICAL FRUIT BATS.

They Are Destructive Creatures, Sometimes Measuring Five Feet from Tip to Tip.

The agricultural department at Washington is taking precautions to prevent the importation into the United States of any of the animal pests which are found in Porto Rico, the Philippines and other new colonies. Among the pests most to be feared than the great fruit bats which abound in the Philippines. A full-grown specimen of the fruit bat measures five feet from tip to tip of its wings. The fruit bats live together in large communities and feed almost altogether on tropical and subtropical fruits. They prowl together so thickly on the trees that sometimes large branches are broken down by their weight. As the fruit bat has increased so rapidly that great sums of money have been spent in their destruction, one organized movement of the fruit growers of New South Wales recently resulting in the killing of 100,000 bats at a cost of 30 cents each. Another possible immigrant which is much dreaded is the mongoose, which abounds in Cuba, Porto Rico and the other West Indian islands. The mongoose was first brought to the islands for the purpose of destroying the rats and mice, which it did so thoroughly that it soon proved a serious pest in itself for another diet. It was found that the mongoose thrived on young poultry, birds, and even young pigs and lambs, while it also consumed great quantities of pineapples, bananas, corn and other vegetable products.

Long-Armed Girls Wanted.

The largest telephone company in Kansas City is short of operators, and the reason of this is that most of the girls who have applied for positions have not been tall enough. Hereafter a girl who does not measure five feet six inches in height will not be employed. The company has learned that short girls have short arms, and girls with short arms cannot do the work as well as those with long arms. The present intention of the company is to get a sufficient number of long-armed girls and then endeavor to keep them.

Sacred Banyan Trees.

Among the numerous things considered sacred in India is the banyan tree, one of the fig genus, remarkable for its vast rooting branches. The horizontal branches send down the roots which take root when they reach the ground and enlarge into trunks, which in their turn send out branches.

DANGER IN THE SIDE SADDLE.

Responsible for More Deaths and Injuries Than Any Other Implement Connected with Outdoor Sports.

The side saddle is uncomfortable for the horse and for the rider. Hardly one woman in ten can sit straight on it, and the result is that the saddle drags off to one side, and is very likely to gall the horse's withers.

Far more important than this, however, is the danger to which every woman is exposed when she mounts her horse. However skillful a horsewoman she may be, her seat and her safety depend absolutely on the integrity of the saddle girths. If these break a fall is inevitable, and, hampered as she is by skirts, she can do nothing to save herself.

If she is not a good horsewoman, if she depends on her reins or on her stirrup to hold her in the saddle, her case is just as much the worse. Most girls and women are not at home on a horse's back, and a bolting or shying horse is likely to unseat them.

If unseated they have not the chance afforded to every man to lie free from his horse, that of simply rolling out of the saddle and striking the ground. Instead of that a woman may be hung from the pommel by her skirt, and may be dragged about and shockingly mutilated by the horse's hoofs. Where a single fall from the horse would have given her no more than a jar.

Cases of this sort occur with such frequency that it appears singular that no one has as yet persuaded the wearers of the side saddle as a reform whose importance would justify a crusade. For in proportion to its use we believe the side saddle to be responsible for more deaths and accidents than any other implement which is employed in connection with outdoor life.

This is an age of progress in outdoor matters, and women are eliminating from their lives many of the antique conventionalities, which have nothing to recommend them except long-established custom. There are to-day many young women who during their travels and their hunting trips in the west never think of using side saddles, and there is then, in some of the larger eastern towns, a nucleus of women who understand that the man's saddle means freedom from fetters that they have always borne, and from limitations which are not only irksome but positively dangerous.—Forest and Stream.

RULES OF RICH MEN.

Some Queer Ideas Entertained by Those Possessed of Large Fortunes.

Several anecdotes of the careers of some of the holders of large fortunes in the world have recently been published. From these and other facts gathered by the writer of the peculiarities of these men and gather hints as to the effects of enormous wealth upon their lives.

The founder of the Vanderbilt property made this rule: "Never buy anything you don't need. Never buy anything you haven't got," which at once barred out all stock gambling.

Another inflexible rule was never to share his secrets with any other person. "I know nothing about it," is once said to a man who knew from him a single one of his business methods. If he thought his overcoat had found them out he would burn it."

His plan with regard to young men was, "Bind a boy down anywhere. If he is worth anything he'll burn his fingers and save money. If he can't do that he isn't worth saving!"

He was therefore pleased if his sons or grandsons entered into business to learn it as ordinary boys learn, and climb somewhat to make their own way upward.

A woman who is one of the richest in America, refused to send her son to school after he had learned to read, write and cipher. "Because more learning than that hinders a man from making money."

Poorer folk are apt, when thinking of the vast wealth of the rich, to think Rockefeller seem to possess over ordinary people, to forget that a man of his personal use and enjoyment in a very limited income. His accumulations over that which will give acceptable food and raiment are simply a weight of capital, to be handled with anxiety. The care of it becomes a trade, a business, an occupation, seldom an enjoyment.

The man who is popularly supposed to be one of the richest in the world is speaking of a neighbor, said: "He is worth a thousand times as much as I am, but his income is as comfortable, he can eat as good food, his health is better, and he can trust his friends. I am not sure that I have any disinterested friends."—Youth's Companion.

Sorry Now He Was Honest.

Master—Yes, boys, "Honesty is the best policy." It will surely bring its reward. I am glad to have a good example of honesty among your own number. William Williams, stand up.

W. W. rises.

"Now, William, when I was coming to-day on the morning train I happened to drop a quarter out of my pocket without the slightest knowledge of the fact, and you, like an honest boy returned it to me. Tell the boys what prompted you to do such an act when you might have kept it for yourself."

W. W.—Please sir, I thought it was a bad 'un.—Stray Stories.

Different Points of View.

WANTED TO GO TO JAIL

BUT CITY JUDGE GAVE HIM ONE HOUR TO LEAVE TOWN.

Great Disappointment of a Stoker Who Hoped to Be a Guest of Warden Dodd at Elizabeth.

Christopher Boobly, of any old place, was much disappointed at his treatment by City Judge Runyon this morning. Plainfield possesses quite a population among the "hobo" fraternity and Chris felt sure that three days of persistent begging would ensure for him rest and shelter in the county jail for a goodly term.

Boobly wandered into town from Newark three days ago. Patrolman Saunders has been chasing him off the streets at frequent intervals ever since. Thursday Saunders found him again preparing to retire on Fred W. Dunn's display stands. So Boobly was arrested and locked up.

When Boobly was arraigned before City Judge Runyon Friday a. m., he hadn't much to say. The Judge delivered a little lecture and Boobly's face wore an expectant look.

"I find you guilty of vagrancy," began the Judge, and the tramp's face brightened visibly with a joyful smile. "And I'll give you just an hour to get out of town." The smile forsook the hobo's face and he actually scowled.

For a moment the tramp waited as if uncertain whether or not to return to the Judge and beg for different treatment. With a haughty glance at the young Judge, the ragged wanderer strode slowly away. He will probably be locked up again this evening and get what he was after afterall.

DANGEROUS PREDICAMENT.

Plainfield Party Stalled on Railroad Tracks in Face of Approaching Train.

George Curtis and Andrew Hardee, two colored men of this city, in company with two lady friends, had quite an experience at a Central Railroad crossing at Cranford Thursday morning, as they were returning from a drive to Elizabeth.

They were crossing the tracks when the horse shied at something, throwing one of the forward wheels of their surrey into the space between the rail and planks. The wheel was wrecked and resulted in throwing the occupants out. The wheel was wedged in tightly and it was some time before the wagon could be freed. The work of freeing it was hastened by the sight of the train which reaches Plainfield at 12:44 a. m. The wagon was gotten off just as the train passed by.

The wrecked wagon was taken to a livery stable, where another one was procured in its place and the journey resumed to Plainfield.

Money's Queer Tales.

When Patrolman Saunders found him, Henry Moore was seated on the front lawn to the residence of R. R. Anthony, of West Front street, serenading the failing rain drops with his brand new harmonica. Henry Moore is a colored man employed by N. Thompson & Co., of Kingston, N. J. He came to Plainfield to have his shoes repaired. So, at least, he told City Judge Runyon this morning. Henry was in luck this time, however, for the complainant failed to appear and the Judge discharged the complaint.

Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded from North Plainfield during the past week: Alex. Thorn et ux to Nellie B. Thorn, $1,800; Amanda A. Faughorn et al to John C. Kadin, $1; John Hensman et ux to William M. Stillman, $1; Isaac Vail et ux to Lavina Bibbie, $1; William T. Randolph to John C. Daley, $1,400.

New Records Offered.

The house and lot owned by the late Margaret Ammerman, at No. 340 Cottage place, which was to have been sold yesterday afternoon at public auction by Benjamin F. Corbell, administrator, did not go through. Only a few bidders were present and the highest bid was $600. Mr. Corbell would not let it go for that sum and he has decided to sell the property at private sale.

Business After Commencement Exercises.

It is presently assured that the reception to the graduates of the Borough Public High School will be held after the commencement exercises the same evening. An effort is being made to hold it at the Park Club, as the High School is not adapted for such an affair.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss Emma Haviland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Haviland, of New York, formerly of Rockview avenue, Plainfield, to Charles H. Case, of New York, formerly of Central avenue, Plainfield.

Bought a Boarding House.

KING'S DAUGHTERS PREPARE FOR WORK.

Officers of the City Union Elected at the Spring Meeting Thursday Afternoon.

MISS BLISH IS PRESIDENT.

MRS. TAYLOR'S EXPERIENCES IN CITY MISSIONARY WORK.

The Receipts of the Union for the Year Have Been $1,618.34, of Which $714.44 Was Spent—Work of City Nurse.

The spring meeting of the City Union of King's Daughters was held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church Thursday afternoon. Reports for the past six months, election of officers and short addresses by Rev. C. E. Herring and Mrs. E. R. Taylor occupied most of the time.

The meeting was presided over by the president, Miss Ella Bliss, and eleven out of the twelve circles in the union were represented. After a short devotional service to open the meeting, the secretary, Miss Lillian A. Force, read her report and that of the treasurer, Miss Linda D. Butler. The latter report showed receipts amounting to $1,618.34, disbursements of $714.44 and a balance of $903.90.

As chairmen of the city nurse committee, Miss Margaret E. Tracy, reported that after the resignation of Miss Octavia Setzer, last fall Mrs. Susan Ball was secured temporarily and that early in the year arrangements were made with Miss Olive DeLany, who graduated from the Nurses' Training School of Muhlenberg Hospital, last night, who had her begin her duties as city nurse early in the season. She had cared for 45 cases. Miss DeLany then made a short report of her own work and reported having made 264 visits since she began her duties as city nurse.

Rev. C. E. Herring made a short address and urged more work for Christ and humanity and less for denominationalism. The King's Daughters movement was a step in that direction. He also urged his hearers to get down to the level of the needy ones they befriended in order to secure good results from such labors.

Reports from the various circles were made, telling of the work done during the past six months. All of them reported a steady advance.

The nominating committee reported the following names for offices: President, Miss Ella Bliss; vice-president, Mrs. F. H. Ball; recording secretary, Miss Lillian A. Force; corresponding secretary, Mrs. James DuGraf; treasurer, Miss Edith Little. They were all unanimously elected.

Mrs. E. R. Taylor told some of her personal experiences in city missionary work. She related the story of several cases that had come to the attention of herself and husband and told how wonderfully God had aided them. She spoke of the work she and her husband are now doing among the colored people who live on the outskirts of the borough, and how greatly their efforts have been rewarded.

ENTERTAINED CYCLERS.

Elizabeth Y. M. C. A. Boys Visited the Local Association.

The bicycling division of the Y. M. C. A. had made preparations to entertain a number of bicycling corps from surrounding places last Thursday, but on account of the threatened storm but only one delegation from Elizabeth of about thirty members arrived.

The men of the gymnasium and swimming pool class of the boys, after which they were entertained by Mr. Heywood, who gave a humorous reading entitled, "Burdock's Music Box," and another by Elmer Cuttino entitled, "Getting the Best of the Conductor."

Light refreshments, which had been prepared by the Misses Moraller, Stafford, Lowe and Mrs. Heywood, were served, and the visitors left for home on the 10:17 train on account of the rain.

The next run in connection with the leagues will probably be to Rahway June 7th.

Lived to Ripe Old Age.

After a long illness with cancer of the stomach, Mrs. Mary Anne Mastox, aged 61 years, died Thursday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Huntington, Pearl street. Dr. Eagles was the attending physician and he did everything possible to prolong life. Mrs. Mastox was the mother of William R. Mastox, of Webster place, this city. She leaves a number of grandchildren. For sometime past she has resided with her daughter where everything was done for her comfort.

THEIR LIFE'S WORK IS WITH THE SICK.

Three Young Women Graduated as Trained Nurses From Muhlenberg Hospital.

RECEIVED THEIR DIPLOMAS.

CHEERING AND APPRECIATIVE WORDS OF THEIR WORK.

E. B. Clark Presided Over the Ceremonies—Remarks Made by S. St. John McCutchen, Dr. M. D. Long and W. S. Cook.

The fifth annual graduation exercises of the Muhlenberg Hospital Training School for nurses took place Thursday in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church. Like similar occasions it was an event of considerable interest not only to the three young women who were graduated from the school, but to the large number of people who were present to witness it. The members of the school, which now numbers ten, occupied seats on the platform, and a pleasing picture in the background was presented through the use of the American and English flags suspended against the wall. The English flag remained those present of the anniversary of Queen's Victoria's birthday.

In the absence of the president of the board of governors of the hospital, E. B. Clark, a member of the board, presided, and after a prayer by Rev. E. M. Rodman, he made a few remarks of a retrospective nature. He told something of what had been accomplished since the training school was instituted. He spoke of the many things required of a trained nurse and in his opinion he thought members of the school are about as near being angels as is possible. He referred to the needs of the hospital which must have its claims upon the people of Plainfield who, through feelings of humanity, must care for the sick and the poor.

Following Mr. Clark's remarks, a delightful 'cello solo was rendered by Dr. Waldo, accompanied on the piano by Miss Randolph. The chairman then introduced S. St. John McCutchen, president of the Borough Board of Education, who made a short address appropriate to the occasion, which he termed a phase of educational development. He said that today nursing had reached a scientific stage which demands an important place in the world as a necessity. It is first the physician and then his first assistant, the trained nurse, and otherwise recovery is due more to the work of the nurse than to the physician.

Mr. Clark at this time presented the diplomas to the graduates, and as he did so, he took occasion to remark that it gave him special pleasure to present one to Miss DeLaney. She was entitled to one upon the completion of her first two years, but at that time the course was extended another year. Miss DeLaney then decided to take the additional year's study. In the case of Miss Stryker her term extends to July, and Miss Studeman's to August, both have passed their examinations, but according to the rules they must remain until the time specified. In the case of Miss Delaney she is not now on duty at the hospital, having finished some time ago. She is now filling the position of city nurse for the City Union, King's Daughters.

The next feature of the programme was an address by Dr. M. B. Long, who spoke on behalf of the medical staff. He told of the good work done in the past, and of the necessity of trained nurses. Regarding the idea that doctors disagree he said that this was not true at the hospital. He spoke of the sacrifice made by the Board of Governors and the Women's Auxiliary, and said that too much praise could not be given them, as well as the nurses. He mentioned the many fields of usefulness for nurses and said that now the success of the graduates would depend on their own efforts. In conclusion he wished the graduates all the success possible in their field of labor.

The last number on the programme was the presentation of the class pins, symbol of the red cross, by W. B. Cook, of the Board of Governors. Mr. Cook could not conceal the humor that permeates his soul, and in a happy vein he presented the pins. He said that this presentation is entirely an outside matter, something for which the secretary of the Board could not be called down. Incidentally he remarked that some of the ladies had expressed a desire that he appear in the costume that made him famous in "A Trip Off," but this he declined to do.

After another selection by Dr. Waldo, Mr. Clark extended to the Crescent Avenue church and those that had furnished music the hearty thanks of our school, and then invited to the parlors of the chapel, where a reception was held for the graduates and refreshments were served.

The names of the graduates are Miss Olive F. DeLany, Miss Virginia Force Stryker and Miss Emma C. Studeman. Although not definitely known, it is quite likely that they will make Plainfield their permanent home.

EPWORTH LEAGUE R. R.

UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN IN VINCENT CHAPEL.

Those Who Attended Imagined They Were in a Railroad Train and Had a Good Time.

In the absence of I. Ketcham and U. Cheetham, respectively general manager and general passenger agent of the Plainfield Division, Epworth League Railroad of New Jersey, the railroad convention of the Epworth Leagues of the First M. E. church last Friday was personally conducted by James A. Stafford.

It was altogether a new kind of a sociable under the charge of the literary committee of the league. On their arrival the guests first encountered Walter MacNaghton as ticket agent, and round-trip tickets were purchased at the cost of four cents each. The car itself rested in the centre of Vincent chapel. It had two rows of seats separated by an aisle and with sides built of the League colors. By dint of considerable imagination the car and its passengers departed on a tour of the world.

The official time-tables of this flourishing railway were distributed to the passengers who were compelled to guess the names of the stops from the description on the time-tables. The first stop was Lansing which was described by a surgical instrument. Chicago was a city whose end and aim is go. The other cities were described in a similar fashion.

As they were compelled to change seats at frequent intervals, everybody became pretty well acquainted. J. A. Stafford acted as conductor. Eugene H. Edgar was baggage master and looked after lost articles.

During the excursion Miss Jeanne Dunham entertained her fellow passengers with several clever recitations, and E. A. Adgar did his share by giving several baritone solos. Walter MacNaughton represented the Union News Company in truly in realistic style.

At the end of the journey the passengers clambered out into Vincent chapel and enjoyed the refreshments that were served. The literary committee in charge consisted of Jeanne A. Stafford, chairman; Miss Edna French, Miss Susie Davies, and Mr. Mrs. E. A. Edgar.

GLITTER CAUGHT HIS EYE.

Diamond Lost by Albert Carey Twenty-one Months Ago Was Found Friday.

Just twenty-one months ago, Albert Carey, of this city, who is manager of the packing box factory of F. R. Abbey, of New York, lost a valuable diamond in a peculiar manner. Mr. Carey was working at a scroll saw when his hand caught in the teeth and two fingers were severed, the saw being stopped by a ring on his third finger.

The ring is all that saved his other fingers, but the diamond which was in it and which weighs 1½ carats, was knocked out and despite the most diligent searching could not be found until Friday. When Mr. Carey met with the accident he was on the fifth floor near a window and overlooking an extension roof. The diamond flew out of the window to the roof where it laid in the gravel until the glitter caught the eye of an employe who quickly secured it. A reward had been offered for the return of the ring but Mr. Carey had given it up for lost, and to say that he was surprised at getting it back after twenty-one months would be expressing it mildly The ring is valued at $150.

FOR FAMINE SUFFERERS.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey Succeeded in Raising $25 for Relief of Starving People of India.

The meeting held last Friday at Warren chapel in the interest of the famine stricken people of India was largely attended and a success. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of the chapel, conducted the meeting and told much about the sufferers in India. He told of the movement on foot to help these people. His remarks were attentively listened to and excited considerable interest among those present who gave about $25 toward the object. Pastor McKelvey is much gratified with the success and hopes that the above amount may be increased considerably.

PYTHIANS DANCED.

Perseverance Lodge Members and Friends Had a Good Time.

The dance was given for the purpose of getting the members and friends better acquainted and to secure new members for the lodge. No regular programme had been arranged, but dancing was kept up until midnight, when refreshments were served.

The entertainment committee was composed of Samuel Robinson, chairman, assisted by the Messrs Flannery and Dunks.

MORPHINE BEAT THE BOY.

How a Young Gambler Was Persuaded to Quit While a Winner at Cards.

"I see gambling is running wide open in Colorado again," said Walter Harris, a cattleman of Topeka, to a reporter for the Republican. "I don't suppose though, it is as wide open now as it was in the days when I was in Winston every summer at that time, and the high games that used to run at some of the clubs would be an eye-opener to the gamblers of the present day. Cattlemen were making more money then, as were the miners, and they paid no taxes in Manitou and try for each other's pocketbooks, with the result that the professional gambler got the money.

"I remember how one young fellow was made to quit a winner against his will. His name was Rich. He was a nephew of one of the big reaper men, and his folks kept him supplied with money, a regular allowance. He had been gambling every cent of it, letting bills pile up for hotel and livery and everything else. His people sent word that they wouldn't send any more money, and said if he got into trouble he'd have to get out himself. His creditors were just about ready to jump onto him when one night he made a big winning. He was playing faro in the club that's torn down now. He used to stand over from the depot, and was the place for high play.

"I suppose he had $4,000 or $5,000 in front of him when his friends began trying to persuade him to quit. He was just like all the rest of them, going to break the bank, and all that sort of thing, and he wouldn't quit.

"It was a red-hot night for Manitou, and with the excitement and all Rich had pulled off his coat and rolled up his sleeves. There was a fellow among his friends, and, though he had not said anything to Rich, I suppose he felt a responsibility, because the young fellow had come out here for his health, and had been referred to the Manitou doctor by the old man's doctor.

"I was watching the play, though I didn't know any of the people. I saw the doctor turn his back to the crowd for a minute, and fiddle with something he had taken out of his pocket. Then he walked over to Rich and put his hand on his bare arm. 'You need a sedative,' he said. Quick as a flash he took the hypodermic syringe he had in his hand and fired a charge into Rich's arm.

"Rich said: 'Ouch!' and grabbed at the place where he had been pricked, but the deal was going on and he turned to that again. Before half the cards were out his head settled on the table, he commenced to draw good long breaths, and was asleep.

"The doctor took his chips, cashed them in, then he took and wrote a receipt for the money, and gave it to another friend of Rich's to keep. Then he took Rich, loaded him into a carriage, took him up to the house, and watched over him until he came around the next day. Rich paid his bills, but he did no more gambling in Manitou They wouldn't let him play again."—Denver Republican.

HIS IDEAL WOMAN.

Not So Much of an Angel as a Sympathetic, All-Divining, All-Forgiving Human.

Man has a number of fixed, old-fashioned notions about the ideal woman which are quite apart from the question of complexion and dress.

The sober truth is that while men may seek diversion with the more showy, flippant type of girl, and are often caught by mere glitter, they have an ideal far, far above this cheap type which is imperishable. A man does not picture a completely limp and characterless creature as his soul's ideal, however "sweet." Yet the woman as she appears in his fancy is not too clever. It is a pleasure to him to be a little superior to his mate—to be "looked up to"—and as the true woman desires to "look up," it is clear that nature's arrangements in these matters are not to be upset. The man who is the charming woman of all is she who has the consummate wit to seem to "look up" when really she stands on a level with the man who loves her, or perchance a little above him.

One thing imperatively demanded in the make-up of the ideal woman is sympathy—that all-divining, all-forgiving quality which makes the whole world akin. Sympathy is one of the prime factors of charm. So is humor. A man is fearfully lonesome when his wife cannot see his jokes. She could hardly offer him a more deadly affront than a laugh at the wrong place at one of his pet stories. The ideal woman is religious—has the wise, sweet, old-fashioned notions about right and wrong. A man is quite capable of making merry over his wife's scruples of conscience, but I think he would be rather disappointed if she had no scruples—if in his worldly way she was guided chiefly by his opinions. He may have say many prayers himself, but he likes to know that his children pray at their mother's knee. Perhaps he sometimes reflects that the nightly petition from innocent lips: "God bless father," may do her husband a service. Says Mrs. E. Garrett, in Woman's Home Companion.

Sanitarily Clean.

To keep a house in a perfect sanitary condition does not mean that you must be sweeping, dusting and scrubbing all the time. Let fresh air and sunshine into every part of the house; do not allow any decaying matter to accumulate in the cellar; wash and dry all cleaning cloths, tubs, pails, etc., as soon as you have finished using them. It is not so much the dust that is in full sight as the dust, dampness and decay in dark places that makes a dwelling unsanitary. Brooms, brushes, dusters, etc., need frequent washing and thorough drying.—Ladies' Home Journal.

ELECTRICITY ON SHIPS.

Modern Scientists Have Made Remarkable Use of the Power as an Aid to Naval Warfare.

The remarkable achievements of electricity on the recently completed battleships Kearsarge and Kentucky mark the highest level of electrical engineering in the world.

For years there has been a battle between mechanical engineers and electrical engineers as to the proper use and functions of electricity on shipboard. The subject has been fought up and down the engineering societies, and in the magazines, discussion has followed discussion, argument argument, and experiment experiment, but no definite results were achieved until the actual electrical equipment was placed in these great battleships.

Europeans as well as American engineers, have watched the contest with the deepest interest. If the friends of the electricians are correct, electricity will very largely transform naval warfare and the management of warships. It is a fight between steam and electricity, and electricity now has the science of fighting out.

The following are some of the things that electricity can do:

For instance, in the time of battle these ships can be brilliantly lighted. They operate four powerful searchlights. It would be impossible to describe all the search-lights and the appliances and interior appliances upon these vessels for use of electricity and the doing of work in the communication of orders.

The apparatus for night signaling is complete. There are latticle and telegraph order indicators. There are electric propelling and steering engine telegraphs. There are revolution and helm angle indicators, the apportionment of which is better understood by the electricians. There are portable diving lanterns.

The two immense turrets, which hold 8-inch and 13-inch guns, are supplied with ammunition hoisted by electrical hoists. The rammers of these guns are operated by electricity. Speed ventilation is provided to blow out gases from the bore of these guns.

Further than all this, these vessels are provided with ten endless chain ammunition hoists operated by electricity—that is, those supplying the 8-inch broad shell guns and two supplying the 6-pounder and 1-pounder guns on the upper deck.

The 6-pounder guns in the after cabin are supplied by two-winch type of hoist, electrically operated. There are also also two winches so operated, and there are four boat cranes worked by electricity—the boats being hoisted and lowered and the cranes rotated by that power.

The ship is ventilated throughout by electricity by the fans in the engine rooms, but excluding the fire rooms) by thirteen ventilating fans of which ten supply and three exhaust air for the various water-tank compartments. The Edison three-wire system is used.

There are two 50-horse power electric motors located below the floor of the 13-inch turrets. Each turret has one independent generator for the supply of lighting. These are 100 volt. The various powerful winches will lift over 2,200 pounds at a speed of 300 feet per minute.

Every part of this powerful but extremely delicate machinery is most efficient in all the experiments made with it, and shows that it can be relied on both in peace and in battle.

This is a great victory for the electrician, and it points to the wider use of electrical appliances on board of ship.—Philadelphia Press.

MINERS AND MORPHINE.

A Necessary Custom Which Is Not Pleasant for Tenderfoot to Contemplate.

A spectacle is sometimes presented in Leadville which is not pleasant for tenderfoot to contemplate.

"When I was in the northwest during last October," said a gentleman with some money invested in mines, "I was surprised to see the men in the mountains looking for properties which had been recommended to me. One day he was to have gone from our camp over into a very rough and rocky district, but when evening came he reported that he had not made the trip.

"'Why not?' I inquired.

"'Because I didn't have my morphine with me,' he responded, in a very matter of fact manner.

"'Morphine?' said I in astonishment, 'what has that got to do with it? You are not a morphine fiend, are you?'

"'Not as much of a one as you are a tenderfoot,' he laughed, and proceeded to inform me that every prospector who knew his business always carried with him a certain quantity of it. Still I was easily, and that he did so in order to end himself quickly in case of an accident which would disable him for away from assistance. There were many instances of prospectors falling over cliffs, breaking their necks, or breaking a leg in a hole among the rocks, or rendering themselves helpless in some other way, and death was sure to follow by starvation or freezing, or in some instances by being devoured by wolves or other wild beasts. In order to prevent such a horrible death as any of these, the prospector simplified matters by always carrying a little packet of morphine, which not only relieved the pain of his hurt but sent him to sleep pleasantly to wake no more on earth. It struck me at first as uncanny, not to say wicked, but I got over that feeling after a narrow escape or two, and I carried my little packet just like a veteran would."—Washington Star.

HENRY CLAY CALDWELL.

Arkansas Judge Who May Be Candidate for Vice President on the Bryan Ticket.

Judge Henry Clay Caldwell, of Arkansas, now conspicuous as the probable running mate of William Jennings Bryan in the next presidential election, has a long record as a federal judge, and seems to suit the taste of many in those circles which would most naturally be presumed to be prerequisites of an ideal candidate for the vice presidency. He was appointed to the United States bench for the district of Arkansas by President Lincoln in 1864. That post he held continuously for 20 years. He was then appointed by President Harrison to be judge of the Eighth United States circuit—a circuit embracing the state and four territories. This important trust was accepted by Judge Caldwell with reluctance, but it is one which he still occupies. His politics has been described as that of a free silver, anti-trust republican. His opinions in the matter of corporations and monopolies have found vent in the unequivocal utterances of his decisions and addresses. The judge was born in West Virginia in 1823. When he was four years old his parents took him to Iowa, and it was there he was educated and studied law. In response to Lincoln's call for volunteers he organized a company of cavalry and joined the Third Iowa horse, of which he was afterward the colonel. He was still in this command when President Lincoln appointed him to the federal judiciary. His capacity as a jurist was described by the late Justice Miller, who said President Harrison that Judge Caldwell would grace the supreme tribunal of the country.

Judge Caldwell is picturesque in his attire. He wears a hat of ancient vintage of the style affected by the Mississippi and Shakers. But he looks well indeed in cold and austere. His broad-brimmed hat is No. 7¾; his forehead is square and expansive, his eyes dark brown and set in peculiarly shaped orbits. With the help each of the comb of a combs to the left his brown hair, now rapidly growing gray. His eyebrows are heavy and a reddish beard covers most of his face.

HELIOGRAPH SIGNALS.

How the Light of the Sun Is Used to Convey Intelligence to Points Far Distant.

The heliograph has played an important part in the Anglo-Boer war since Gen. Methuen reached the Modder river and since Buller's relieving force arrived in the neighborhood of Ladysmith. The illustration shows Col. Hamilton, of Gen. Buller's staff, operating the little instrument by which the light of the sun is used to convey intelligence to points far distant. Communication between places 25 miles apart can be set up by its use. The mirror used has a small eyehole cut into the quicksilver, through which the distant station is located. The mirror is then moved by means of a screw key, and in answering the key a dot or a dash in the way of a long or short flash, is sent out. These flashes are read by the person at the receiving end with the case of a telegraph operator who is familiar with the code words invented in 1821 by Gauss, who used it as a signal in the measurement of angles. The longer the line the larger must be the disk. The largest line thus far created is 102 miles, which was observed in California, and required a mirror of 77 square inches in area. Ordinary heliotrope used on lines less than 50 miles in length are only about two square inches in area. For the successful operation of any heliograph is necessary. Two hours before sunset is the most favorable time.

PROHIBITION PRINCIPLES.

Platform Adopted by State Convention by the Advocates of Cold Water.

The following is the platform of the Prohibition party of New Jersey, adopted at its recent State convention:

The National Prohibition party of New Jersey, in convention assembled at Trenton this 6th day of May, 1896, presents the following declaration of principles:

We acknowledge Almighty God as the Supreme Ruler in the affairs of men and nations, and believe that the principles of Christianity should apply in all governmental affairs. And we believe that indifference to or the ignoring of this principle must inevitably fail.

We maintain that the traffic in alcoholic liquors is the supreme social, civic, economic and moral evil. It destroys the foundations of good government by debauching the people. It adds greatly to the burden of taxation. It impoverishes and demoralizes the laboring man. It corrupts public officials and political leaders by treachery and bribery, and through its flagrant and open violation of law, it encourages a spirit of anarchy and contempt for all law.

We view with indignation the semblance of the army canteen, in violation of the plainly expressed letter of the law of the land, and as declared by Congress for the regulation of the army, which states "that no officer or private soldier shall be detached to sell intoxicating drinks, as a bartender or otherwise. In any case where a canteen is established, no other person be required or allowed to sell such liquor in any garrison, or for any other purpose, than a non-commissioned officer or private of the military purposes for the United States."

We declare that the nullification of the anti-canteen enactment by the President of the United States, under the hypocritical pretense of following the advice of the late Secretary of War, Attorney General Grisom, in behalf of and at the behest of the Liquor Dealers' Association, demands the stern rebuke of every lover of law, and every friend of good government.

We deplore the crime of the age, the devastation caused by the liquor traffic following the fiery train our newly-acquired territory. We denounce the action of the Senate of the United States in declaring that "bullets are unsane outdated by the will of God in the work of benevolent assimilation of foreign possessions to American institutions" as far more humane than the use of intoxicating liquor for the same purpose as civilization.

We denounce the Republican and Democratic parties as the friends, partners and tools of the organized liquor traffic.

We hold that the ballot of all true citizens should not be denied on account of sex.

That our civil service should be performed by those best qualified to perform its duties. That no political office should not be given as a reward for party service.

We favor the system of the initiative and referendum, giving to the citizens direct the right to enact laws or reject any legislative act.

We denounce the oppression of the toiling masses by treasonable organizations of capital, and recognizing that there are other reforms of great importance, we declare that further advocacy of the liquor traffic is an open door to all other reforms.

As a party that seeks to apply the principles of righteousness to all political affairs, we invite the members of all religious bodies and friends of morality to come to our support at the ballot box.

The Republican executive committee was appointed to fill vacancies, either in the list of electors or delegates. The following resolution was offered by Alexander Heath and carried:

We denounce as un-American, reprehensible and heretofore unknown the recent exercise of a Republican "boss" giving directions for a Republican legislature to pass a law changing the name of the Democratic race track here and pass the Washington Park Bonnet bill, so that the former action of the court might be nullified.

GIFTS AND GIFTS.

Pleasant Ending of the Session of the Grand Jury at Rittenhouse Yesterday.

The presentation of a handsome gold-headed silver cane, set, complete, was served pleasantly by W. T. West, of Roselle, foreman of the last Grand Jury, by his fellow jurymen, was a very pleasant feature of the closing session of the Jury. The presentation speech was made by Councilman Francis Engel, and there was a happy response by Mr. West. Following the speech by Mr. West, Andrew Vandebeek, of this city, a member of the Jury, made a few happy remarks. The silver service was made by J. Wesley Johnson, of this city. Each piece was beautifully engraved. In the centre of the salver was engraved:

Presented
William T. West,
Foreman of Grand Jury.

By the members of Grand Jury of that session as token of respect for the courteous and able manner in which he presided over that body.

Mr. West was not the only one surprised, for the jurors on returning to the court room found a neat package on each desk. Each package contained a handsome Russia leather wallet, the gift of Mr. West. On each wallet was stamped in gold the name of the juror receiving it, with the year and date of presentation.

NEW JERSEY GROWING FAST.

Counting Census to Be Reported to Show a Population of Nearly 2,500,000.

The census soon to be taken is expected to give New Jersey a population of nearly two millions. The population in 1890 was 1,444,933. The development of suburbs, through trolley extensions and other improvements, and the increase of manufactures and the growth of summer resorts, have all drawn people to the State.

The first census was taken in 1727, when there was only ten counties, and New Jersey was divided into the East and West Jersey provinces. The first United States census was taken in 1790. Hunterdon led that in population, with Burlington second. The population of the State was 184,139.

WEDDING WAS OVER: CROWD WAS FOOLED

Only a Few Relatives Witnessed the Lynch-McKeon Nuptials May 23d.

MANY WERE DISAPPOINTED.

SEVERAL HUNDRED WERE WAITING IN THE CHURCH.

But the Bridal Party Went to the Rectory, Where the Ceremony Was Performed, and Had Gone Away Before the Audience Knew It.

A quiet wedding took place Wednesday afternoon at May 23d in the rectory of St. Mary's R. C. church, when Miss Mamie McKeon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. McKeon, of 928 West Front street, and Thomas Lynch were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father John A. Westmas, curate of the church, assisted by Rev. Father Morgan J. O'Connell, rector of St. Ambrose church, New York city.

The bride was gowned in white point d'esprit over white silk, trimmed with white satin. She also wore an aigrette and a rosette of mull and carried bridal roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Kathryn McKeon, as bridesmaid, who wore a gown of white point d'esprit over corn-color silk, and a small white satin toque. She carried mignonette and roses. The groomsman was John P. Powers, of the borough.

Only a few relatives outside of the bridal party witnessed the marriage. There was a look of disappointment on the faces of a vast assemblage that had gathered at the church and was waiting for the bridal party to appear. For fully a half hour previous to the appointed hour people were gathering and they waited until someone appeared at the church and said that the party had gone to the rectory, been married and had gone away. Some would not believe it, while many others did, but the majority took the ruse good-naturedly and said nothing, realizing that the joke was on them.

After the ceremony the party returned to the home of the bride's parents, on West Front street, where a reception was held from 8 until 11 o'clock. During the reception supper was served and a musical programme was enjoyed by the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Lynch were heartily congratulated by their relatives and friends, and many years of success and happiness were wished them. They were the recipients of many costly and handsome presents, including furniture, banquet lamps, china, silverware, etc. After a short wedding trip they will take up their residence on West Fifth street, between Monroe avenue and Prescott place.

Mrs. Lynch is a most estimable young woman and very popular in a large circle of acquaintances. Mr. Lynch is a valued employe of The Daily Press, holding the position of foreman in the press room. They both have the best wishes of their many friends as they enter upon life's journey together.

Among those present at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. John A. McKeon, parents of the bride; John A. McKeon, Jr., Andrew McKeon and Miss Kathryn McKeon, brothers and sister of the bride; Helen Lynch, daughter of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Peter R. VanPelt, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mulvihill, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Flynn, of this city; Rev. Father Morgan J. O'Connell, Miss Tessie Keating, Miss Mamie Lynch, Miss Agnes Adamson, George O'Neil, William Dobbs and Charles Thorn, of New York; Miss Mamie Bradley, Mrs. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. James McKeon, John Bradley, Miss Anna Bunting, Miss Maggie Bunting, Mr. and Mrs. Walton, John Conklin, Arthur Broderick, of Jersey City.

HORSES WILD RUN.

Attached to a Dump Cart Which Suddenly Upset.

A team of horses attached to a dump cart, belonging to Michael Welsh, of West Third street, became frightened this morning on Fifth street, near Madison avenue, by a pin coming out and dumping the load. The driver, Grant Miller, was thrown off and the horses ran down Fifth street at a furious pace. They turned Plainfield avenue and also Third street and ran as far as Grant avenue, where they were caught by Dory Dunlap. No serious damage was done to either horses or cart.

Bought Business Property.

An important sale of business property in this city took place Friday when Patterson Bros., the West Front street tobacco dealers, purchased the property adjoining their property formerly owned by Messrs. Pope and Hubbard. It is said that the price paid was $6,500, which is about $200 a front foot. Just what change will be made by the purchasers is not known, but the property will probably be held as it is for the present.

PREPARING TO WORK FIELD COPPER MINE.

Philadelphia Capitalists Have Secured Rights for Old Mine Near Warrenville.

PUMPING OUT THE SHAFT.

THE WORKINGS ARE SAID TO BE A CENTURY OLD.

Richard Fiske Attempts to Mine Copper There Twenty-five Years Ago and Sunk Much Money in the Effort.

The probable reopening of the old copper mines near Warrenville has set the tongues in that vicinity agog. Although the work is being conducted very quietly and considerable secrecy is maintained concerning the backers of the enterprise, it is now a well-known fact that the scheme is so far under way and that an effort is being made to pump the water out of the old mine in preparation to its future working.

The present prosperous times and the recent improvement in mining machinery are the direct causes of this resumption of activity at the old Field copper mine near Warrenville. The mine itself is over a hundred years old. It was part of an old colonial grant, but was not successful on account of the great cost of extracting the metal. A quarter of a century ago Richard Fields, of Philadelphia, invested a large sum toward opening up the mine. The old shaft was pumped out and greatly extended. Copper was found and in considerable quantities, but the low price of the metal at that time, combined with the crude methods of extracting it, made the enterprise an unsuccessful one and the mine was finally abandoned.

The Field mine is located on the farm now occupied by Rev. George Bowers, pastor of the Countown M. E. church, which is only a quarter of a mile from Warrenville. It's location had nearly been forgotten until recently when it was learned that certain capitalists from Philadelphia were looking for the site of the old mine with a view of reopening it.

There is a large well or shaft sunk fifty feet into the ground from which branch off a series of galleries in all directions. In several of these specimens of rich ore were found. The metal is mixed with a hard trap rock, however, and it has been heretofore found too expensive work to separate it. Now, however, that the great demand for copper has sent the price well up and improved machinery make it possible to extract metal at a much less cost than formerly, it is believed that these copper mines can be carried on as a paying investment.

The Philadelphia capitalists evidently take that view of the matter for they have obtained a lease of the mining rights for the term of years and are preparing for active operations. During the years that the mine has remained inactive, it has filled up with water which will have to be pumped out. Pumps have been established in the old buildings at the entrance to the mine and the water is slowly being lowered in the main shaft.

The prospect of such an important industry near at hand has aroused much interest among the people of Warrenville and that part of the county. The secrecy observed concerning those who are pushing the movement has tended to intensify the curiosity concerning the movement.

There are several other of the old mines in that same part of Somerset county that are said to be equally as valuable as the old Field mine. It has been persistently rumored that some New York and local capitalists were carefully considering the advisability of investigating the old copper mines near Chimney Rock and on the southern side of the first range of the Watchung Mountains.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL PROVED TO BE A PROFITABLE AFFAIR.

Second Night of the Affair Was a Great Success—Names of the Prize Winners.

The second and last night of the strawberry festival in Sangerbund Hall, given under the auspices of the ladies of St. Joseph's church, came to a successful close Friday. The attendance was much larger than on the preceding evening and the refreshment stands had a decided increase of business.

The main topic of the evening was the guessing of the successful candidates for the different prizes, and when Father Brennan arose to announce the winners everyone cheered for their favorite. The winners were as follows: Diamond pin, Miss Lizzie Ryan; gold watch, Miss Lizzie Fitzgerald, and the silver service, Mrs. M. Moran. In the latter contest three ladies who collected a total amount of $115.25, tied for first part. Mrs. Moran collected $115.26. The total net receipts of the fair will be about $500, which is to be placed in the building fund.

The committee to whom credit for the success of the fair is due were Mrs James E. Bailey, chairman; Mrs Herman Burkham, Mrs. Andrew Kenney, Mrs. Edward Ryan, Mrs. David Kenney and Mrs. Charles Faries.

The committee on Collector's bonds reported that they had received Collector E. M. Wood's bond and the securities were as follows: John Kean, Frank Bergen, Edward G. Woodruff, John W. Whelan and Meline W. Halsey. The committee recommended the acceptance of the bond, which was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Scudder offered a resolution that whereas the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company was about to make application to the Board for permission to lay a double track on Chestnut avenue, in the township of Clark, near the tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, that when the application was presented it be referred to the county road committee with power to grant permission, the committee to make such terms as would prove most beneficial to the county. The resolution was adopted.

SANG PATRIOTIC SONGS.

CHAS. L. LEWIS' CONCERT AT MUSIC HALL WAS A GREAT SUCCESS.

Lotus Glee Club, a Chorus of Children and a Chorus of Young Women Took Part.

The more fact that Charles L. Lewis was in charge of the patriotic concert at Music Hall last Monday vouched for its excellence. The hall was fairly well filled with an audience that found much to enjoy and received the various selections with hearty applause.

It was a concert of patriotic and war songs, but between the two parts there was an interlude that included a number of other selections. The chorus of small children, forty-four in all, led by Mr. Lewis, were well trained and sang many of the well-known war songs with spirit. The chorus of young women tried something more difficult in two parts with success.

There is nothing better of its kind than the Lotus Glee Club, composed of George Seymour Lennox, G. Morgan Strickletz, Charles L. Lewis and Edward B. Martindell. The selections by the quartette were fine. All of the men are vocalists of much talent and they have been together so long that they are thoroughly in sympathy. The Negro medley, "He Certainly Was Good to Me," arranged by Fred J. Smith, particularly pleased the audience. There were solos by all the members of the club except Mr. Lewis, Mr. Martindell and Mr. Strickletz found special favor.

Four lads, Masters Shepherd, Brooks, Yaeger and Taylor, gave "Look Out for the Hoodoo Doodoo Man," with blackened faces and startling costumes. They were very clever.

Mrs. Charles L. Lewis accompanied the two choruses. The Lotus Club sang without accompaniment but Frank J. Smith rendered an accompaniment for the solos. The programme concluded with "The Star Spangled Banner" in which the audience joined, everyone standing while the children waved their little American flags. The hall was gay with tri-colored bunting and a profusion of American flags of all sizes.

An Important Witness.

One of the witnesses expected to be used in the new trial which demand hopes to secure for Dr. Kennedy, charged with the murder of Dolly Reynolds, is Andrew M. Sagulas, formerly of this city, whom he was engaged in the livery business. It is said that Mr. Sagulas drove a carriage the night of the murder which carried a man to University place, New York, who was Dr. Kennedy.

WHAT? DID THEY WIN?

CITY HIGH SCHOOL BOYS VICTORIOUS ON THE DIAMOND.

Beat the Borough Boys By Just One Score—Only Eleven Hits Were Got Batted.

A strange thing happened on Martine Common Saturday afternoon. For the first time this season the Plainfield High School boys managed to win a baseball game. The explanation is easy. They forgot during the five innings that were played, to get rattled. The result was a victory over the North Plainfield High School by a score of 10 to 9.

The city team settled right down to work. In the second inning they scored five runs. The North Plainfielders were way off their usual form. While Armstrong pitched a good game he was given wretched support.

In the third three singles and two bases on ball with a few errors landed six runs for the boroughites. The runs were made by good stick work rather than on errors. Squires pitched a fair game and was given good support.

In the fifth inning the North Plainfielders became demoralized. Four runs came in and two of the bases were filled with none out. Then George, captain of the North Plainfield team, agreed to call the game.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		NORTH PLAINFIELD.
F. Moore, c.		Conroy, c.
Armstrong, p.		Squires, p.
Hubbard, 1b.		Hamilton, 1b.

BIG TROLLEY COMBINE.

RIKER COMPANY SEEKING TO MAKE AGREEMENT WITH SENATOR KEAN.

Conference Held Saturday and Plans Discussed for a Consolidation of Interests.

Senator John Kean and Fred L. Hedditter, representing the Elizabeth Street Railway Company, and Chandler W. Riker, Colonel E. W. Hine and Senator McCarter, representing the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company, met in conference in Mr. Kean's office in Elizabeth Saturday morning.

They discussed plans for a combination of interests, so far as to arrange for the Elizabeth and Westfield road to run its cars over the Green Line in Elizabeth to connect with the Staten Island ferry, and also for trolley connections between Elizabeth and Rahway.

Nothing definite was decided upon, and Senator Kean left for Washington with the intention of returning to Elizabeth June 18th, when the negotiations will be resumed between the companies.

Chandler W. Riker said the object of the conference is to make a perfect chain of connections between Jersey City and Trenton.

HOTEL SET ON FIRE.

Bold Attempt to Burn McVey's Hotel Shortly After 1 o'Clock This Afternoon.

A deliberate and bold attempt to set McVey's hotel on fire took place shortly after 1 o'clock Saturday a. m. A strange bicyclist took dinner in the restaurant and then asked to take a bath. He was shown the bath room on the second floor. That was the last seen of him.

Some time after that it was noticed that sparks were falling from the roof on to the awning in front of the hotel. A hasty investigation was made and it was found that the lattice work on the rear balcony had been sprinkled with alcohol and set on fire. The flames had consumed considerable of the lattice work and were burning fiercely when discovered by the lamplighter.

A few pails of water put out the flames. Had they burned unnoticed a little while longer they would probably have got beyond control.

An empty alcohol bottle was laying on the balcony where it had been dropped by the incendiary.

Important Transfer.

Another important transfer of valuable piece of property has just been made through J. F. Emmons. The property in question is the building on North avenue, running through to Second street and occupied by Horne's livery. It was traded by the owner, Dan S. Roberts, for two houses, No. 30 Willow avenue and 15 Prospect place, which belonged to Mrs. Julia Peck, of New York.

Will Get Their Uniforms.

The St. Mary's Ball Club members are jubilant over the result of their recent dance, which netted them $35. There will be enough remaining from this after the suits are purchased to equip the nine with a new set of supplies.

POLICE AND THEIR FRIENDS AT DINNER.

Banquet of the Superior Officers Association Was Held Monday Afternoon.

PLEASANT TIME FOR ALL.

CHORD OF GOOD FELLOWSHIP SHOWN IN A CONGENIAL WAY.

Affair Given at the Hotel Waldorf — Forty Guests Were Present, Many of Whom Were From Out of Town.

Whenever a man is recorded as a guest of a police it is presumed that he has been at variance with the law of land and is duly humiliated and punished. There are, however, exceptions to every rule, and one of these was demonstrated in fine style Monday afternoon when the Superior Police Officers' Association of Union and Middlesex Counties held its meeting in this city and acted as hosts for a number of gentlemen more or less distinguished in the walks of life.

As in all organized bodies of men, there is a strong chord of goodfellowship running through the guardians of peace in the cities of the two counties whose interests and well-fare require regular police forces, and in the Superior Police Officers' Association it finds a medium of displaying itself in a congenial and pleasant manner at the business and social affairs of the organization. The meetings of the association are held alternately in the cities in which the membership is found, and Monday it was the turn of the Plainfield members to do the honors. The latter acted as hosts with a fine appreciation of their duties and provided one of the best gatherings of policemen and their friends that has been held in the two counties.

The dinner was given at the Hotel Waldorf on East Front street. Henry Windham, the proprietor, always well-versed in knowing just how to do things which he undertakes, provided a dinner that was excellent in all respects. After the material part of the affair had been disposed of, Chief Tenney, of Elizabeth, president of the Association, opened the "feast of reason and flow of wit," which was to follow, in a few pleasant words. Once the speech-making was commenced there was no end of it till nearly all the forty guests gathered around the table had been called upon for a few words. With so many different sections represented around the festive board, there was naturally an extensive interchange of ideas and compliments, for which Plainfield and its police force came in for a good share.

Plainfield's popular humorist, John Carney, was present and gave several of his inimitable German dialect stories, in which he mixed up some laughable references to some of those present. Robert Schwartz, of Elizabeth, also responded with several stories and songs that were of an entertaining character.

The affair was given under the direction of Chief Grant, Sergeant Kiely and Roundsmen Frederickson and Flynn, of the local force.

The following were those present:

Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Councilman R. I. Tolles, Councilman J. F. Randle, Secretary of the Common Council Smith, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray, Andrew McCardell, John Kenney, Albert Demarest, Chief of Police Grant, Sergeant Kiely, Roundsman Frederickson and Flynn, Patrolman McCarty, John Carney, George Tobin, W. W. St. John, M. F. Eldecton, of Plainfield; Chief of Police Tenney, Lieut. Peters, Sergeant Gerstag, Sergeant Ellsinger, Detective Decker, Lieut.-Col. D. F. Collins, Captain Long, President of the Council F. J. Ryan, Michael Geanon, Robert Sweets, Jacob Glaser, of Elizabeth; Chief Parks, Sergeant Mulligan, Street Commissioner Kruger, Freeholder George Cummings, Water Commissioner Burke, of Perth Amboy; Mayor Holmes, Chief Wright, Clerk Ryno, Charles Read, of Rahway; Joseph Fields, Bound Brook.

SCHOOL DAYS ARE COMING TO AN END.

Arrangements Being Made in North Plainfield for the Graduation Exercises.

MUSIC HALL RESERVED.

ONLY THOSE HOLDING TICKETS WILL BE ENTITLED TO SEATS.

Each Graduate of the Class Will be Entitled to Thirty Tickets to Give to Friends—Class Day Exercises One Week Before.

Only a short time now remains before the borough public schools will close for the summer vacation, and affairs are gradually shaping themselves toward the end of the 180 days of school. The commencement day has been fixed for June 23d, one day after that of the Plainfield schools. This is due to the fact that in the borough the scholars have had a little more vacation during the year, and the term will have to extend to June 23d to get in the set number of days.

There is to be some changes this year in the general arrangement for the closing exercises. There will be no orchestra to furnish music as heretofore, but instead a chorus of school children, numbering 125 from the High School and Grammar department, will sing selections appropriate to the occasion. Charles L. Lewis, who has charge of the music, will train and direct the musical programme. The old custom of an orchestra has become very tiresome, and this will be appreciated no doubt.

After careful consideration it has been decided by those in authority to reserve the entire seating capacity of Music Hall, and not allow any part of it to be free without a ticket. A sufficient number of tickets have been provided, and these will be generously distributed among those who desire them. Each graduate will be entitled to thirty tickets, while the teachers, members of the Board of Education and Superintendent Wightman will have a number for distribution. The idea in reserving the hall is to keep that element out that always attend such occasions for no other purpose than to make a nuisance of themselves and annoy others. Persons who desire to attend the exercises will have no trouble in securing tickets.

As stated a few days ago Prof. John Stewart, of Lehigh University, will make the address at the commencement. He is a talented speaker of much note. In addition to this the Board of Education hope to have the president of the State Board of Education, James L. Hayes, of Newark, present the diplomas to the graduates. He was secured for last year, but death in his family prevented his attendance.

Class Day exercises will probably be held in the week before commencement in the High School. The arrangements for this event is entirely in the hands of Fred Bach, president, and various members of the class. The graduates reception will be held the same evening of the commencement at 10 o'clock at the Park Club. Douglass Drake, president of the Alumni Association, has this matter in charge and is now perfecting arrangements for it.

There seems to be no doubt but what the 1900 class is one of the strongest that has graduated in recent years. This seems to be the opinion of many who should know. The class has done remarkably good work which is a source of gratification and pleasure to the instructors.

HEREDITARY INSANITY.

Jane Richards Is Having Mad and Has to be Sent to Insane Asylum and Trenton.

The hereditary streak of insanity in the Shoemaker family of South Plainfield has claimed Jane Richards as the latest victim. She was taken to the State Hospital for the Insane at Trenton. The woman was left at the county jail, New Brunswick, by Overseer of the Poor John C. Morris, of Piscataway township, who had received her from her friends.

At the jail Warden Messler had his hands full with the woman who shouted and stormed most of the time.

After the physicians has examined her an order was made out for her commitment to the insane asylum and Monday morning Constable Godney, of Metuchen, with Overseer Morris, took her to Trenton.

The woman was formerly a Miss Shoemaker, and is the aunt of Albert Shoemaker, who went crazy last year and shot his sister-in-law.

Filling in New Street.

That portion of land between Craig place and Green brook which will be an extension of Duer street, is now being filled in so as to bring it up to a level with the city side. There is about nine feet of filling to be done.

To Manufacture Excelsior.

Within a short time the work of manufacturing the extension of Duer street to Green brook will be started. The officials hope to have the street opened the latter part of July.

NEW ROAD TO BE OPENED

FREEHOLDERS DECIDE AGAINST THE OBJECTORS.

Street Will Run From a Point Near Charles Dorr's Residence, in Greenland, to Brightwood Avenue.

A decision has been made in the dispute over the proposed opening of the street which is to run from Greenland to Brightwood avenue. During the early part of last fall the surveyors of highway from Westfield and Fanwood met for the purpose of considering the advisability of opening a road from a point near Charles Dorr's residence, in Greenland, through to Brightwood avenue.

Several of the property owners appeared before the meeting and opposed the plan. The surveyors of highways, after hearing both sides, decided that the improvement would benefit the majority, so they decided to have the street opened. The opposition filed a caveat against the work. It was carried to the Board of Freeholders and a committee of six was appointed and met in Westfield Friday of Week before last for the purpose of locating it the case. The committee also drove over the property through which it was proposed to run the road.

The committee, after consultation, decided that the proposed improvement was a just one and that the road should be opened.

This will probably settle the dispute to the satisfaction of all. The committee appointed by the Board was composed of Director Hubbard, Freeholders Robison, Adams, Scudder, King and Cady.

Notice to Lay Sidewalks.

There was a meeting of the street committee of the Borough Council last Friday when arrangements was made to send out notices to property owners notifying them to lay sidewalks. The usual thirty days time will be given. It is the purpose of the committee to do this work systematically, and in this way they hope to cover the borough within a reasonable time.

An Honor Pupil.

In recently publishing the names of the graduates of the Borough Public High School the name of Frank Bach, as an honor pupil, was unintentionally omitted. Mr. Bach deserves special mention. Not once since he has been in the High School has he gone below 90 per cent. in his studies, and is one of the most ambitious students in the school.

Coming Home From Cuba.

Dolph Giles, of this city, who is a marine on the U. S. S. Cruiser New York, which has been in Cuba for sometime past, is expected to arrive at Newport in a short time. Mr. Giles thinks he will have an opportunity to visit his home on the return trip.

Hospital For Inspector.

The Borough Board of Health has very wisely and considerately purchased a bicycle for Health Inspector William R. Pangborn, for his use performing the work of his office.

New Tenor Soloist.

Another tenor soloist has been engaged by the music committee at the Crescent Avenue church in place of the one who was engaged at first and for the new regime.

Census Taking Commences Friday.

The enumerators for the twelfth National census will begin their work Friday. There will be twenty-eight questions asked each person.
